Nothing is more certain than that worlds on worlds, and spheres on spheres, stretch behind and beyond the actually seen.

Ibid. Chap. 7

Every new movement or manifestation of human activity, when unfamiliar to people's minds, is sure to be misrepresented and misunderstood.

Ibid. Chap. 8, Note

In Man, the positive content of religion is the instinctive sense — whether conscious or subconscious — of an inner unity and continuity with the world around. This is the stuff out of which religion is made.

Pagan and Christian Creeds. Chap. 4

The first condition of social happiness and prosperity must be the sense of the Common Life.

There is a presence and an influence in Nature and the Open which expands the mind and causes brigand cares and worries to drop off — whereas in confined places foolish and futile thoughts of all kinds swarm like microbes and cloud and conceal the soul.

[1844–1929]

Friends, whom the softest whistle of my call
Brought to my side in love that knew no doubt,
Would I not seek to cross the jasper wall
If haply I might find you there "without"?

Without Are Dogs.[1] Stanza 3

Of all the words the Evangelists record,
To comfort souls perplexèd and distressed,
This ever seems to me divinest, best —
The thought that Peter spoke — "Thou knowest, Lord."

Sonnet, Thou Knowest

Come, holy fire, consume this clay,
Ashes to ashes now return;
An outworn garment here we lay,
As on thine Altar, Lord, to burn.

Cremation Hymn. Stanza 1

Not to corruption and the worm
Our shrinking spirits yield the claim,
But give this well-beloved form
The cleanly burial of the flame.

Ibid. Stanza 2

From duty's path, however steep, we ask
For no ill-timed release;
Only — for strength to finish well our task —
Grant us thy peace!

A Prayer. Stanza 6

Bragging of crests and pedigrees —
And all most noble through and through!
Cadets of Gascony are these With Carbon de Castel Jaloux.

Gasconade. Stanza 1

[1844–1928]

He walks with God upon the hills!
And sees, each morn, the world arise
New-bathed in light of paradise.

The Poet

It must be sweet, O thou my dead, to lie
With hands that folded are from every task,
Sealed with the seal of that great mystery,
The lips that nothing answer, nothing ask,
The lifelong struggle ended.

Song

Through love to light! Oh wonderful the way
That leads from darkness to the perfect day!
After-song

I am a woman — therefore I may not Call to him, cry to him,
Fly to him,
Bid him delay not.
A Woman's Thought

How to the singer comes the song?
How to the summer fields
Come flowers? How yields Darkness to happy morn? How doth the night
Bring stars?
How to the Singer Comes the Song? Stanza 4

This house that looks to east, to west,
This, dear one, is our home, our rest;
Yonder the stormy sea, and here
The woods that bring the sunset near.
The Woods that Bring the Sunset Near. Stanza 3

What is a sonnet? 'Tis a pearly shell
That murmurs of the far-off murmuring sea;
A precious jewel carved most curiously;
It is a little picture painted well.
The Sonnet

This is the poet's triumph, his high doom!
After life's stress —
For him the silent, dark, o'ershadowing tomb
Is shadowless.
And this the miracle and mystery —
In that he gives
His soul away, magnificently free,
By this he lives.
On Reading of a Poet's Death

I count my time by times that I meet thee;
These are my yesterdays, my morrows, noons
And nights; these my old moons and my new moons.

GERARD MANLEY HOPKINS[1]
[1844–1889]

The world is charged with the grandeur of God. . . .
There lives the dearest freshness deep down things.
God's Grandeur

Glory be to God for dappled things —
For skies as couple-colored as a brindled cow;
For rose-moles all in stipple upon trout that swim.
Pied Beauty

Elected Silence, sing to me
And beat upon my whorlèd ear,
Pipe me to pastures still and be
The music that I care to hear.
The Habit of Perfection

With mercy round and round
As if with air.

World-mothering air, air wild,
Wound with thee, in thee isled,
Fold home, fast fold thy child.

Around; up above, what wind-walks!
what lovely behavior
Of silk-sack clouds! Has wilder, willful-wavier Meal-drift molded ever and melted across skies?
Hurrahing in Harvest

I have asked to be Where no storms come,
Where the green swell is in the havens dumb
And out of the swing of the sea.
Heaven-Haven

I kiss my hand
To the stars, lovely-asunder
Starlight, wafting him out of it; and Glow, glory in thunder. . . .

Since though he is under the world's splendour and wonder,
His mystery must be instressed, stressed;
For I greet him the days I meet him, and bless when I understand.

The Wreck of the Deutschland. Stanza 5

To lift up the hands in prayer gives God glory, but a man with a dungfork in his hand, a woman with a slop-pail, give him glory too. He is so great that all things give him glory if you mean they should. So then, my brethren, live.

An Address on St. Ignatius

ANDREW LANG
[1844–1912]

My mind is gay but my soul is melancholy.

Quoted by MRS. LANG in Preface, The Poetical Works of Andrew Lang

St. Andrews by the northern sea,
A haunted town it is to me!
A little city, worn and gray,
The gray North Ocean girds it round.

Almae Matres (St. Andrews, 1862; Oxford, 1865). Stanza 1

You can cover a great deal of country in books.

To the Gentle Reader. Stanza 5

Such is the fate of borrowed books: they're lost,
Or not the book returneth, but its ghost!

From Colletet

Here stand my books, line upon line
They reach the roof, and row by row,
They speak of faded tastes of mine,
And things I did, but do not, know.

Ballade of His Books. Stanza 1

The watches of the night reveal
The books that never can be mine!

Ballade of the Unattainable. Stanza 3

One gift the fairies gave me: (three They commonly bestowed of yore)
The love of books, the golden key
That opens the enchanted door.

Ballade of the Bookworm. Stanza 2

When others fail him, the wise man looks
To the sure companionship of books.

Old Friends

Prince, you may storm and ban —
Joe Millers are a pest,
Suppress me if you can!
I am a Merry Jest!

Ballade of the Primitive Jest. Envoy

Why, why are rhymes so rare to love?

Ballade of Difficult Rhymes

There's a joy without canker or cark, There's a pleasure eternally new,
'Tis to gloat on the glaze and the mark
Of china that's ancient and blue.

Ballade of Blue China. Stanza 1

Here's a pot with a cot in a park
In a park where the peach-blossoms blew;
Where the lovers eloped in the dark,
Lived, died, and were changed into two Bright birds that eternally flew Through the boughs of the may, as they sang;
'Tis a tale was undoubtedly true
In the reign of the Emperor Hwang.

Ibid. Stanza 3

We marvel, now we look behind:
Life's more amusing than we thought!

Ballade of Middle Age. Stanza 1

Prince, 'tis a melancholy lay!
For youth, for life we both regret!
How fair they seem, how far away;
With Aucassin and Nicolete.

Ballade of Aucassin. Envoy

The windy lights of Autumn flare:
I watch the moonlit sails go by;
I marvel how men toil and fare,
The weary business that they ply!
Their voyaging is vanity,
And fairy gold is all their gain,
And all the winds of winter cry,
"My Love returns no more again."

Ballade of Autumn. Stanza 2

I'd leave all the hurry, the noise, and the fray,
For a house full of books, and a garden of flowers.

Ballade of True Wisdom. Stanza 3

Sleep, that giv'st what Life denies,
Shadowy bounties and supreme,

Bring the dearest face that flies
Following darkness like a dream!
Ballade of the Dream. Envoy

O bargains in books that they send us,
Ye come through the Ivory Gate!
Ballade of the Real and Ideal. Stanza 2

So gladly, from the songs of modern speech
Men turn, and see the stars, and feel the free
Shrill wind beyond the close of heavy flowers;
And, through the music of the languid hours,
They hear like ocean on a western beach
The surge and thunder of the Odyssey.
Sonnet, The Odyssey

The Angler hath a jolly life
Who by the rail runs down,
And leaves his business and his wife,
And all the din of town.
The wind down stream is blowing straight,
And nowhere cast can he:
Then lo, he doth but sit and wait
In kindly company.
The Contented Angler. Stanza 1

When we have cut each other's throats
And robbed each other's land;
And turned, and changed, and lost our coats,
Till progress is at stand;
When every "programme's" been gone through
This good old world will wake anew!
An Aspiration. Stanza 1

A land where newspapers were dumb
From scandal and from scare.[1]
Ibid. Stanza 6

Why ladies read what they do read
Is a thing that no man may explain.
A Remonstrance with the Fair. Stanza 1

From the damp sheiling on the draggled island
Mountains divide you, and no end of seas.
But, though your heart is genuinely Highland,
Still, you're in luck to be away from these![1]
To Fiona, Parody of Canadian Boat Song

Had cigarettes no ashes,
And roses ne'er a thorn,
The big trout would not ever Escape into the river.
A Highly Valuable Chain of Thoughts. Stanza 2

We meet him first in Homer's verse,
The dog by the Aegean seas;
He barks at strangers, ay, and worse,
He bites! We learn, in language terse,
That even Argos has the curse
Of fleas![2]
The Friend of Man. Stanza 3

[1] In 1895, a New York paper was carrying a series of comic strips, "Hogan's Alley," by Richard Felton Outcault [1863–1928]. In 1896, a rival paper engaged the artist to begin a new series portraying "The Yellow Kid." The quarrel of the two newspapers over the right to run the cartoons, together with the similarity in the manner in which the two newspapers displayed sensational news, led to the coining of the term, "Yellow Journalism." — Condensed from The New York Sun, May 15, 1898

[1] From the lone sheiling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas —
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.
Canadian Boat Song, St. 2

This poem appeared in Noctes Ambrosiana, No. 46, in Blackwood's Magazine, Vol. 26, P. 400, Sept., 1829. It is generally credited to John Galt [1779–1839], but John Wilson ("Christopher North"), who won the first Newdigate Prize, founded in 1805, has been suggested as the author. John Gibson Lockhart, son-in-law of Sir Walter Scott, noted, on a copy of the poem in his own handwriting, that the song had been sent to him by a friend in Upper Canada. Galt, author of Annals of the Parish, was in Canada in 1824 and 1826. The poem was likewise found in the handwriting of Hugh Montgomerie [1739–1819], twelfth Earl of Eglinton, ascribed to a Gaelic origin.

Robert Louis Stevenson misquotes the second stanza of the song in The Silverado Squatters, Chap. 4. Joseph Chamberlain, the British statesman, gave Stevenson's version in a speech at Inverness.

A History of Criticism

It is the first duty of the novelist to let himself be read — anything else that he gives you is a bonus, a trimming, a dessert.

History of the English Novel

I have never tried to be in the fashion for the sake of being in it, and seldom, I think, to be out of it for the sake of being out of it. Logic and history have been the only external guides I have accepted in temporal things, except where pure taste has reigned alone.

Notes on a Cellar Book. Preface

When they [wines] were good they pleased my sense, cheered my spirits, improved my moral and intellectual powers, besides enabling me to confer the same benefits on other people.

Ibid.

Men will try to persuade themselves, or at least others, that they read poetry because it is a criticism of life, because it expresses the doubts and fears and thoughts and hopes of the time, because it is a substitution for religion, because it is a relief from serious work, because and because and because. As a matter of fact, they (that is to say, those of them who like it generally) read it because they like it, because it communicates an experience of half-sensual, half-intellectual pleasure to them.

Corrected Impressions.
Tennyson

R. L. SHARPE

Each is given a bag of tools,
A shapeless mass,
A book of rules;
And each must make,
Ere life is flown,
A stumbling-block
Or a stepping-stone.

Stumbling-Block or Stepping-Stone. Stanza 2

ARABELLA EUGENIA SMITH
[1845–1916]

If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face,
Before they laid it in its resting place,

And deem that death had left it almost fair.
Stanza 1

Keep not your kisses for my dead, cold
brow;
The way is lonely, let me feel them now.
Ibid. Stanza 4

When dreamless rest is mine, I shall not need
The tenderness for which I long to-night.
Ibid.

CHARLES WILLIAM STUBBS
[1845–1912]

I sat alone with my conscience
In a place where time had ceased,
And we talked of my former living
In the land where the years increased.
Conscience and Future Judgment [1876]

The ghost of forgotten actions
Came floating before my sight,
And things that I thought were dead things
Were alive with a terrible might.
Ibid.

To sit alone with my conscience
Will be judgment enough for me.[2]

JOHN BANISTER TABB
[1845–1909]

When Christ was taken from the rood,
One thorn upon the ground,
Still moistened with the Precious Blood,
An early robin found,
And wove it crosswise in his nest,
Where, lo, it reddened all his breast![1]
Robin Redbreast

The ghost am I
Of winds that die
Alike on land or sea.
The Fog. Stanza 1

No more the battle or the chase
The phantom tribes pursue,
But each in its accustomed place
The Autumn hails anew;
And still from solemn councils set
On every hill and plain,
The smoke of many a calumet
Ascends to heaven again.
Indian Summer

Before a clock was in the tower
Or e'er a watch was worn,
I knew of night the passing hour
And prophesied the morn;
To man of every age and clime
The oldest chronicler of time.
The Cock

How many an acorn falls to die
For one that makes a tree!
How many a heart must pass me by
For one that cleaves to me!
Compensation. Stanza 1

Out of the dusk a shadow,
Then a spark;
Out of the cloud a silence,
Then a lark;
Out of the heart a rapture,
Then a pain;
Out of the dead, cold ashes,
Life again.
Evolution

A little Boy of heavenly birth,
But far from home to-day,
Comes down to find His ball, the earth,
That sin has cast away.
O comrades, let us one and all
Join in to get Him back His ball!
Out of Bounds

With locks of gold to-day;
To-morrow silver-gray;
Then blossom-bald. Behold,
O man, thy fortune told!
The Dandelion

Why should I stay? Nor seed nor fruit have I,

JAMES TERRY WHITE
[1845–1920]

And when I face the dark, and must resign
Love's tender, human touch; must disentwine
Its dear, detaining clasp; when fears depress,
Those mortal fears I cannot quite repress,
For all my faith and trust — O Love divine,
Hold thou my hands!

Hold Thou My Hands. Stanza 3

If thou of fortune be bereft
And in thy store there be but left
Two loaves, sell one and with the dole
Buy hyacinths to feed thy soul.

Every morn is the world made new.[2]

New Every Morning. Stanza 1

The tasks are done and the tears are shed.
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing that night has shed.

Mete Out My Loneliness

Praying and sighing through the London streets
While my heart beats
To do some miracle, when suddenly
At curve of Regent Circus I espy,
Set 'mid a jeweller's trays of spangle-glitter,
A tiny metal insect-pin, a fly.
This utter trifle for my love I buy,
And thinking of it on her breast
My heart has rest.

[1849–1919]

Speck in cornea, 50¢.

Entry in his account-book, first fee as a practicing physician. From Life of Sir William Osler by Harvey Cushing, Vol. I, Chap. 6

After all, there is no such literature as a Dictionary.

Life of Sir William Osler. Vol. I, Chap. 11

The desire to take medicine is perhaps the greatest feature which distinguishes man from animals.

Ibid. Chap. 14

This is yet the childhood of the world, and a supine credulity is still the most charming characteristic of man.

Ibid.

We are here to add what we can to, not to get what we can from, Life.[1]

Ibid.

To have striven, to have made an effort, to have been true to certain ideals — this alone is worth the struggle.

Ibid. Chap. 16

Humanity has but three great enemies: fever, famine and war; of these by far the greatest, by far the most terrible, is fever.

Ibid.

Though a little one, the master-word [Work] looms large in meaning. It is the open sesame to every portal, the great equalizer in the world, the true philosopher's stone which transmutes all the base metal of humanity into gold.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 22

Things cannot always go your way. Learn to accept in silence the minor aggravations, cultivate the gift of taciturnity and consume your own smoke [3] with an extra draught of hard work, so that those about you may not be annoyed with the dust and soot of your complaints.

Ibid.

We are here not to get all we can out of life for ourselves, but to try to make the lives of others happier.

Ibid.

Take the sum of human achievement in action, in science, in art, in literature — subtract the work of the men above forty, and while we should miss great treasures, even priceless treasures, we would practically be where we are to-day. . . . The effective, moving, vitalizing work of the world is done between the ages of twenty-five and forty.[1]

Life of Sir William Osler. Vol. I, Chap. 24

My second fixed idea is the uselessness of men above sixty years of age, and the incalculable benefit it would be in commercial, political, and in professional life if, as a matter of course, men stopped work at this age.

Ibid.

In that charming novel, "The Fixed Period," [by] Anthony Trollope, . . . the plot hinges upon the admirable scheme of a college into which at sixty men retired for a year of contemplation before a peaceful departure by chloroform. That incalculable benefits might follow such a scheme is apparent to anyone who, like myself, is nearing the limit, and who has made a careful study of the calamities which may befall men during the seventh and eighth decades.[2]

Ibid.

Nothing will sustain you more potently than the power to recognize in your humdrum routine, as perhaps it may be thought, the true poetry of life — the poetry of the commonplace, of the ordinary man, of the plain, toil-worn woman, with their loves and their joys, their sorrows and their griefs.

Ibid. (The Student Life)

Lift up one hand to heaven and thank your stars if they have given you the proper sense to enable you to appreciate the inconceivably droll situations in which we catch our fellow creatures.

Ibid.

I have three personal ideals. One, to do the day's work well and not to bother about to-morrow. . . . The second ideal has been to act the Golden Rule, as far as in me lay, toward my professional brethren and toward the patients committed to my care. And the third has been to cultivate such a measure of equanimity as would enable me to bear success with humility, the affection of my friends without pride, and to be ready when the day of sorrow and grief came to meet it with the courage befitting a man.

Life of Sir William Osler. (Farewell Dinner, May 2, 1905)

Throw all the beer and spirits into the Irish Channel, the English Channel, and the North Sea for a year, and people in England would be infinitely better. It would certainly solve all the problems with which the philanthropists, the physicians, and the politicians have to deal.[1]

Ibid. Vol. II, Chap. 26

No man is really happy or safe without a hobby, and it makes precious little difference what the outside interest may be — botany, beetles or butterflies, roses, tulips or irises; fishing, mountaineering or antiquities — anything will do so long as he straddles a hobby and rides it hard.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 29

Nothing in life is more wonderful than faith — the one great moving force which we can neither weigh in the balance nor test in the crucible.[3]

Ibid. Chap. 30

In the life of a young man the most essential thing for happiness is the gift of friendship.

Ibid. Chap. 31

No bubble is so iridescent or floats longer than that blown by the successful teacher.

It is one of the greatest blessings that so many women are so full of tact. The calamity happens when a woman who has all the other riches of life just lacks that one thing.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 33

It is the prime duty of a woman of this terrestrial world to look well. Neatness is the asepsis of clothes.

Ibid.

The quest for righteousness is Oriental, the quest for knowledge, Occidental.[3]

Ibid. Chap. 34

In science the credit goes to the man who convinces the world, not to the man to whom the idea first occurs.[4]

But together at their play
Age and Youth are reconciled.
Shuffle-Shoon and Amber-Locks. Stanza 1

Mother tells me "Happy dreams!" and takes away the light,
An' leaves me lyin' all alone an' seein' things at night.
Seein' Things. Stanza 1

Over the hills and far away,
A little boy steals from his morning play
And under the blossoming apple-tree
He lies and he dreams of the things to be.
Over the Hills and Far Away. Stanza 1

That the troubles of the little boy pursue the man through life;
That here and there along the course wherein we hoped to glide
Some envious hand has sprinkled ashes just to spoil our slide!
Ashes on the Slide. Stanza 5

Strive not to hew your path through life — it really doesn't pay;
Be sure the salve of flattery soaps all you do and say;

Herein the only royal road to fame and fortune lies:
Put not your trust in vinegar — molasses catches flies!

Uncle Eph. Stanza 4

And speechless pride and rapture ineffable shall fill
The beatific bosom of Penn Yan Bill.

Penn Yan Bill. Stanza 9

The sturdiest peak is Fame's!
And there be many on its very height,
Who strut in pride and vaunt their empty claims,
While those poor human asses who delight
To place them there have unremembered names!

Reminiscences of a Student's Life. Chap. 2

Old age, believe me, is a good and pleasant time. It is true that you are gently shouldered off the stage, but then you are given such a comfortable front stall as spectator, and, if you have really played your part, you are more content to sit down and watch.

Ibid. Conclusion

Life does not cease when you are old, it only suffers a rich change. You go on loving, only your love, instead of a burning, fiery furnace, is the mellow glow of an autumn sun.

ROSE HENNIKER HEATON

She answered by return of post
The invitation of her host.
She caught the train she said she would,
And changed at junctions as she should.
She brought a light and smallish box
And keys belonging to the locks.

The Perfect Guest

She left no little things behind Excepting loving thoughts and kind.

HENRY CABOT LODGE
[1850–1924]

New England has a harsh climate, a barren soil, a rough and stormy coast, and yet we love it, even with a love passing that of dwellers in more favored regions.

Address, New England Society of New York [December 22, 1884]

Of "Americanism" of the right sort we cannot have too much. Mere vaporing and boasting become a nation as little as a man. But honest, outspoken pride and faith in our country are infinitely better and more to be respected than the cultivated reserve which sets it down as ill-bred and in bad taste ever to refer to our country except by way of deprecation, criticism, or general negation.

Ibid.

Let every man honor and love the land of his birth and the race from which he springs and keep their memory green. It is a pious and honorable duty. But let us have done with British-Americans and Irish-Americans and German-Americans, and so on, and all be Americans. . . . If a man is going to be an American at all let him be so without any qualifying adjectives; and if he is going to be something else, let him drop the word American from his personal description.[1]

The Day We Celebrate (Forefathers' Day), Address, New England Society of Brooklyn [December 21, 1888]

There was no hour down to the end when he would not turn aside from everything else to preach the doctrine of Americanism, of the principles and the faith upon which American government rested, and which all true Americans should wear in their heart of hearts. He was a great patriot, a great man; above all, a great American. His country was the ruling, mastering passion of his life from the beginning even unto the end.

ALICE MEYNELL
[1850–1922]

My heart shall be thy garden. Come, my own,
Into thy garden; thine be happy hours
Among my fairest thoughts, my tallest flowers,
From root to crowning petal thine alone.

Sonnet, The Garden

She walks — the lady of my delight —
A shepherdess of sheep.
Her flocks are thoughts. She keeps them white;
She guards them from the steep.

The Shepherdess. Stanza 1

I must not think of thee; and, tired yet strong,
I shun the thought that lurks in all delight —
The thought of thee — and in the blue heaven's height
And in the sweetest passage of a song.

Sonnet, Renouncement

With the first dream that comes with the first sleep
I run, I run, I am gathered to thy heart.

Sonnet, Renouncement

O heavenly colour, London town
Has blurred it from her skies;
And, hooded in an earthly brown,
Unheaven'd the city lies.

November Blue. Stanza 1

Blue comes to earth, it walks the street,
It dyes the wide air through;
A mimic sky about their feet,
The throng go crowned with blue.

Ibid. Stanza 2

It is principally for the sake of the leg that a change in the dress of man is so much to be desired. . . . The leg is the best part of the figure . . . and the best leg is the man's. Man should no longer disguise the long lines, the strong forms, in those lengths of piping or tubing that are of all garments the most stupid.[1]

Lay Morals

To be honest, to be kind — to earn a little and spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not to be embittered, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation — above all, on the same grim conditions, to keep friends with himself — here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

A Christmas Sermon

Chiefs! Our road is not built to last a thousand years, yet in a sense it is. When a road is once built, it is a strange thing how it collects traffic, how every year as it goes on, more and more people are found to walk thereon, and others are raised up to repair and perpetuate it, and keep it alive.[1]

Letter to Theodore Roosevelt [1917]

The rain had cleared and the sun poured down upon us, as in procession, headed by the acolytes and priests, we bore the coffin to the grave. A semicircle of Scotch firs formed, as it were, a little harbour for him. The breeze blew freshly, south-west by south a little westerly — a good wind, as I thought, to steer up Channel by, and one that he who would no longer feel it on his cheek, looking aloft to see if all the sails were drawing properly, must have been glad to carry when he struck soundings, passing the Wolf Rock or the Smalls after foul weather in the Bay.

Handsomely, as he who lay in it might well have said, they lowered the coffin down. The priest had left his Latin and said a prayer or two in English, and I was glad of it, for English surely was the speech the Master Mariner most loved, and honoured in the loving with new graces of his own.

As the moon is more interested in the earth than in any other thing, there is always some woman more interested in a man's mind than in anything else, who is willing to follow it sentence by sentence.

It is the plain duty of every Irishman to disassociate himself from all memories of Ireland — Ireland being a fatal disease, fatal to Englishmen and doubly fatal to Irishmen.

Ibid. Chap. 11

Death is in such strange contradiction to life that it is no matter for wonder that we recoil from it, and turn to remembrances, and find recompense in perceiving that those we have loved live in our memories as intensely as if they were still before our eyes.

Introduction

HENRY VAN DYKE
[1852–1933]

If all the skies were sunshine,
Our faces would be fain
To feel once more upon them
The cooling plash of rain.

If All the Skies. Stanza 1

Men have dulled their eyes with sin,
And dimmed the light of heaven with doubt,
And built their temple-walls to shut thee in,
And framed their iron creeds to shut thee out.

God of the Open Air. Stanza 3

"Raise the stone, and thou shalt find me; cleave the wood and there am I." [1]

The Toiling of Felix. Part I, Prelude

This is the gospel of labour, ring it, ye bells of the kirk!
The Lord of Love came down from above, to live with the men who work;
This is the rose that He planted, here in the thorn-curst soil:
Heaven is blest with perfect rest, but the blessing of Earth is toil.

Ibid. Envoy, Stanza 5

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air;

And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair.
"America for Me." Stanza 3

It's home again, and home again, America for me!
I want a ship that's westward bound to plough the rolling sea,
To the blessèd Land of Room Enough beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.
Ibid. Stanza 6

This is my work; my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way.
The Three Best Things. I, Work

Not to the swift, the race:
Not to the strong, the fight: [1]
Not to the righteous, perfect grace:
Not to the wise, the light.
Reliance. Stanza 1

Oh, was I born too soon, my dear, or were you born too late,
That I am going out the door while you come in the gate?
Rencontre. Stanza 1

The lintel low enough to keep out pomp and pride:
The threshold high enough to turn deceit aside.
For the Friends at Hurstmont. The Door

Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul.
The Prison and the Angel

He that planteth a tree is a servant of God,
He provideth a kindness for many generations,
And faces that he hath not seen shall bless him.
The Friendly Trees. Stanza 10

The heavenly hills of Holland —
  How wondrously they rise Above the smooth green pastures
  Into the azure skies!
With blue and purple hollows,
  With peaks of dazzling snow,
Along the far horizon
  The clouds are marching slow.
The Heavenly Hills of Holland. Stanza 1

Individuality is the salt of common life. You may have to live in a crowd, but you do not have to live like it, nor subsist on its food.
The School of Life. Page 33

It is with rivers as it is with people: the greatest are not always the most agreeable nor the best to live with.
Little Rivers. Chap. 2

The first day of spring is one thing, and the first spring day is another. The difference between them is sometimes as great as a month.
Fisherman's Luck. Chap. 5

YOUNG EWING ALLISON
[1853–1932]

The mate was fixed by the bos'n's pike,
The bos'n brained with a marlinspike,
And Cookey's throat was marked belike
    It had been gripped
      By fingers ten;
    And there they lay,
      All good dead men,
Like break-o'-day in a boozing ken —
  Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum! [1]
Derelict, A Reminiscence of Treasure Island

The very texture of every enduring work of art must imbed the glowing life of its own times and the embers of the past. If it does not cover space as history it must plumb the depths of emotion in an individual to reach the universal perception.

Every few years our industrial system gets the jim-jams. Capital flies to cover, factories close and labor goes tramping across the country seeking honest employment and receiving a warm welcome — from militia companies with shotted guns. Cheerful idiots begin to prattle of "over-production," the economic M. D.'s to refurbish all the old remedies, from conjure-bags to communism. They all know exactly what caused the "crisis" and what to do for it; but despite the doctors the patient usually — survives. And the M. D. who succeeds in cramming his pet panacea down its throat claims all the credit for the recovery. We are slowly emerging from the crash of '93, and the cuckoos are cock-sure that a country fairly bursting with wealth was saved from the demnition bowwows by the blessed expedient of going into debt.

BETH DAY

[Circa 1855]

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale to you someone has told About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold:
These narrow gates. First, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind Give truthful answer. And the next Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"
And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
What the result of speech may be.[2]

The thing thou lovest, though the body starve —
Who works for glory misses oft the goal;
Who works for money coins his very soul.
Work for the work's sake, then, and it may be
That these things shall be added unto thee.

Work

SARAH PRATT McLEAN GREENE
[1856–1935]

De massa ob de sheepfol',
Dat guards de sheepfol' bin,
Look out in de gloomerin' meadows
Wha'r de long night rain begin;
So he call to de hirelin' shepa'd —
"Is my sheep, is dey all come in?"

De Sheepfol'. Stanza 1

EDWARD SANDFORD MARTIN
[1856–1939]

Within my earthly temple there's a crowd.
There's one of us that's humble; one that's proud.
There's one that's broken-hearted for his sins,
And one who, unrepentant, sits and grins.
There's one who loves his neighbor as himself,
And one who cares for naught but fame and pelf.
From much corroding care would I be free
If once I could determine which is Me.

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE
[1856–1935]

When I consider Life and its few years —
A wisp of fog betwixt us and the sun;
A call to battle, and the battle done
Ere the last echo dies within our ears.

Tears

The burst of music down an unlistening street.

Ibid.

How each hath back what once he stayed to weep;
Homer his sight, David his little lad!

Ibid.

Creeds grow so thick along the way,
Their boughs hide God.

Doubt

Glad that I live am I;
That the sky is blue;
Glad for the country lanes,
And the fall of dew.

A Little Song of Life. Stanza 1

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW
[1856–]

My method is to take the utmost trouble to find the right thing to say, and then to say it with the utmost levity.

Answers to Nine Questions

We have no more right to consume happiness without producing it than to consume wealth without producing it.

Candida. Act I

A prosperous man of business, who probably never read anything but a newspaper since he left school.

Cashel Byron's Profession. Chap. 5

All this struggling and striving to make the world better is a great mistake; not because it isn't a good thing to improve the world if you know how to do it, but because striving and struggling is the worst way you could set about doing anything.

Ibid. Chap. 6

We don't bother much about dress and manners in England, because, as a nation we don't dress well and we've no manners.

You Never Can Tell. Act I

A family enjoying the unspeakable peace and freedom of being orphans.

Ibid. Act II

The great advantage of a hotel is that it's a refuge from home life.

Ibid.

It's well to be off with the Old Woman before you're on with the New.[1]

The Philanderer. Act II

The fickleness of women I love is only equaled by the infernal constancy of the women who love me.

Ibid.

The test of a man or woman's breeding is how they behave in a quarrel.

Ibid. Act IV

People are always blaming their circumstances for what they are. I don't believe in circumstances. The people who get on in this world are the people who get up and look for the circumstances they want, and, if they can't find them, make them.

Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act II

There are no secrets better kept than the secrets that everybody guesses.

Ibid. Act III

A great devotee of the Gospel of Getting On.

Ibid. Act IV

This is the true joy in life, the being used for a purpose recognized by yourself as a mighty one; the being thoroughly worn out before you are thrown on the scrap heap; the being a force of Nature instead of a feverish selfish little clod of ailments and grievances complaining that the world will not devote itself to making you happy.

Man and Superman. Epistle Dedicatory

A lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it: it would be hell on earth.

Man and Superman. Act I

The more things a man is ashamed of, the more respectable he is.

Ibid.

You think that you are Ann's suitor: that you are the pursuer and she the pursued; that it is your part to woo, to persuade, to prevail, to overcome. Fool: it is you who are the pursued, the marked-down quarry, the destined prey.

Ibid. Act II

Marry Ann and at the end of a week you'll find no more inspiration in her than in a plate of muffins.

Ibid.

Home life as we understand it is no more natural to us than a cage is natural to a cockatoo.

Getting Married. Preface

In the extreme instances of reaction against convention, female murderers get sheaves of offers of marriage.

Ibid.

When two people are under the influence of the most violent, most insane, most delusive, and most transient of passions, they are required to swear that they will remain in that excited, abnormal, and exhausting condition continuously until death do them part.

Ibid.

A man is like a phonograph with half-a-dozen records. You soon get tired of them all; and yet you have to sit at table whilst he reels them off to every new visitor.

Ibid. (The Play)

In England we always let an institution strain itself until it breaks.

Ibid.

[1] See Charles Henry Webb, page 611.

The whole strength of England lies in the fact that the enormous majority of the English people are snobs.

Getting Married (The Play)

You don't learn to hold your own in the world by standing on guard, but by attacking, and getting well hammered yourself.

Ibid.

Religion is a great force — the only real motive force in the world; but what you fellows don't understand is that you must get at a man through his own religion and not through yours.

Ibid.

The modest cough of a minor poet.

The Dark Lady of the Sonnets

This writing of plays is a great matter, forming as it does the minds and affections of men in such sort that whatsoever they see done in show on the stage, they will presently be doing in earnest in the world, which is but a larger stage.

Ibid.

I like a bit of a mongrel myself, whether it's a man or a dog; they're the best for every day.

Misalliance. Episode I

If parents would only realize how they bore their children!

Ibid.

He's a gentleman: look at his boots.

Pygmalion. Act I

Women upset everything. When you let them into your life, you find that the woman is driving at one thing and you're driving at another.

Ibid. Act II

I have to live for others and not for myself; that's middle class morality.

Ibid. Act V

The great secret, Eliza, is not having bad manners or good manners or any other particular sort of manners, but having the same manner for all human souls: in short, behaving as if you were in Heaven, where there are no third-class carriages, and one soul is as good as another.

Ibid.

Independence? That's middle class blasphemy. We are all dependent on one another, every soul of us on earth.

Pygmalion. Act V

The nauseous sham goodfellowship our democratic public men get up for shop use.

Back to Methuselah. Gospel of the Brothers Barnabas

Life is a disease; and the only difference between one man and another is the stage of the disease at which he lives.

Ibid.

I enjoy convalescence. It is the part that makes the illness worth while.

Ibid.

A nap, my friend, is a brief period of sleep which overtakes superannuated persons when they endeavor to entertain unwelcome visitors or to listen to scientific lectures.

Ibid. Tragedy of an Elderly Gentleman

Everything happens to everybody sooner or later if there is time enough.

Ibid. As Far As Thought Can Reach

Silence is the most perfect expression of scorn.

Ibid.

The worst cliques are those which consist of one man.

Ibid.

The Jews generally give value. They make you pay; but they deliver the goods. In my experience the men who want something for nothing are invariably Christians.

Saint Joan. Scene IV

Kings are not born: they are made by universal hallucination.

The Revolutionist's Handbook

At last I went to Ireland,
'Twas raining cats and dogs:
I found no music in the glens,
Nor purple in the bogs.
And as far as angels' laughter in the smelly Liffy's tide —
Well, my Irish daddy said it, but the dear old humbug lied.

Envoi added to a song, My Irish

Daddy, by Miss MAISIE HURL [May, 1931]

Every person who owes his life to civilized society and who has enjoyed since his childhood its very costly protections and advantages should appear at reasonable intervals before a properly qualified jury to justify his existence, which should be summarily and painlessly terminated if he fails to justify it and it develops that he is a positive nuisance and more trouble than he is worth. Nothing less will really make people responsible citizens.

Radio address from London to America [October 11, 1931]

You put up in New York Harbor a monstrous idol which you called "Liberty."[1]

Speech, Metropolitan Opera House,[2] New York [April 11, 1933]

You in America should trust to that volcanic political instinct which I have divined in you.

Requiescat. Stanza 1

Thy name was writ in water[1] — it shall stand:
And tears like mine will keep thy memory green,
As Isabella did her Basil-tree.

The Grave of Keats

Think of all
The suns that go to make one speedwell blue!

Quia Multum Amavi. Stanza 4

These are the letters which Endymion wrote
To one he loved in secret, and apart.
And now the brawlers of the auction mart
Bargain and bid for each poor blotted note.

On the Sale by Auction of Keats' Love Letters

Yet each man kills the thing he loves,
By each let this be heard,
Some do it with a bitter look,
Some with a flattering word,
The coward does it with a kiss,
The brave man with a sword!

The Ballad of Reading Gaol. I, 7

I never saw a man who looked With such a wistful eye
Upon that little tent of blue
Which prisoners call the sky,
And at every wandering cloud that trailed
Its ravelled fleeces by.

Ibid. II, 2

For he that lives more lives than one
More deaths than one must die.

Ibid. III, 37

All that we know who lie in gaol
Is that the wall is strong;
And that each day is like a year,
A year whose days are long.

Ibid. V, 1

The vilest deeds like poison-weeds
Bloom well in prison-air:
It is only what is good in Man
That wastes and withers there:

Most modern calendars mar the sweet simplicity of our lives by reminding us that each day that passes is the anniversary of some perfectly uninteresting event.

A Poetic Calendar

Though it would be dangerous to make calendars the basis of Culture, we should all be much improved if we began each day with a fine passage of English poetry.[1]

To say "mither" instead of "mother" seems to many the acme of romance.

Romantic Poems and Ballads

An age that has no criticism is either an age in which art is immobile, hieratic, and confined to the reproduction of formal types, or an age that possesses no art at all.

The Critic as Artist. Part I

It is through Art, and through Art only, that we can realize our perfection; through Art and Art only that we can shield ourselves from the sordid perils of actual existence.

Ibid. Part II

As long as war is regarded as wicked, it will always have its fascination. When it is looked upon as vulgar, it will cease to be popular.

A Woman of No Importance. Act I

Nothing spoils a romance so much as a sense of humour in the woman.

Ibid.

Men always want to be a woman's first love. That is their clumsy vanity. We women have a more subtle instinct about things. What we like is to be a man's last romance.

Ibid. Act II

Discontent is the first step in the progress of a man or a nation.

Ibid.

Talk to every woman as if you loved her, and to every man as if he bored you, and at the end of your first season you will have the reputation of possessing the most perfect social tact.

Ibid. Act III

I delight in men over seventy. They always offer one the devotion of a lifetime.

Ibid. Act IV

I have invented an invaluable invalid called Bunbury, in order that I may be able to go down into the country whenever I choose.

The Importance of Being Earnest. Act I

Memory is the diary that we all carry about with us.

Ibid. Act II

No woman should ever be quite accurate about her age. It looks so calculating.

[1857–1924]

A work that aspires, however humbly, to the condition of art should carry its justification in every line.

The Nigger of the Narcissus. Preface

But the artist appeals to that part of our being which is not dependent on wisdom; to that in us which is a gift and not an acquisition — and, therefore, more permanently enduring. He speaks to our capacity for delight and wonder, to the sense of mystery surrounding our lives: to our sense of pity, and beauty, and pain.

Ibid.

The ship, a fragment detached from the earth, went on lonely and swift like a small planet.

Ibid. Chap. 2

Goodbye, brothers! You were a good crowd. As good a crowd as ever fisted with wild cries the beating canvas of a heavy foresail; or tossing aloft, invisible in the night, gave back yell for yell to a westerly gale.

Ibid. Chap. 5

She strode like a grenadier, was strong and upright like an obelisk, had a beautiful face, a candid brow, pure eyes, and not a thought of her own in her head.

Tales of Unrest. The Return

What greatness had not floated on the ebb of that river [the Thames] into the mystery of an unknown earth! . . . The dreams of men, the seed of commonwealths, the germs of empires.

Heart of Darkness

Running all over the sea trying to get behind the weather.

Typhoon. Chap. 2

The sea never changes and its works, for all the talk of men, are wrapped in mystery.

Ibid. Falk: A Reminiscence

I have known the sea too long to believe in its respect for decency.

Ibid.

An elemental force is ruthlessly frank.

Typhoon. Falk: A Reminiscence

Efficiency of a practically flawless kind may be reached naturally in the struggle for bread. But there is something beyond — a higher point, a subtle and unmistakable touch of love and pride beyond mere skill; almost an inspiration which gives to all work that finish which is almost art — which is art.

The Mirror of the Sea. The Fine Art

The East Wind, an interloper in the dominions of Westerly Weather, is an impassive-faced tyrant with a sharp poniard held behind his back for a treacherous stab.

Ibid. Rulers of East and West

The autocratic sway of the West Wind, whether forty north or forty south of the equator, is characterized by an open, generous, frank, barbarous recklessness. For he is a great autocrat, and to be a great autocrat you must be a great barbarian.

Ibid.

The air of the New World seems favorable to the art of declamation.

Nostromo. Chap. 6

There are on earth no actors too humble and obscure not to have a gallery; that gallery which envenoms the play by stealthy jeers, counsels of anger, amused comments, or words of perfidious compassion.

Chance. Part II, Chap. 4

What all men are really after is some form, or perhaps only some formula, of peace.

Under Western Eyes. Part I

A man's real life is that accorded to him in the thoughts of other men by reason of respect or natural love.

Ibid. 1

Let a fool be made serviceable according to his folly.

Ibid. 3

The belief in a supernatural source of evil is not necessary; men alone are quite capable of every wickedness.

Ibid. Part II, 4

Why should a man certain of immortality think of his life at all?

Under Western Eyes. Part II, 4

No woman is an absolute fool. . . . No woman is ever completely deceived.

Ibid. 5

That strange impulse of indiscretion, common to men who lead secret lives, and accounting for the invariable existence of "compromising documents" in all the plots and conspiracies of history.

Ibid. Part III, 1

You can't ignore the importance of a good digestion. The joy of life . . . depends on a sound stomach, whereas a bad digestion inclines one to skepticism, incredulity, breeds black fancies and thoughts of death.

Ibid. 3

All ambitions are lawful except those which climb upward on the miseries or credulities of mankind.

A Personal Record. Preface

The sight of human affairs deserves admiration and pity. And he is not insensible who pays them the undemonstrative tribute of a sigh which is not a sob, and of a smile which is not a grin.

Ibid.

Only in men's imagination does every truth find an effective and undeniable existence. Imagination, not invention, is the supreme master of art as of life.

Ibid. Chap. 1

For Englishmen especially, of all the races of the earth, a task, any task, undertaken in an adventurous spirit acquires the merit of romance.

Ibid. Chap. 5

Only a moment; a moment of strength, of romance, of glamour — of youth! . . . A flick of sunshine upon a strange shore, the time to remember, the time for a sigh, and — goodbye! — Night — Goodbye . . . !

Youth

There is no rest for a messenger till the message is delivered.

The Rescue. Part VI, 8

I am a great foe of favouritism in public life, in private life, and even in the delicate relationship of an author to his works.

Lord Jim. Author's Note

There is a weird power in a spoken word. . . . And a word carries far — very far — deals destruction through time as the bullets go flying through space.

Ibid. Chap. 15

That faculty of beholding at a hint the face of his desire and the shape of his dream, without which the earth would know no lover and no adventurer.

Ibid. Chap. 16

Felicity, felicity — how shall I say it? — is quaffed out of a golden cup in every latitude: the flavour is with you — with you alone, and you can make it as intoxicating as you please.

Ibid.

It is when we try to grapple with another man's intimate need that we perceive how incomprehensible, wavering, and misty are the beings that share with us the sight of the stars and the warmth of the sun.

Ibid.

We wander in our thousands over the face of the earth, the illustrious and the obscure, earning beyond the seas our fame, our money, or only a crust of bread; but it seems to me that for each of us going home must be like going to render an account. We return to face our superiors, our kindred, our friends — those whom we obey, and those whom we love.

Ibid. Chap. 21

You shall judge of a man by his foes as well as by his friends.

Ibid. Chap. 34

Vanity plays lurid tricks with our memory.

Ibid. Chap. 41

Some great men owe most of their greatness to the ability of detecting in those they destine for their tools the exact quality of strength that matters for their work.

Ibid. Chap. 42

In plucking the fruit of memory one runs the risk of spoiling its bloom.

THORSTEIN VEBLEN
[1857–1929]

With the exception of the instinct of self-preservation, the propensity for emulation is probably the strongest and most alert and persistent of the economic motives proper.
The Theory of the Leisure Class. Chap. 5

The dog commends himself to our favour by affording play to our propensity for mastery, and as he is also an item of expense, and commonly serves no industrial purpose, he holds a well-assured place in men's regard as a thing of good repute.
Ibid. Chap 6

The visible imperfections of the hand-wrought goods, being honorific, are accounted marks of superiority in point of beauty, or serviceability, or both. Hence has arisen that exaltation of the defective, of which John Ruskin and William Morris were such eager spokesmen in their time. . . . The Kelmscott Press reduced the matter to an absurdity by issuing books for modern use, edited with the obsolete spelling, printed in black-letter, and bound in limp vellum fitted with thongs.

The Theory of the Leisure Class. Chap. 6

The womanliness of woman's apparel resolves itself into the more effective hindrance to useful exertion offered by the garments peculiar to women.

Ibid. Chap. 7

Priestly vestments show, in accentuated form, all the features that have been shown to be evidence of a servile status and a vicarious life.

Ibid.

The walking-stick serves the purpose of an advertisement that the bearer's hands are employed otherwise than in useful effort, and it therefore has utility as an evidence of leisure.

Ibid. Chap. 10

The sporting man's sense of luck and chance is an inarticulate or inchoate animism . . . it implies the possibility of propitiating, or of deceiving and cajoling, or otherwise disturbing the unfolding of propensities resident in the objects which constitute the apparatus and accessories of any game of skill or chance. There are few sporting men who are not in the habit of wearing charms or talismans.

Ibid. Chap. 11

To meet the requirements of the highest economic efficiency under modern conditions, the world process must habitually be apprehended in terms of quantitative, dispassionate force and sequence.

Ibid. Chap. 12

The adoption of the cap and gown is one of the striking atavistic features of modern college life.

Ibid. Chap. 14

The classics have scarcely lost in absolute value as a voucher of scholastic respectability, since for this purpose it is only necessary that the scholar should be able to put in evidence some learning which is conventionally recognized as evidence of wasted time.

Ibid.

As felicitous an instance of futile classicism as can well be found is the conventional spelling of the English language. English orthography satisfies all the requirements of the canons of reputability under the law of conspicuous waste. It is archaic, cumbrous, and ineffective; its acquisition consumes much time and effort; failure to acquire it is easy of detection.

A will is a solemn matter, even with men whose life is given up to business, and who are by habit mindful of the future.

A Last Will [1]

I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound and disposing mind and memory [he lingered on the word memory], do now make and publish this my last will and testament, in order, as justly as I may, to distribute my interests in the world among succeeding men.

Ibid.

I leave to children exclusively, but only for the life of their childhood, all and every the dandelions of the fields and the daisies thereof, with the right to play among them freely.

Ibid.

And I devise to children the yellow shores of creeks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, with the dragon-flies that skim the surface of said waters.

A Last Will

To lovers I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red, red roses by the wall, the snow of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of music, or aught else they may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

Ibid.

To those who are no longer children, or youths, or lovers, I leave, too, the knowledge of what a rare, rare world it is.

Without an element of the obscene there can be no true and deep aesthetic or moral conception of life. . . . It is only the great men who are truly obscene. If they had not dared to be obscene they could never have dared to be great.

Impressions and Comments

The omnipresent process of sex, as it is woven into the whole texture of our man's or woman's body, is the pattern of all the process of our life.

The New Spirit

The Normans who came over to England with William the Conqueror and constituted the proud English nobility were simply a miscellaneous set of adventurers, professional fighting men, of unknown, and no doubt for the most part undistinguished, lineage. William the Conqueror himself was the son of a woman of the people.

The Task of Social Hygiene. Introduction

If men and women are to understand each other, to enter into each other's nature with mutual sympathy, and to become capable of genuine comradeship, the foundation must be laid in youth.

Ibid. Chap. 1

The larger our great cities grow, the more irresistible becomes the attraction which they exert on the children of the country, who are fascinated by them, as the birds are fascinated by the lighthouse or the moths by the candle.[1]

Ibid. Chap. 5

An urban life saps that calm and stolid strength which is necessary for all great effort and stress, physical or intellectual.

Ibid.

Prosperity and civilization are far from being synonymous terms. The working community that is suddenly glutted by an afflux of work and wages is in exactly the same position as the savage who is suddenly enabled to fill himself with a rich mass of decaying blubber. It is prosperity, it is not civilization.

The Task of Social Hygiene. Chap. 5

There are few among us who have not suffered from too early familiarity with the Bible and the conceptions of religion.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The German feels nothing of that sensitive jealousy with which the French seek to guard private life and the rights of the individual.

Ibid. Chap. 9

The Englishman's reverence for the individual's rights goes beyond the Frenchman's, for in France there is a tendency to subordinate the individual to the family, and in England the interests of the individual predominate.

Ibid.

Holland is one of the traditional lands of freedom; it was the home of independent intellect, of free religion, of autonomous morals, when every other country in Europe was closed to these manifestations of the spirit.

Ibid.

When Charles V retired in weariness from the greatest throne in the world to the solitude of the monastery at Yuste, he occupied his leisure for some weeks in trying to regulate two clocks. It proved very difficult. One day, it is recorded, he turned to his assistant and said: "To think that I attempted to force the reason and conscience of thousands of men into one mould, and I cannot make two clocks agree!"

Ibid.

The extension of trade is a matter of tariffs rather than of war, and in any case the trade of a country with its own acquisitions by conquest is a comparatively insignificant portion of its total trade.

[1] It is well known that a number of eminent men have been born in London; but, in the course of a somewhat elaborate study of the origins of British men of genius, I have not been able to find that any were genuinely Londoners by descent. — A Study of British Genius

So far as business and money are concerned, a country gains nothing by a successful war, even though that war involves the acquisition of immense new provinces.

The Task of Social Hygiene. Chap. 10

Conquest brings self-conceit and intolerance, the reckless inflation and dissipation of energies. Defeat brings prudence and concentration; it ennobles and fortifies.

Ibid.

A nation's art-products and its scientific activities are not mere national property; they are international possessions, for the joy and service of the whole world. The nations hold them in trust for humanity.

Ibid.

There has never been any country at every moment so virtuous and so wise that it has not sometimes needed to be saved from itself.

Ibid.

Those persons who are burning to display heroism may rest assured that the course of social evolution will offer them every opportunity.

Ibid.

The immense value of becoming acquainted with a foreign language is that we are thereby led into a new world of tradition and thought and feeling.

Ibid. Chap. 11

While some would claim for the English the supreme poetic literature, there can be no doubt that the French own the supreme prose literature of modern Europe.

Ibid.

The family only represents one aspect, however important an aspect, of a human being's functions and activities. . . . A life is beautiful and ideal, or the reverse, only when we have taken into our consideration the social as well as the family relationship.

Little Essays of Love and Virtue. Chap. 1

One can know nothing of giving aught that is worthy to give unless one also knows how to take.

Little Essays of Love and Virtue. Chap. 1

That indeed were a world fit to perish, wherein the moralist had set up the ignoble maxim: Safety first.

Ibid. Chap. 2

The by-product is sometimes more valuable than the product.

Ibid. Chap. 3

It has taken God — or Nature, if we will — unknown millions of years of painful struggle to evolve Man, and to raise the human species above that helpless bondage to reproduction which marks the lower animals.

Ibid.

All civilization has from time to time become a thin crust over a volcano of revolution.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The greatest task before civilization at present is to make machines what they ought to be, the slaves, instead of the masters of men.

Ibid.

The art of dancing stands at the source of all the arts that express themselves first in the human person. The art of building, or architecture, is the beginning of all the arts that lie outside the person; and in the end they unite.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 2

Dancing is the loftiest, the most moving, the most beautiful of the arts, because it is no mere translation or abstraction from life; it is life itself.

Ibid.

The place where optimism most flourishes is the lunatic asylum.

Ibid. Chap. 3

He who would walk sanely amid the opposing perils in the path of life always needs a little optimism; he also needs a little pessimism.

Ibid.

Thinking in its lower grades is comparable to paper money, and in its higher forms it is a kind of poetry.

Ibid.

In philosophy, it is not the attainment of the goal that matters, it is the things that are met with by the way.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 2

Every man of genius sees the world at a different angle from his fellows, and there is his tragedy.

Ibid.

The mathematician has reached the highest rung on the ladder of human thought.

Ibid.

The verse of every young poet, however original he may afterwards grow, usually has plainly written across it the rhythmic signature of some great master. . . . The same thing happens with prose, but the rhythm of the signature is less easy to hear.

Ibid. Chap. 4

The most obviously beautiful things in the world of Nature are birds and flowers and the stones we call precious.

Ibid.

All the conventional rules of the construction of speech may be put aside if a writer is thereby enabled to follow more closely and lucidly the form and process of his thought.

Ibid.

If at some period in the course of civilization we seriously find that our science and our religion are antagonistic, then there must be something wrong either with our science or with our religion.

Ibid, Chap. 5

A man must not swallow more beliefs than he can digest.

Ibid.

The Promised Land always lies on the other side of a wilderness.

Ibid.

What we call "morals" is simply blind obedience to words of command.

Ibid. Chap. 6

There is no occasion for any one who is told that he has written a "moral" book to be unduly elated, or when he is told that his book is "immoral" to be unduly cast down. The significance of these adjectives is strictly limited. Neither the one nor the other can have more than the faintest effect on the march of the great compact majority of the social army.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 6

The world's greatest thinkers have often been amateurs; for high thinking is the outcome of fine and independent living, and for that a professorial chair offers no special opportunities.

Ibid.

For the artist life is always a discipline, and no discipline can be without pain. That is so even of dancing, which of all the arts is most associated in the popular mind with pleasure. To learn to dance is the most austere of disciplines.

Ibid.

The methods of statistics are so variable and uncertain, so apt to be influenced by circumstance, that it is never possible to be sure that one is operating with figures of equal weight.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The prevalence of suicide, without doubt, is a test of height in civilization; it means that the population is winding up its nervous and intellectual system to the utmost point of tension and that sometimes it snaps.[1]

Ibid.

The more rapidly a civilization progresses, the sooner it dies for another to arise in its place.

Ibid.

The sun and the moon and the stars would have disappeared long ago — as even their infinitely more numerous analogues on the earth beneath are likely to disappear — had they happened to be within the reach of predatory human hands.

Ibid.

Had there been a Lunatic Asylum in the suburbs of Jerusalem, Jesus Christ would infallibly have been shut up in it at the outset of his public career. That interview with Satan on a pinnacle of the Temple would alone have damned him, and everything that happened after could but have confirmed the diagnosis. The whole religious complexion of the modern world is due to the absence from Jerusalem of a Lunatic Asylum.

KENNETH GRAHAME
[1859–1932]

As a rule, indeed, grown-up people are fairly correct on matters of fact; it is in the higher gift of imagination that they are so sadly to seek.

The Golden Age. The Finding of the Princess

A man can stand very much in the cause of love: poverty, aunts, rivals, barriers of every sort, — all these only serve to fan the flame. But personal ridicule is a shaft that reaches the very vitals.

Ibid. "Young Adam Cupid"

The year was in its yellowing time, and the face of Nature a study in old gold.

Ibid. A Harvesting

Those who painfully and with bleeding feet have scaled the crags of mastery over musical instruments have yet their loss in this, — that the wild joy of strumming has become a vanished sense.

Ibid.

I began to like this man. He answered your questions briefly and to the point, and never tried to be funny. I felt I could be confidential with him.

Ibid. The Roman Road

Monkeys, who very sensibly refrain from speech, lest they should be set to earn their livings.

Ibid. "Lusisti Satis"

Grown-up people really ought to be more careful. Among themselves it may seem but a small thing to give their word and take back their word.

The Magic Ring

There is nothing — absolutely nothing — half so much worth doing as simply messing about in boats, . . . or with boats. . . . In or out of 'em, it doesn't matter.

The Wind in the Willows. Chap. 1

Villagers all, this frosty tide,
Let your doors swing open wide,
Though wind may follow, and snow beside,
Yet draw us in by your fire to bide;
Joy shall be yours in the morning!

Ibid. Chap. 5 (Carol)

ALFRED EDWARD HOUSMAN
[1859–1936]

Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough.

A Shropshire Lad. II

Now, of my threescore years and ten,
Twenty will not come again,
And take from seventy springs a score,
It only leaves me fifty more.

Ibid.

Clay lies still, but blood's a rover;
  Breath's a ware that will not keep.
Up, lad: when the journey's over
  There'll be time enough to sleep.

Ibid. IV, Reveille

    The sun moves always west;
The road one treads to labour
    Will lead one home to rest,
    And that will be the best.

Ibid. VII

If the heats of hate and lust
  In the house of flesh are strong,
Let me mind the house of dust
  Where my sojourn shall be long.

Ibid. XII

When I was one-and-twenty
  I heard a wise man say,
"Give crowns and pounds and guineas
  But not your heart away;
Give pearls away and rubies
  But keep your fancy free."
But I was one-and-twenty,
  No use to talk to me.

Ibid. XIII

"The heart out of the bosom
  Was never given in vain;
'Tis paid with sighs a-plenty
  And sold for endless rue."

And I am two-and-twenty,
And Oh, 'tis true, 'tis true.
A Shropshire Lad. XIII

His folly has not fellow
Beneath the blue of day
That gives to man or woman
His heart and soul away.
Ibid. XIV

To-day, the road all runners come,
Shoulder-high, we bring you home,
And set you at your threshold down,
Townsman of a stiller town.
Ibid. XIX, To an Athlete Dying Young

And silence sounds no worse than cheers
After earth has stopped the ears.
Ibid.

That is the land of lost content,
I see it shining plain,
The happy highways where I went
And cannot come again.
Ibid. XL

Oh, 'tis jesting, dancing, drinking
Spins the heavy world around.
If young hearts were not so clever,
Oh, they would be young for ever:
Think no more; 'tis only thinking Lays lads underground.
Ibid. XLIX

With rue my heart is laden
For golden friends I had,
For many a rose-lipt maiden
And many a lightfoot lad.
Ibid. LIV

By brooks too broad for leaping
The lightfoot boys are laid.
Ibid.

And cowards' funerals, when they come,
Are not wept so well at home,
Therefore, though the best is bad,
Stand and do the best, my lad.
Ibid. LVI, The Day of Battle

Why, if 'tis dancing you would be,
There's brisker pipes than poetry.
Ibid. LXII

Oh many a peer of England brews
Livelier liquor than the Muse,
And malt does more than Milton can
To justify God's ways to man.
Ale, man, ale's the stuff to drink
For fellows whom it hurts to think.
A Shropshire Lad. LXII

Oh, I have been to Ludlow fair
And left my necktie God knows where,
And carried half way home, or near,
Pints and quarts of Ludlow beer.
Ibid.

Luck's a chance, but trouble's sure,
I'd face it as a wise man would,
And train for ill and not for good.
Ibid.

Mithridates, he died old.
Ibid.

We'll to the woods no more,
The laurels all are cut,[1]
The bowers are bare of bay
That once the Muses wore.
Last Poems. Foreword

The troubles of our proud and angry dust
Are from eternity, and shall not fail.
Bear them we can, and if we can we must.
Shoulder the sky, my lad, and drink your ale.
Ibid. IX

Could man be drunk for ever
With liquor, love, or fights,
Lief should I rouse at morning
And lief lie down of nights.
Ibid. X

The laws of God, the laws of man,
He may keep that will and can;
Not I: let God and man decree
Laws for themselves and not for me.
Ibid. XII

And how am I to face the odds
Of man's bedevilment and God's?
I, a stranger and afraid
In a world I never made.
Ibid.

And then the clock collected in the tower
Its strength, and struck.

The hour when earth's foundations fled,
Followed their mercenary calling
And took their wages and are dead.
Last Poems. XXXVII, Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries[1]

Oh stay with company and mirth
And daylight and the air;
Too full already is the grave
Of fellows that were good and brave
And died because they were.
Ibid. XXXVIII

They say my verse is sad: no wonder;
Its narrow measure spans
Tears of eternity, and sorrow,
Not mine, but man's.
More Poems [1936]

The thoughts of others
Were light and fleeting,
Of lovers' meeting
Or luck or fame;
Mine were of trouble
And mine were steady,
So I was ready
When trouble came.

The rainy Pleiads wester,
Orion plunges prone,
And midnight strikes and hastens,
And I lie down alone.
Ibid. XI

Oh, the pearl seas are yonder,
The gold and amber shore;
Shires where the girls are fonder,
Towns where the pots hold more.
Ibid. XXXIII

Silent hills indenting
The orange band of eve.
Ibid.

We now to peace and darkness
And earth and thee restore
Thy creature that thou madest
And wilt cast forth no more.
Ibid. XLVII, For My Funeral

Good night. Ensured release,
Imperishable peace,
Have these for yours.[2]
While sky and sea and land
And earth's foundations stand
And heaven endures.
More Poems [1936] XLVIII, Alta Quies

I was brought up in the Church of England and in the High Church party, which is much the best religion I have ever come across. But Lemprière's "Classical Dictionary," read when I was eight, made me prefer paganism to Christianity; I abandoned Christianity at thirteen, and became an atheist at twenty-one.
Autobiographical note written for a French translation of his poems

I am not a pessimist but a pejorist (as George Eliot said she was not an optimist but a meliorist); and that philosophy is founded on my observation of the world, not on anything so trivial and irrelevant as personal history. Secondly, I did not begin to write poetry in earnest until the really emotional part of my life was over; and my poetry, so far as I could make out, sprang chiefly from physical causes, such as a relaxed sore throat during my most prolific period, the first five months of 1895.
Ibid.

Good literature continually read for pleasure must, let us hope, do some good to the reader: must quicken his perception though dull, and sharpen his discrimination though blunt, and mellow the rawness of his personal opinions.
The Name and Nature of Poetry[1]

Poems very seldom consist of poetry and nothing else; and pleasure can be derived also from their other ingredients.
Ibid.

Good religious poetry, whether in Keble or Dante or Job, is likely to be most justly appreciated and most discriminatingly relished by the undevout.

Even when poetry has a meaning, as it usually has, it may be inadvisable to draw it out. . . . Perfect understanding will sometimes almost extinguish pleasure.

The Name and Nature of Poetry

Experience has taught me, when I am shaving of a morning, to keep watch over my thoughts, because, if a line of poetry strays into my memory, my skin bristles so that the razor ceases to act. . . . The seat of this sensation is the pit of the stomach.

Ibid.

I have seldom written poetry unless I was rather out of health, and the experience, though pleasurable, was generally agitating and exhausting.

I can no longer expect to be revisited by the continuous excitement under which in the early months of 1895 I wrote the greater part of my other book [A Shropshire Lad].

Last Poems, Preface [1922]

ELBERT HUBBARD
[1859–1915]

It is not book learning young men need, nor instruction about this and that, but a stiffening of the vertebrae which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to act promptly, concentrate their energies, do a thing — "carry a message to Garcia." [1]

A Message to Garcia [2]

The man who is anybody and who does anything is surely going to be criticized, vilified, and misunderstood. This is a part of the penalty for greatness, and every great man understands it; and understands, too, that it is no proof of greatness. The final proof of greatness lies in being able to endure contumely without resentment.

Get Out or Get in Line

If you work for a man, in heaven's name work for him! If he pays you wages that supply you your bread and butter, work for him — speak well of him, think well of him, stand by him and stand by the institution he represents.

JEROME KLAPKA JEROME
[1859–1927]

Let your boat of life be light, packed with only what you need — a homely home and simple pleasures, one or two friends, worth the name, some one to love and some one to love you,[1] a cat, a dog, and a pipe or two, enough to eat and enough to wear, and a little more than enough to drink; for thirst is a dangerous thing.

Ibid. Chap. 13

They [bagpipes] appear to be a trying instrument to perform upon. You have to get enough breath for the whole tune before you start.

Ibid. Chap. 14

It is in the circumstantial detail, the embellishing touches of probability, the general air of scrupulous — almost of pedantic — veracity, that the experienced angler is seen.

Ibid. Chap. 17

"Nothing, so it seems to me," said the stranger, "is more beautiful than the love that has weathered the storms of life. . . . The love of the young for the young, that is the beginning of life. But the love of the old for the old, that is the beginning of—of things longer."

The love that makes undaunted the final sacrifice.

I Vow to Thee, My Country[1]

And there's another country, I've heard of long ago —
Most dear to them that love her, most great to them that know —
We may not count her armies; we may not see her King;

And soul by soul and silently her shining bounds increase,
And her ways are ways of gentleness, and all her paths are peace.

Grace of the Way. Stanza 6

Know you what it is to be a child? It is to be something very different from the man of to-day. It is to have a spirit yet streaming from the waters of baptism; it is to believe in love, to believe in loveliness, to believe in belief; it is to be so little that the elves can reach to whisper in your ear; it is to turn pumpkins into coaches, and mice into horses, lowness into loftiness, and nothing into everything, for each child has its fairy godmother in its soul.

Shelley[1]

Children's griefs are little, certainly; but so is the child, so is its endurance, so is its field of vision, while its nervous impressionability is keener than ours. Grief is a matter of relativity; the sorrow should be estimated by its proportion to the sorrower; a gash is as painful to one as an amputation to another.

Chinese poetry is of all poetry I know the most human and the least symbolic or romantic. It contemplates life just as it presents itself, without any veil of ideas, any rhetoric or sentiment; it simply clears away the obstruction which habit has built up between us and the beauty of things.

An Essay on the Civilizations of India, China, and Japan. Page 47

Consider the American continent! How simple it is! How broad! How large! How grand in design! A strip of coast, a range of mountains, a plain, a second range, a second strip of coast! That is all. Contrast the complexity of Europe, its lack of symmetry, its variety, irregularity, disorder and caprice! The geography of the two continents already foreshadows the differences in their civilizations.

A Modern Symposium

The United States of America — the greatest potential force, material, moral, and spiritual, in the world.

The Choice Before Us. Chap. 1

To the man who has the religion of peace, the supreme value is love. To the man who has the religion of war, the supreme value is strife.

Ibid. Chap. 3

Government is everywhere to a great extent controlled by powerful minorities, with an interest distinct from that of the mass of the people.

Ibid. Chap. 4

The true way for one civilization to "conquer" another is for it to be so obviously superior in this or that point that others desire to imitate it.

Ibid. Chap. 5

War is not "inevitable," but proceeds from definite and removable causes.

The Choice Before Us. Chap. 9

Nations are quite capable of starving every other side of life — education, sanitation, housing, public health, everything that contributes to life, physical, intellectual, moral, and spiritual, in order to maintain their armaments.

Ibid. Chap. 11

Every kind of discrimination is a protection of the incompetent against the competent, with the result that the motive to become competent is taken away.

Ibid. Chap. 12

What we commonly have in our mind when we speak of religion is a definite set of doctrines, of a more or less metaphysical character, formulated in a creed and supported by an organization distinct from the state.

The Greek View of Life. Chap. 1, Sect. 1

A fundamental, and as many believe, the most essential part of Christianity, is its doctrine of reward and punishment in the world beyond; and a religion which had nothing at all to say about this great enigma we should hardly feel to be a religion at all.

Ibid. Sect. 11

All modern societies aim, to this extent at least, at equality, that their tendency, so far as it is conscious and avowed, is not to separate off a privileged class of citizens, set free by the labour of others to live the perfect life, but rather to distribute impartially to all the burdens and advantages of the state, so that every one shall be at once a labourer for himself and a citizen of the state.

Ibid. Chap. 2, Sect. 12

Dissatisfaction with the world in which we live and determination to realize one that shall be better, are the prevailing characteristics of the modern spirit.

Vesalius in Zante

Somewhere I read, in an old book whose name
Is gone from me, I read that when the days
Of a man are counted, and his business done,
There comes up the shore at evening, with the tide,
To the place where he sits, a boat —
And in the boat, from the place where he sits, he sees,
Dim in the dusk, dim and yet so familiar,
The faces of his friends long dead; and knows
They come for him, brought in upon the tide,
To take him where men go at set of day.[1]

With the Tide: Theodore Roosevelt

I was never allowed to read the popular American children's books of my day because, as my mother said, the children spoke bad English without the author's knowing it.

A Backward Glance. Chap. 3

My parents and their group, though they held literature in great esteem, stood in nervous dread of those who produced it. Washington Irving, Fitz-Greene Halleck and William Dana were the only representatives of the disquieting art who were deemed uncontaminated by it; though Longfellow, they admitted, if a popular poet, was nevertheless a gentleman. As for Herman Melville, a cousin of the Van Rensselaers, and qualified by birth to figure in the best society, he was doubtless excluded from it by his deplorable Bohemianism, for I never heard his name mentioned, or saw one of his books.

To [Henry] James's intimates, however, these elaborate hesitancies, far from being an obstacle, were like a cobweb bridge flung from his mind to theirs, an invisible passage over which one knew that silver-footed ironies, veiled jokes, tiptoe malices, were stealing to explode a huge laugh at one's feet.

[1] Whenever a good Haida is about to die he sees a canoe manned by some of his dead friends, who come with the tide to bid him welcome to the spirit land. — Sir James G. Frazer: The Golden Bough (abridged edition), Chap. 3

The Sultan asked why he was in such haste to go to Baghdad. "Because," the youth answered, "as I passed through the garden of the Palace just now, Death was standing there, and when he saw me he stretched out his arms as if to threaten me, and I must lose no time in escaping from him."

The young man was given leave to take the Sultan's horse and fly; and when he was gone the Sultan went down indignantly into the garden, and found Death still there. "How dare you make threatening gestures at my favourite?" he cried; but Death, astonished, answered: "I assure your Majesty I did not threaten him. I only threw up my arms in surprise at seeing him here, because I have a tryst with him tonight in Baghdad." [1]

You must select the Puritans for your ancestors. You must have a sheltered youth and be a graduate of Harvard. . . . Eat beans on Saturday night and fish-balls on Sunday morning. . . . You must be a D.A.R., a Colonial Dame, an S.A.R. or belong to the Mayflower Society. . . . You must read the Atlantic Monthly. . . . You must make sure in advance that your obituary appears in the Boston Transcript. There is nothing else.

When the mint is in the liquor and its fragrance on the glass,
It breathes a recollection that can never, never pass —
When the South was in the glory of a never-ending June,
The strings were on the banjo and the fiddle was in tune,
And we reveled in the plenty that we thought could never pass
And lingered at the julep in the ever-brimming glass.
When the Mint Is in the Liquor. Stanza 1

SIR ARTHUR THOMAS QUILLER-COUCH
[1863–1944]

Literature is not an abstract science, to which exact definitions can be applied. It is an art, the success of which depends on personal persuasiveness, on the author's skill to give as on ours to receive.

JAMES HARVEY ROBINSON
[1863–1935]

Political campaigns are designedly made into emotional orgies which endeavor to distract attention from the real issues involved, and they actually paralyze what slight powers of cerebration man can normally muster.

The Human Comedy. Chap. 9

With supreme irony, the war to "make the world safe for democracy"[1] ended by leaving democracy more unsafe in the world than at any time since the collapse of the revolutions of 1848.

He carries his English weather in his heart wherever he goes, and it becomes a cool spot in the desert, and a steady and sane oracle amongst all the delirium of mankind.

Soliloquies in England. The British Character

England is the paradise of individuality, eccentricity, heresy, anomalies, hobbies, and humours.

Ibid.

The world is a perpetual caricature of itself; at every moment it is the mockery and the contradiction of what it is pretending to be.

Ibid. Dickens

There is no cure for birth and death save to enjoy the interval.

Ibid. War Shrines

I like to walk about amidst the beautiful things that adorn the world; but private wealth I should decline, or any sort of personal possessions, because they would take away my liberty.

Ibid. The Irony of Liberalism

My atheism, like that of Spinoza, is true piety towards the universe and denies only gods fashioned by men in their own image, to be servants of their human interests.

Ibid. On My Friendly Critics

The human race, in its intellectual life, is organized like the bees: the masculine soul is a worker, sexually atrophied, and essentially dedicated to impersonal and universal arts; the feminine is a queen, infinitely fertile, omnipresent in its brooding industry, but passive and abounding in intuitions without method and passions without justice.

The Life of Reason. Vol. 2

Civilisation is perhaps approaching one of those long winters that overtake it from time to time. Romantic Christendom — picturesque, passionate, unhappy episode — may be coming to an end. Such a catastrophe would be no reason for despair.

Character and Opinion in the United States [1922]

American life is a powerful solvent. It seems to neutralise every intellectual element, however tough and alien it may be, and to fuse it in the native good-will, complacency, thoughtlessness, and optimism.

Ibid.

All his life he [the American] jumps into the train after it has started and jumps out before it has stopped; and he never once gets left behind, or breaks a leg.

The Unknowable

The young man who has not wept is a savage, and the old man who will not laugh is a fool.

Dialogues in Limbo. III

Beauty is pleasure regarded as the quality of a thing.

The Sense of Beauty. On Nature of Beauty

The infinity which moves us is the sense of multiplicity in uniformity. Accordingly, things which have enough multiplicity, as the lights of a city seen across water, have an effect similar to that of the stars, if less intense; whereas a star, if alone, because the multiplicity is lacking, makes a wholly different impression.

Ibid. On Form

Beauty as we feel it is something indescribable: what it is or what it means can never be said.

The Sense of Beauty. On Expression

Beauty is a pledge of the possible conformity between the soul and nature, and consequently a ground of faith in the supremacy of the good.

The outlook wasn't brilliant for the Mudville nine that day.

Casey at the Bat.[1] Stanza 1

There was ease in Casey's manner as he stepped into his place,
There was pride in Casey's bearing, and a smile lit Casey's face,
And when, responding to the cheers, he lightly doffed his hat,
No stranger in the crowd could doubt 'twas Casey at the bat.

Ibid. Stanza 9

With a smile of Christian charity great Casey's visage shone;
He stilled the rising tumult, he bade the game go on.

Ibid. Stanza 10

Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright;
The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light,
And somewhere men are laughing and little children shout,
But there is no joy in Mudville, great Casey has struck out.

As our private memory is not a merely passive retention of sensations, so in literature the critical spirit is at work as a conscious energy of selection. The function of criticism is far removed from the surrender to luxurious revery.

Shelburne Essays. Criticism

Great music is a psychical storm, agitating to fathomless depths the mystery of the past within us. Or we might say that it is a prodigious incantation. There are tones that call up all ghosts of youth and joy and tenderness; — there are tones that evoke all phantom pains of perished passion; — there are tones that revive all dead sensations of majesty and might and glory, — all expired exultations, — all forgotten magnanimities. Well may the influence of music seem inexplicable to the man who idly dreams that his life began less than a hundred years ago! He who has been initiated into the truth knows that to every ripple of melody, to every billow of harmony, there answers within him, out of the Sea of Death and Birth, some eddying immeasurable of ancient pleasure and pain.

Shelburne Essays. Lafcadio Hearn

What a delight it is, at the end of a busy day, to throw one's self into an arm chair before a wood fire, and think. No, not think! muse is a better word. I am by no means sure that I've ever thought, and I'm not certain that I wish to; looking about me, I see thinkers, and it does not appear that they are any wiser or better or happier than I.

A Magnificent Farce. Chap. 7

Deeper than speech our love, stronger than life our tether,
But we do not fall on the neck nor kiss when we come together.

England's Answer

So long as The Blood endures,
I shall know that your good is mine: ye shall feel that my strength is yours:
In the day of Armageddon, at the last great fight of all,
That Our House stand together and the pillars do not fall.

Ibid.

Go to your work and be strong, halting not in your ways,
Baulking the end half-won for an instant dole of praise.
Stand to your work and be wise — certain of sword and pen,
Who are neither children nor God, but men in a world of men!

England's Answer

Ever the wide world over, lass,
Ever the trail held true,
Over the world and under the world,
And back at the last to you.

The Gipsy Trail. Stanza 2

The wild hawk to the wind-swept sky,
The deer to the wholesome wold
And the heart of a man to the heart of a maid,
As it was in the days of old.

Ibid. Stanza 11

Daughter am I in my mother's house;
But mistress in my own.

Our Lady of the Snows.[1] Stanza 1

Enslaved, illogical, elate,
He greets the embarrassed Gods, nor fears
To shake the iron hand of Fate
Or match with Destiny for beers.

An American. Stanza 13

Buy my English posies!
Kent and Surrey may — Violets of the Undercliff
Wet with Channel spray;
Cowslips from a Devon combe —
Midland furze afire.

The Flowers. Stanza 1

They change their skies above them,
But not their hearts that roam.

The Native-born. Stanza 2

Last toast — and your foot on the table! — that swept the land like flame, Till the fatted souls of the English were scourged with the thing called Shame.

*The Last of the Light Brigade.
Stanza 8*

God gives all men all earth to love,
But since man's heart is small,
Ordains for each one spot shall prove Belovèd over all.
Sussex. Stanza 12

A fool there was and he made his prayer
(Even as you and I!)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair (We called her the woman who did not care)
But the fool he called her his lady fair —
(Even as you and I!)
The Vampire. Stanza 1

Oh, the years we waste and the tears
we waste
And the work of our head and hand Belong to the woman who did not know . . .
And did not understand.
Ibid. Stanza 2

When Earth's last picture is painted, and the tubes are twisted and dried,
When the oldest colours have faded,
and the youngest critic has died,
We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it — lie down for an æon or two,
Till the Master of All Good Workmen shall put us to work anew.
When Earth's Last Picture Is Painted. Stanza 1

And only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame;
But each for the joy of the working,
and each, in his separate star, Shall draw the Thing as he sees It for the God of Things as They Are!
Ibid. Stanza 3

Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet, Till Earth and Sky stand presently at God's great Judgment Seat.
But there is neither East nor West, Border,
nor Breed, nor Birth,
When two strong men stand face to face, though they come from the ends of the earth!
The Ballad of East and West

Send the road is clear before you when old Spring-fret comes o'er you,
And the Red Gods call for you!

Cock the gun that is not loaded, cook the frozen dynamite —
But oh, beware my Country, when my Country grows polite!
Et Dona Ferentes. Stanza 11

A Tinker out of Bedford,
A vagrant oft in quod,
A private under Fairfax,
A minister of God, —
Two hundred years and thirty Ere Armageddon came
His single hand portrayed it,
And Bunyan was his name!
The Holy War. Stanza 1

Broke to every known mischance, lifted over all
By the light sane joy of life, the buckler of the Gaul;
Furious in luxury, merciless in toil.
France [1913]

Strictest judge of her own worth, gentlest

Ancient Right unnoticed as the breath we draw — Leave to live by no man's leave, underneath the law.
The Old Issue. Stanza 6

We have had a jolly good lesson, and it serves us jolly well right!
The Lesson [1902]. Stanza 2

We have forty million reasons for failure, but not a single excuse.
Ibid. Stanza 8

With the flannelled fools at the wicket or the muddied oafs at the goals.
The Islanders [1902]

No doubt but ye are the People — absolute, strong, and wise;
Whatever your heart has desired ye have not withheld from your eyes.

Ibid.

Creation's cry goes up on high
From age to cheated age:
"Send us the men who do the work
For which they draw the wage!"
The Wage-Slaves. Stanza 3

This is our lot if we live so long and labour unto the end —
That we outlive the impatient years and the much too patient friend:
And because we know we have breath in our mouth and think we have thoughts in our head,
We shall assume that we are alive, whereas we are really dead.
The Old Men. Stanza 1

Take up the White Man's burden.
The White Man's Burden. Stanza 1

The tumult and the shouting dies;
The Captains and the Kings depart:
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Recessional. Stanza 2

Lest we forget — lest we forget! [1]

Recessional. Stanza 3

But, spite all modern notions, I've found her first and best —
The only certain packet for the Islands of the Blest.
The Three-Decker. Stanza 1

One was Admiral of the North from Solway Firth to Skye,
And one was Lord of the Wessex Coast and all the lands thereby,
And one was Master of the Thames from Limehouse to Blackwall,
And he was Chaplain of the Fleet — the bravest of them all.

"It's pretty, but is it Art?"
The Conundrum of the Workshops

Ah! what avails the classic bent
And what the cultured word,
Against the undoctored incident
That actually occurred?
The Benefactors. Stanza 1

It is not learning, grace nor gear,
Nor easy meat and drink,
But bitter pinch of pain and fear
That makes creation think.
Ibid. Stanza 3

There are nine and sixty ways of constructing tribal lays,
And every single one of them is right.
In the Neolithic Age. Stanza 5

You must hack through much deposit
Ere you know for sure who was it

The Female of the Species. Stanza 1

For as we come and as we go (and deadly-soon go we!)
The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!
A Pilgrim's Way. Stanza 1

And when they bore me overmuch, I will not shake mine ears, Recalling many thousand such whom I have bored to tears.
And when they labour to impress, I will not doubt nor scoff;
Since I myself have done no less and — sometimes pulled it off.

The Sons of Mary seldom bother, for they have inherited that good part;
But the Sons of Martha favour their Mother of the careful soul and the troubled heart.[2]
The Sons of Martha. Stanza 1

It is their care in all the ages to take the buffet and cushion the shock.
It is their care that the gear engages; it is their care that the switches lock.
Ibid. Stanza 2

Raise ye the stone or cleave the wood[1] to make a path more fair or flat;
Lo, it is black already with blood some Son of Martha spilled for that!
Not as a ladder from Earth to Heaven, not as a witness to any creed,
But simple service simply given to his own kind in their common need.
The Sons of Martha. Stanza 7

They have cast their burden upon the Lord, — and the Lord He lays it on Martha's Sons!
Ibid. Stanza 8

My son was killed while laughing at some jest. I would I knew What it was, and it might serve me in a time when jests are few.

The snow lies thick on Valley Forge,
The ice on the Delaware,
But the poor dead soldiers of King George
They neither know nor care.
The American Rebellion. II, After, Stanza 1

If you're off to Philadelphia in the morning,
You mustn't take my stories for a guide.
There's little left, indeed, of the city you will read of,
And all the folk I write about have died.
Philadelphia. Stanza 1

When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre,
He'd 'eard men sing by land an' sea;
An' what he thought 'e might require,
'E went an' took — the same as me!
When 'Omer Smote 'is Bloomin' Lyre. Stanza 1

Our England is a garden, and such gardens are not made
By singing: — "Oh, how beautiful!" and sitting in the shade.
The Glory of the Garden. Stanza 5

Oh, Adam was a gardener, and God who made him sees That half a proper gardener's work is done upon his knees.

And I do things with a pen,
And you sit up in a conning tower
Bossing eight hundred men.
Inscription to Robley D. Evans

As I pass through my incarnations in every age and race,
I make my proper prostrations to the gods of the Market Place;
Peering through reverent fingers, I watch them flourish and fall,
And the Gods of the Copybook Maxims, I notice, outlast them all.
The Gods of the Copybook Maxims. Stanza 1

Master, this is Thy Servant.
He is rising eight weeks old.
He is mainly Head and Tummy.
His legs are uncontrolled.
His Apologies [Scottish terrier]

There rise her timeless capitals of empires daily born,
Whose plinths are laid at midnight and whose streets are packed at morn;
And here come tired youths and maids that feign to love or sin

[1] In literature quotation is good only when the writer whom I follow goes my way, and, being better mounted than I, gives me a cast. — R. W. EMERSON: Quotation and Originality

[1] Of the several traditions relating to the origin of this remark, the most reasonable one traces it to John Motley Morehead [1796–1866], who was Governor of North Carolina 1841–1845. He was visited by James H. Hammond [1807–1864], who was Governor of South Carolina 1842–1844. They engaged in discussion and argument, and when the latter waxed hot, Governor Morehead was reported by a servant to have exclaimed: "It's a long time between drinks." — Personal letter from John Motley Morehead, Nov. 21, 1934

A Treasury of English Aphorisms: Introduction [1928]

What a bore it is, waking up in the morning always the same person. I wish I were unflinching and emphatic, and had big, bushy eyebrows and a Message for the Age. I wish I were a deep Thinker, or a great Ventriloquist.

Trivia. Green Ivory

But when in modern books, reviews, and thoughtful magazines I read about the Needs of the Age, its Complex Questions, its Dismays, Doubts, and Spiritual Agonies, I feel an impulse to go out and comfort that bewildered Epoch, to wipe away its tears, still its cries, and speak edifying words of Consolation to it.

Ibid. My Mission

And as at night I went past the Abbey, saw its walls towering high and solemn among the Autumn stars, I pictured to myself the white population in the vast darkness of its interior — all that hushed people of Heroes — ; not dead, I would think them, but animated with a still kind of life, and at last, after all their intolerable toils, the sounding tumult of battle, and perilous sea-paths, resting there, tranquil and satisfied and glorious, amid the epitaphs and allegorical figures of their tombs; — those high-piled, trophied, shapeless Abbey tombs, that long ago they toiled for, and laid down their gallant lives to win.

Ibid. The Abbey at Night

Unsaleability is almost the hallmark, in modern times, of quality in writing . . . the enormous and half-educated publics of present-day England and America, though welcoming the novels of our famous novelists, have as a rule acclaimed as masterpieces books that were soon forgotten, while ignoring at first all that was exquisite and rare.

A Ballad of Too Much Beauty. Stanza 1

One asked of Regret,
And I made reply:
To have held the bird,
And let it fly.
Regret

Canst thou be true across so many miles,
So many days that keep us still apart?
Ah, canst thou live upon remembered smiles,
And ask no warmer comfort for thy heart?
Love Platonic. 17

Bear to-day whate'er To-day may bring,

"W. COMPTON LEITH" (ORMONDE MADDOCK DALTON)[2] [1866–]

What song the Sirens sang? . . . They sang of all that is above fulfilment and beyond clear vision; of the immeasurable, the uncontained, the half-imagined; of that which is touched but never held, implored but unpossessed. . . . They sang the vileness of all who live contented upon an alms, and are at ease in bonds, the slaves whose servitude is made sweet by habit.

Lord, we are setting in this chosen ground
These tender nurslings, trusting in Thy grace
To cherish them in infancy, to guide

GILBERT MURRAY
[1866–   ]

Romantic plays with happy endings are almost of necessity inferior in artistic value to true tragedies. Not, one would hope, simply because they end happily; happiness in itself is certainly not less beautiful than grief; but because a tragedy in its great moments can generally afford to be sincere, while romantic plays live in an atmosphere of ingenuity and make-believe.

Preface to The Iphigenia in Tauris of Euripides

The enemy has no definite name, though in a certain degree we all know him. He who puts always the body before the spirit, the dead before the living; who makes things only in order to sell them; who has forgotten that there is such a thing as truth, and measures the world by advertisement or by money; who daily defiles the beauty that surrounds him and makes vulgar the tragedy.

Religio Grammatici [1918]

And shimmering with the rainbow hues of song!

John Keats

The steel decks rock with the lightning shock, and shake with the great recoil,

HERBERT GEORGE WELLS
[1866–1946]

The past is but the beginning of a beginning, and all that is and has been is but the twilight of the dawn. . . . A day will come when beings who are now latent in our thoughts and hidden in our loins shall stand upon this earth as one stands upon a footstool, and shall laugh and reach out their hands amid the stars.

The Discovery of the Future [1901]

Nothing could have been more obvious to the people of the early twentieth century than the rapidity with which war was becoming impossible. And as certainly they did not see it. They did not see it until the atomic bombs burst in their fumbling hands.

The World Set Free [1914]

How encumbered the world had become! It was ailing with a growth of unmeaning things. It was entangled, feverish, confused. It was in sore need of release, and I suppose that nothing less than the violence of those bombs could have released it and made it a healthy world again. . . . You who are younger cannot imagine the mixture of desperate hope and protesting despair in which we who could believe in the possibilities of science lived in those years before atomic energy came.

Ibid.

The catastrophe of the atomic bombs which shook men out of cities and businesses and economic relations, shook them also out of their old-established habits of thought, and out of the lightly held beliefs and prejudices that came down to them from the past.

The Shape of Things to Come.[1]

Title of book of social prognostics [1933]

The crazy combative patriotism that plainly threatens to destroy civilization is very largely begotten by the schoolmaster and the schoolmistress in their history lessons. They take the growing mind at a naturally barbaric phase and they inflame and fix its barbarism.

The Informative Content of Education [1937]

The years from thirty to seventy were formerly a sort of dump for the consequences of the first three decades; now they are the main part of life, the years of work, expression and complete self-discovery, to which these earlier stages are the bright, delightful prelude.

A gifted small girl has explained that pins are a great means of saving life, "by not swallowing them."

Dramatic Values [1911]

Germany lay at our feet, a world's wonder of downfall, a very Lucifer, fallen, broken, bereaved beyond all the retributive griefs which Greek tragedy shows you afflicting the great who were insolent, wilful, and proud. But it was not enough for our small epicures of revenge. They wanted to twist the enemy's wrists, where he lay bound, and to run pins into his eyes.

Disenchantment. Chap. 13 [1922]

"The freedom of Europe," "The war to end war," "The overthrow of militarism," "The cause of civilization"—most people believe so little now in anything or anyone that they would find it hard to understand the simplicity and intensity of faith with which these phrases were once taken among our troops, or the certitude felt by hundreds of thousands of men who are now dead that if they were killed their monument would be a new Europe not soured or soiled with the hates and greeds of the old.

WILLIAM SYDNEY PORTER[2] ("O. HENRY")

[1862–1910]

No calamity so touches the common heart of humanity as does the straying of a little child. Their feet are so uncertain and feeble; the ways are so steep and strange.

The Four Million. Between Rounds

If men knew how women pass the time when they are alone, they'd never marry.

Ibid. Memoirs of a Yellow Dog

What a woman wants is what you're out of. She wants more of a thing when it's scarce.

Heart of the West. Cupid à la Carte

Love and business and family and religion and art and patriotism are nothing but shadows of words when a man's starving.

[2] Biographers give Porter's year of birth as 1862, while Who's Who in America, the information presumably supplied by himself, says 1867.

It was beautiful and simple as all truly great swindles are.

The Gentle Grafter. The Octopus Marooned

There are two times when you can never tell what is going to happen. One is when a man takes his first drink; and the other is when a woman takes her latest.

Ibid.

He was outwardly decent and managed to preserve his aquarium, but inside he was impromptu and full of unexpectedness.

It brings up happy old days when I was only a farmer and not an agriculturist.

Ibid. Modern Rural Sports

Living as high as prize fighters out of training.

Ibid. A Tempered Wind

Busy as a one-armed man with the nettle-rash pasting on wall-paper.

Ibid. The Ethics of Pig

Bagdad-on-the-Subway.[1]

Roads of Destiny. The Discounters of Money

History is bright and fiction dull with homely men who have charmed women.

Ibid. "Next to Reading Matter"

You can't appreciate home till you've left it, money till it's spent, your wife till she's joined a woman's club, nor Old Glory till you see it hanging on a broomstick on the shanty of a consul in a foreign town.

Ibid. The Fourth in Salvador

Men to whom life had appeared as a reversible coat — seamy on both sides.

Options. The Hiding of Black Bill

A man asleep is certainly a sight to make angels weep. Now, a woman asleep you regard as different. No matter how she looks, you know it's better for all hands for her to be that way.

Ibid.

The big city is like a mother's knee to many who have strayed far and found the roads rough beneath their uncertain feet. At dusk they come home and sit upon the door-step.

Options. Supply and Demand

Better fifty years of Europe than a cyclone in the bay.[1]

Ibid. He Also Serves

She would have made a splendid wife, for crying only made her eyes more bright.

Ibid. No Story

A kind of mixture of fools and angels — they rush in and fear to tread at the same time.

Ibid. The Moment of Victory

I was made by a Dago and presented to the American people on behalf of the French Government for the purpose of welcomin' Irish immigrants into the Dutch city of New York.

Sixes and Sevens. The Lady Higher Up[2]

May his liver turn to water, and the bones of him crack in the cold of his heart. May dog fennel grow upon his ancestors' graves, and the grandsons of his children be born without eyes. May whiskey turn to clabber in his mouth, and every time he sneezes may he blister the soles of his feet. And the smoke of his pipe — may it make his eyes water, and the drops fall on the grass that his cows eat and poison the butter that he spreads on his bread.[3]

Ibid. Transformation of Martin Burney

A straw vote only shows which way the hot air blows.

Rolling Stones. A Ruler of Men

We may achieve climate, but weather is thrust upon us.

Ibid. A Fog in Santone

Take it from me — he's got the goods.

The Unprofitable Servant

"You can tell your paper," the great man said,
"I refused an interview.
I have nothing to say on the question, sir;

Poems. Nothing to Say

Most wonderful of all are words, and how they make friends one with another, being oft associated, until not even obituary notices them do part.

Whirligigs. Calloway's Code

It couldn't have happened anywhere but in little old New York.[1]

Ibid. A Little Local Color

When a poor man finds a long-hidden quarter-dollar that has slipped through a rip in his vest lining, he sounds the pleasure of life with a deeper plummet than any millionaire can hope to cast.

The Voice of the City. The Complete Life of John Hopkins You're the goods.

Ibid. From Each According to His Ability

Ready to melt in the crucible of her ire a little more gold plating from the wrought steel chains of matrimony.

The Trimmed Lamp. The Pendulum

There is one day that is ours. There is one day when all we Americans who are not self-made go back to the old home to eat saleratus biscuits and marvel how much nearer to the porch the old pump looks than it used to. . . . Thanksgiving Day . . . is the one day that is purely American.

Ibid. Two Thanksgiving Day Gentlemen

He no longer saw a rabble, but his brothers seeking the ideal.

Ibid. Brickdust Row

One day the christeners of apartment houses and the cognominators of sleeping-cars will meet, and there will be some jealous and sanguinary knifing.

Ibid. The Country of Elusion

Perhaps there is no happiness in life so perfect as the martyr's.

Ibid.

Bohemia is nothing more than the little country in which you do not live.

The Trimmed Lamp. The Country of Elusion

Lost, your Excellency. Lost associations and societies. Lost right reverends and wrong reverends of every order. Lost reformers and lawmakers, born with heavenly compassion in your hearts, but with the reverence of money in your souls. And lost thus around us every day.[1]

Ibid. Elsie in New York

A story with a moral appended is like the bill of a mosquito. It bores you, and then injects a stinging drop to irritate your conscience.

Strictly Business. The Gold that Glittered

Except in street cars one should never be unnecessarily rude to a lady.

Ibid.

She plucked from my lapel the invisible strand of lint (the universal act of woman to proclaim ownership).

Ibid. A Ramble in Aphasia

East is East, and West is San Francisco, according to Californians. Californians are a race of people; they are not merely inhabitants of a State. They are the Southerners of the West.

Ibid. A Municipal Report

Take of London fog 30 parts; malaria 10 parts; gas leaks 20 parts; dewdrops gathered in a brick-yard at sunrise 25 parts; odor of honeysuckle 15 parts. Mix. The mixture will give you an approximate conception of a Nashville drizzle.

Ibid.

There was too much scenery and fresh air. What I need is a steam-heated flat with no ventilation or exercise.

Letter [April 15, 1910]

Turn up the lights; I don't want to go home in the dark.

Last words (quoted in the biography by C. ALPHONSO SMITH)

There is an incongruity in the death of the young that shocks, set off as it is in contrast sharp against life, youth and vitality. But there is a majesty and an eloquence in the death of the aged that nothing can touch. A link with the far past is gone. A bridge is broken. I believe in my job. It may not be a very important job, but it is mine. I believe in my fellowman. I believe in my country. If it is not the best country in the world, it is partly because I am not the kind of a man that I should be. I believe in my home. There is no other place in all the world which fills its place, and heaven can only be a larger home, with a Father who is all-wise and patient and tender. I believe in to-day. It is all that I can possess. The past is of value only as it can make the life of to-day fuller and more free. There is no assurance of to-morrow. I want to make good to-day.

Delays Are Dangerous. Stanza 1

The books we think we ought to read are poky, dull and dry;
The books that we would like to read we are ashamed to buy;
The books that people talk about we never can recall;
And the books that people give us, Oh, they're the worst of all.

"Fifteen-two and a pair" —
Look at them! Granny and Gramp', Playing so peacefully there —
And what of the wild young scamp[2]
Who fashioned this quiet game
For numberless Darbies and Joans?
Gone with the wind like a flame;
Peace to his mouldering bones!

WILLIAM HENRY DAVIES
[1871–1940]

A poor life this if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare.
Leisure

They sniffed, poor things, for their green fields,
They cried so loud I could not sleep:
For fifty thousand shillings down
I would not sail again with sheep.
Sheep. Stanza 5

So every time we passed it by,
Sailing to England's slaughter-house,
Eight ragged sheep-men — tramps and thieves —
Would stroke that sheep's black nose.
A Child's Pet. Stanza 5

What glorious sunsets have their birth
In Cities fouled by smoke!
This tree — whose roots are in a drain —
Becomes the greenest Oak!
Love's Rivals

Look, there's a rainbow now!
See how that lovely rainbow throws
Her jewelled arm around
This world, when the rain goes.
The Rainbow. Stanza 2

When our two souls have left this mortal clay,
And, seeking mine, you think that mine is lost —

Look for me first in that Elysian glade
Where Lesbia is, for whom the birds sing most.
Birds. Stanza 1

Fools have their second childhood, but the Great Still keep their first, and have no second state.
Men That Think

I am as certain of my song,
When first it warms the brain,
As woman of her unborn child,
Or wind that carries rain.
The Birth of Song

Scorn not because my body lives
In such a little place;
Think how my mind, on that account,
Inhabits greater space.
Space. Stanza 1

The finest scarf or collar made,
To keep a woman warm,
By night or day, on sea or land,
Is still a lover's arm.
Ibid. Stanza 3

A little gold that's sure each week;
That comes not from my living kind,
But from a dead man in his grave,
Who cannot change his mind.
Truly Great. Stanza 2

Nature's real king, to whom the power was given
To make an inkdrop scent the world for ever.
Shakespeare

I had Ambition, by which sin
The angels fell;
I climbed and, step by step, O Lord,
Ascended into Hell.
Ambition

I'll make my Joy a secret thing,
My face shall wear a mask of care;
And those who hunt a Joy to death,
Shall never know what sport is there!
Hunting Joy, Stanza 3

The mind, with its own eyes and ears,
May for these others have no care;
No matter where this body is,
The mind is free to go elsewhere. . . .
And when I'm passing near St. Paul's,
I see, beyond the dome and crowd,
Twm Barlum, that green pap in Gwent,
With its dark nipple in a cloud.
The Mind's Liberty

Strive not for gold, for greedy fools Measure themselves by poor men never;
Their standards still being richer men,
Makes them poor ever.

Bitter are the tears of a child:
Sweeten them.
Deep are the thoughts of a child:
Quiet them.
Sharp is the grief of a child:
Take it from him.
Soft is the heart of a child:
Do not harden it.
A Child

Giving presents is a talent; to know what a person wants, to know when and how to get it, to give it lovingly, and well. Unless a character possesses this talent there is no moment more annihilating to ease than that in which a present is received and given.

Vermont is a State I love. I could not look upon the peaks of Ascutney, Killington, Mansfield, and Equinox without being moved in a way that no other scene could move me. It was here that I first saw the light of day; here I received my bride; here my dead lie pillowed on the loving breast of our everlasting hills. I love Vermont because of her hills and valleys, her scenery and invigorating climate, but most of all because of her indomitable people. They are a race of pioneers who have almost beggared themselves to serve others. If the spirit of liberty should vanish in other parts of our Union and support of our institutions should languish, it could all be replenished from the generous store held by the people of this brave little State of Vermont.

It is preoccupation with possession, more than anything else, that prevents men from living freely and nobly.

Principles of Social Reconstruction

Mathematics possesses not only truth, but supreme beauty — a beauty cold and austere, like that of sculpture, without appeal to any part of our weaker nature, sublimely pure, and capable of a stern perfection such as only the greatest art can show.

The Study of Mathematics

Mathematics takes us into the region of absolute necessity, to which not only the actual world, but every possible world, must conform.

Economic distress will teach men, if anything can, that realities are less dangerous than fancies, that fact-finding is more effective than fault-finding.

Progress and Power [1935]

The significance of man is that he is that part of the universe that asks the question, What is the significance of Man? He alone can stand apart imaginatively and, regarding himself and the universe in their eternal aspects, pronounce a judgment: The significance of man is that he is insignificant and is aware of it.

Progress and Power [1935]

Those of us who think that we are a nation of starry-eyed idealists[1] who have been twice tricked by the British into a European war in order to pull their chestnuts out of the fire have read the history of this country to little purpose. . . . The truth is rather that the existence and friendliness of the British Empire and the power of the British Fleet have for more than a century enabled us to roast our own chestnuts at leisure and eat them in security.

Farewell, My Friends

It is possible that our race may be an accident, in a meaningless universe, living its brief life uncared-for, on this dark, cooling star: but even so — and all the more — what marvelous creatures we are! What fairy story, what tale from the Arabian Nights of the jinns, is a hundredth part as wonderful as this true fairy story of simians! It is so much more heartening, too, than the tales we invent. A universe capable of giving birth to many such accidents is — blind or not — a good world to live in, a promising universe.

We'll dance a merry saraband from here to drowsy Samarcand;
Along the sea, across the land, the birds are flying South,
And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me,
With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth.

Commonplace people dislike tragedy, because they dare not suffer and cannot exult. The truth and rapture of man are holy things, not lightly to be scorned. A carelessness of life and beauty marks the glutton, the idler, and the fool in their deadly path across history.

The Tragedy of Nan. Preface [1909]

Man consists of body, mind, and imagination. His body is faulty, his mind untrustworthy, but his imagination has made him remarkable. In some centuries, his imagination has made life on this planet an intense practice of all the lovelier energies.

Shakespeare and Spiritual Life [1924]

There is another way to truth: by the minute examination of facts. That is the way of the scientist: a hard and noble and thankless way. It is not the way of the great poet, the rare unreasonable who comes once in ten generations. He apprehends truth by power: the truth which he apprehends cannot be defined, save by greater power, and there is no greater power.

Oh, grieve not, ladies, if at night
Ye wake to feel your beauty going.
It was a web of frail delight,
Inconstant as an April snowing.

Grieve Not, Ladies. Stanza 1

ABBIE FARWELL BROWN
[1875–1927]

They named their rocky farmlands,
Their hamlets by the sea,
For the mother-towns that bred them
In racial loyalty.

Names. Stanza 7

Now over friendly waters
The old towns, each to each,
Call with the kinship in a name:
One race, one truth, one speech.

Ibid. Stanza 10

No matter what my birth may be,
No matter where my lot is cast,
I am the heir in equity
Of all the precious Past.

[1] What mortal ever heard Any good of George the Third?
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR [1775–1864], after hearing Thackeray's lectures on the Four Georges.

JOHN BUCHAN, LORD TWEEDSMUIR
[1875–1940]

In perfect honour, perfect truth,
And gentleness to all mankind,
You trod the golden paths of youth,
Then left the world and youth behind.
Ah, no! 'tis we who fade and fail —
And you, from Time's slow torments free,
Shall pass from strength to strength and scale
The steeps of immortality.

Fratri Dilectissimo, W. H. B. Stanza 5

I could manage the French and Italians and Poles,
The Russians and Tartars and yellow Mongols,
The Serbs and the Belgians, the English and Greeks,
And even the lads that gang wantin' the breeks;
But what o' thae Fusilier Jocks,
That stopna for duntin' and knocks?
They'd rin with a yell
Ower the planestanes o' Hell.

In Praise of the Royal Scots Fusiliers. Stanza 2

We can only pay our debt to the past by putting the future in debt to ourselves.

Address to the People of Canada, on the Coronation of King George VI, May 12, 1937

LOUISE DRISCOLL
[1875–   ]

Happy New Year! There's always hope, there's promise!
No sorrow ever held a crocus back.
The rigid earth revives, day breaks; to-morrow,
Deliberate, comes down the starry track.

New Year. Stanza 8

There you will find what Every man needs,
Wild religion
Without any creeds.

Spring Market. Stanza 5

You can't forget a garden
When you have planted seed —
When you have watched the weather
And know a rose's need.

You Can't Forget a Garden

Villon among the birds is he,
A bold, bright rover, bad and free;
Yet not without such loveliness
As makes the curse upon him less.

GILBERT EMERY
[1875–1945]

They're a poor lot, the men, all of 'em, and dirty, too — but the thing is, darlin', to get one that cleans easy.

Tarnish, Act III [1923]

Strange, we so toil to fashion for our unseen ends
The splendors that the tarnish of this world doth mar —
Such palaces that crumble to a ruined age,
Such garbled memories upon Fame's fragile page —
When all the lasting glory of our life depends Upon a little Child, a stable, and a star.

The Power and the Glory

ELLEN THORNEYCROFT FOWLER
[1875–1929]

The inner half of every cloud
Is bright and shining;
I therefore turn my clouds about,
And always wear them inside out
To show the lining.

The Wisdom of Folly. Stanza 3

ROBERT FROST
[1875–   ]

Something there is that doesn't love a wall.

Mending Wall

My apple trees will never get across
And eat the cones under his pines, I tell him.

He only says, "Good fences make good neighbors."

Mending Wall

I'd like to get away from earth awhile
And then come back to it and begin over.
May no fate wilfully misunderstand me
And half grant what I wish and snatch me away
Not to return. Earth's the right place for love:
I don't know where it's likely to go better.

Birches

The nearest friends can go
With anyone to death, comes so far short
They might as well not try to go at all.
No, from the time when one is sick to death,
One is alone, and he dies more alone.
Friends make pretence of following to the grave,
But before one is in it, their minds are turned
And making the best of their way back to life
And living people, and things they understand.

Home Burial

Nothing to look backward to with pride,
And nothing to look forward to with hope.

The Death of the Hired Man

"Home is the place where, when you have to go there
They have to take you in." "I should have called it Something you somehow haven't to deserve."

Ibid.

As a child misses the unsaid Good-night,
And falls asleep with heartache.

The Black Cottage

Most of the change we think we see in life
Is due to truths being in and out of favour.

Ibid.

I shall be telling this with a sigh

He said, in climate none had ever died there
A natural death.

New Hampshire. Stanza 3

In the market with a climate.

Ibid.

Do you know,
Considering the market, there are more
Poems produced than any other thing?
No wonder poets sometimes have to seem
So much more business-like than business men.
Their wares are so much harder to get rid of.

Ibid. Stanza 17

She's one of the two best states in the Union.
Vermont's the other.

Ibid. Stanza 18

Anything I can say about New Hampshire
Will serve almost as well about Vermont,

Excepting that they differ in their mountains.
The Vermont mountains stretch extending straight;
New Hampshire mountains curl up in a coil.
New Hampshire. Stanza 19

The sun was warm but the wind was chill.
You know how it is with an April day:
When the sun is out and the wind is still,
You're one month on in the middle of May.
But if you so much as dare to speak,
A cloud comes over the sunlit arch,
A wind comes off a frozen peak,
And you're two months back in the middle of March.
Two Tramps in Mud Time

Why make so much of fragmentary blue
In here and there a bird, or butterfly,
Or flower, or wearing-stone, or open eye,
When heaven presents in sheets the solid hue?
Fragmentary Blue. Stanza 1

Keep cold, young orchard. Good-bye and keep cold.

Some say the world will end in fire,
Some say in ice.
From what I've tasted of desire
I hold with those who favor fire.
But if it had to perish twice,
I think I know enough of hate
To say that for destruction ice
Is also great
And would suffice.
Fire and Ice

Before man came to blow it right
  The wind once blew itself untaught,
And did its loudest day and night
  In any rough place where it caught.
The Aim Was Song. Stanza 1

Man came to tell it what was wrong:
  It hadn't found the place to blow;
It blew too hard — the aim was song.
Ibid. Stanza 2

MINNIE LOUISE HASKINS
[1875–]

And I said to the man who stood at the gate of the year: "Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown." And he replied: "Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than light and safer than a known way."[1] So I went forth, and finding the Hand of God, trod gladly into the night. And He led me towards the hills and the breaking of day in the lone East.

Alone?

Is he alone at whose right side rides Courage, with Skill within the cockpit and Faith upon the left? Does solitude surround the brave when Adventure leads the way and Ambition reads the dials? Is there no company with him for whom the air is cleft by Daring and the darkness is made light by Emprise?

True, the fragile bodies of his fellows do not weigh down his plane; true, the fretful minds of weaker men are lacking from his crowded cabin; but as his airship keeps her course he holds communion with those rarer spirits that inspire to intrepidity and by their sustaining potency give strength to arm, resource to mind, content to soul.

Alone? With what other companions would that man fly to whom the choice were given?

[1] 'Tis the human touch in this world that counts,
The touch of your hand and mine,
Which means far more to the fainting heart
Than shelter and bread and wine.
SPENCER MICHAEL FREE [1856–1938]

A wavering wedge on the high, bright blue —
I tighten my lips to keep from crying:
"Beautiful birds, let me go with you."

Wild Geese. Stanza 1

God wrote His loveliest poem on the day
He made the first tall silver poplar tree,
And set it high upon a pale-gold hill
For all the new enchanted earth to see.

Silver Poplars. Stanza 1

GEORGE ALLAN ENGLAND
[1877–1936]

He yawned, and laid his cigaret aside,
And on the baggage-check, grimly stamped "Body," wrote
Two simple words. Scrawled words, with careless fingers. Just a note
Of this poor shipment's worthlessness.
She who had died,
Two days before, was sunshine, joy, and life
To all of us.

"No Value"

"No Value!" And the world had ceased to turn:
And all the gold from here to Babylon might burn
To dross, unminded, for we bore our dead.

The Fairies have never a penny to spend,
They haven't a thing put by,
But theirs is the dower of bird and of flower,
And theirs are the earth and the sky.

The Fairies Have Never a Penny to Spend. Stanza 1

And though you be foolish or though you be wise,
With hair of silver or gold,
You could never be young as the fairies are,
And never as old.

Ibid. Stanza 2

A fairy went a-marketing —
She bought a little fish;
She put it in a crystal bowl
Upon a golden dish.

A Fairy Went A-Marketing. Stanza 1

Cheerfully adorn the proudest table, Since yours it is to bear the glorious label —
"Richest in Vitamines!"

SIR JAMES HOPWOOD JEANS
[1877–1946]

Taking a very gloomy view of the future of the human race, let us suppose that it can only expect to survive for two thousand million years longer, a period about equal to the past age of the earth. Then, regarded as a being destined to live for threescore years and ten, humanity, although it has been born in a house seventy years old, is itself only three days old.

If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill,
Be a scrub in the valley — but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.
Be the Best of Whatever You Are. Stanza 1

The tree that never had to fight
For sun and sky and air and light;
That stood out in the open plain
And always got its share of rain,
Never became a forest king,
But lived and died a scrubby thing.
Good Timber. Stanza 1

Time brings not death, it brings but changes;
I know he rides, but rides afar,
To-day some other planet ranges
And camps to-night upon a star
Where all his other comrades are.
A Comrade Rides Ahead: To the Memory of Emerson Hough [1857–1923]. Stanza 1

Here's the secret of the riddle for successes everywhere —
There's some little second fiddle that is carrying the air.
The Plain Member. Stanza 3

The river belongs to the Nation,
The levee, they say, to the State;
The Government runs navigation,
The Commonwealth, though, pays the freight.
Now, here is the problem that's heavy —
Please, which is the right or the wrong —
When the water runs over the levee,
To whom does the river belong?
Uncle Sam's River. Stanza 1

Courage is to feel
The daily daggers of relentless steel
And keep on living.
Courage. Stanza 2

You have to believe in happiness,
Or happiness never comes. . . .
Ah, that's the reason a bird can sing —
On his darkest day he believes in Spring.

ANGELO PATRI
[1877–   ]

In one sense there is no death. The life of a soul on earth lasts beyond his departure. You will always feel that life touching yours, that voice speaking to you, that spirit looking out of other eyes, talking to you in the familiar things he touched, worked with, loved as familiar friends. He lives on in your life and in the lives of all others that knew him.[1]

The Sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea are made of the same water. It flows down, clear and cool, from the heights of Hermon and the roots of the cedars of Lebanon. The Sea of Galilee makes beauty of it, for the Sea of Galilee has an outlet. It gets to give. It gathers in its riches that it may pour them out again to fertilize the Jordan plain. But the Dead Sea with the same water makes horror. For the Dead Sea has no outlet. It gets to keep.

O Boys, the times I've seen!
The things I've done and known!
If you knew where I have been Or half the joys I've had,
You never would leave me alone;
But pester me to tell,
Swearing to keep it dark,
What . . . but I know quite well:
Every solicitor's clerk
Would break out and go mad;
And all the dogs would bark!
O Boys! O Boys!

And Peace on Earth is a joke,
Which, anyhow, telling destroys;
So better go on with your work:
But Boys! O Boys! O Boys!

part in the Haymarket Riot at Chicago, May 4, 1886. In 1896 and 1900 he supported W. J. Bryan's candidacy for the Presidency.

[1] Written in November, 1918.

[1] Charles-Augustin Sainte-Beuve [1804–1869] is the first writer known to have likened a poet's retreat to an ivory tower. In his Pensées d'Août, To M. Villemain, St. 3, dated October, 1837, he wrote:

Hugo, dur partisan
. . . combattit sous l'armure,
Et tint haut sa bannière au milieu du murmure:
Il la maintient encore; et Vigny, plus secret,
Comme en sa tour d'ivoire, avant midi, rentrait (Hugo, strong partisan . . . fought in armor,
And he'd high his banner in the midst of the tumult:
He still holds it; and Vigny, more discreet,
As if in his tower of ivory, retired before noon).

The poet, retired in his Tower of Ivory, isolated, according to his desire, from the world of man, resembles, whether he so wishes or not, another solitary figure, the watcher enclosed for months at a time in a lighthouse at the head of a cliff. — Jules de Gaultier [1858–]: La Guerre et les Destinées de l'Art

The ivory tower awakened my desire:
I longed to enclose myself in selfish bliss.

The sea has always been a seducer, a careless lying fellow, not feminine, as many writers imagine, but strongly masculine in its allurement. The king of the sea, with his whiskers of weed and his trident and dolphins, truly represents the main and gives it character. The sea, like a great sultan, supports thousands of ships, his lawful wives. These he caresses and chastises as the case may be. This explains the feminine gender of all proper vessels.

The milkman alone is enough to redeem the night from its undeserved evil reputation. Topics of the Times, Nov. 30, 1944

No colonization without misrepresentation.

No Mean City.[1] Chap. 1 [1944]

People who want to understand democracy should spend less time in the library with Aristotle and more time on the buses and in the subway.

Ibid. Chap. 2

The people whom the sons and daughters find it hardest to understand are the fathers and mothers, but young people can get on very well with the grandfathers and grandmothers.

Ibid. Chap. 18

To renew ties with the past need not always be daydreaming; it may be tapping old sources of strength for new tasks.

Calvin Coolidge [1872–1933]: Statement to reporters, Rapid City, South Dakota, August 2, 1927

[1] A citizen of no mean city. — Acts XXI:39

No Mean City. Chap. 20

The years by themselves do not make a place historic. It is men who give the color of history to a place by their deeds there or by merely having lived there. . . . A city is historic, vitally historic, in which famous men have lived, dined, talked with their friends, or have written books and painted pictures or composed music, or have peopled with the imaginary children of their brain.

Ibid. Chap. 27

No man is really depraved who can spend half an hour by himself on the floor playing with his little boy's electric train.

Ibid. Chap. 28

Nearly a century ago the foreigners were saying that the national American motto was "Hurry up!" They were the first words which the immigrant heard at Castle Garden, probably from his own kinsmen who had preceded him to America by a few years and were now hustling him home from the dock.

Ibid. Chap. 30

Famous remarks are very seldom quoted correctly.

ROY ATWELL
[1880–]

In these days of indigestion
It is oftentimes a question
As to what to eat and what to leave alone;
For each microbe and bacillus
Has a different way to kill us,
And in time they always claim us for their own.

This London like a land of old,
The land of Eldorado.

Romance. Stanza 1

A hard task and the muscle to achieve it,
A fierce noon and a well-contented gloam,
A good strife and no great regret to leave it,
A still night — and the far red lights of home.

We have a phrase in English "straight from the horse's mouth." I never knew why the particular animal chosen was a horse, especially as most horses are generally not very communicative. But the meaning is clear enough. What I shall say in Japan in the ensuing months comes "straight from the horse's mouth." [1]

ROBERT BROWNING HAMILTON

[1880–]

I walked a mile with Pleasure.
She chattered all the way,
But left me none the wiser
For all she had to say.

I walked a mile with Sorrow,
And ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her
When Sorrow walked with me!

Along the Road

ROBERT CORTES HOLLIDAY

[1880–]

The best, the most exquisite automobile is a walking-stick; and one of the finest things in life is going a journey with it.

Walking-Stick Papers [1918]

They [women] are too personal for the high enjoyment of going a journey They must be forever thinking about you or about themselves; with them everything in the world is somehow tangled up in these matters; and when you are with them (you cannot help it, or if you could they would not allow it), you must be forever thinking about them or yourself.

Ibid.

There is not in the press any reading so improving as the "obits" . . . I doubt very much indeed whether any one could read obituaries every day for a year and remain a bad man or woman.

Walking-Stick Papers [1918]

The Deceased

We go into the feature headed "Died," a department similar in design to that on the literary page headed "Books Received." We are arranged alphabetically according to the first letter of our surnames. We are set in small type with lines following the name line indented. It is difficult for me to tell with certainty from the printed page but I think we are set without leads.

[1880–]

The virulence of the national appetite for bogus revelation.

A Book of Prefaces. Chap. 1, Sect. 2

To the man with an ear for verbal delicacies — the man who searches painfully for the perfect word, and puts the way of saying a thing above the thing said — there is in writing the constant joy of sudden discovery, of happy accident.

Ibid. Chap. 2, Sect. 2

Poverty is a soft pedal upon all branches of human activity, not excepting the spiritual.

Ibid. Chap. 4, Sect. 3

Formalism is the hall-mark of the national culture.

Ibid. Sect. 6

All successful newspapers are ceaselessly querulous and bellicose. They never defend anyone or anything if they can help it; if the job is forced upon them, they tackle it by denouncing someone or something else.

Prejudices, First Series. Chap. 13

The great artists of the world are never Puritans, and seldom even ordinarily respectable.

Ibid. Chap. 16

To be in love is merely to be in a state of perceptual anaesthesia — to mistake an ordinary young man for a Greek god or an ordinary young woman for a goddess.

Ibid.

All the more pretentious American authors try to write chastely and elegantly; the typical literary product of the country is still a refined essay in the Atlantic Monthly, perhaps gently jocose but never rough — by Emerson, so to speak, out of Charles Lamb.

The American Language [1919]

Philadelphia is the most pecksniffian of American cities, and thus probably leads the world.

Ibid.

Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice.

Prejudices, Third Series [1922]

Poetry is a comforting piece of fiction set to more or less lascivious music.

Ibid.

Christian endeavor is notoriously hard on female pulchritude.

The Aesthetic Recoil

To be happy one must be (a) well fed, unhounded by sordid cares, at ease in Zion, (b) full of a comfortable feeling of superiority to the masses of one's fellow men, and (c) delicately and unceasingly amused according to one's taste. It is my contention that, if this definition be accepted, there is no country in the world wherein a man constituted as I am — a man of my peculiar weakness, vanities, appetites, and aversions — can be so happy as he can be in the United States. Going further, I lay down the doctrine that it is a sheer physical impossibility for such a man to live in the United States and not be happy.

On Being an American [1922]

The learned are seldom pretty fellows, and in many cases their appearance tends to discourage a love of study in the young.

The New Webster International Dictionary [1934]

The Gaseous Vertebrata who own, operate and afflict the universe have treated me with excessive politeness.

Newspaper Days: 1899–1906 [1941]

Quoted in New York Post, September 18, 1945

MENCKEN AND NATHAN [GEORGE JEAN NATHAN]
[1882–]

That all one has to do to gather a large crowd in New York is to stand on the curb a few moments and gaze intently at the sky.

That the postmasters in small towns read all the postcards.

That all theater box-office employés are very impolite and hate to sell a prospective patron a ticket.

That all newspaper reporters carry notebooks.

That, when shaving on a railway train, a man invariably cuts himself.

That the jokes in Punch are never funny.

That nicotine keeps the teeth in a sound condition.

That the wife of a rich man always wistfully looks back into the past and wishes she had married a poor man.

That the quality of the champagne may be judged by the amount of noise the cork makes when it is popped.

That all French women are very passionate, and will sacrifice everything to love.

That beer is very fattening.

That the cloth used in suits made in England is so good that it never wears out.

That Philadelphia is a very sleepy town.

That if one swallows an ounce of olive oil before going to a banquet, one will not get drunk.

That the worst actress in the company is always the manager's wife.

Love Will Find Out the Way

England, my mother,
Lift to my Western Sweetheart
One full cup of English mead, breathing of the May!
Pledge the may-flower in her face that you and ah, none other,

Across the dashing spray.
America, My Sweetheart. Stanza 1 (prologue to the American edition of Drake)

The wind was a torrent of darkness among the gusty trees,
The moon was a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas,
The road was a ribbon of moonlight over the purple moor,
And the highwayman came riding —
Riding — riding —
The highwayman came riding, up to the old inn-door.
The Highwayman. I, Stanza 1

Tales of the Mermaid Tavern: The Little Red Ring

I caught the fire from those who went before,

So the world shall sing of them — the white cliffs of England,
White, the glory of her sails, the banner of her pride.
One and all, — their seamen met and broke the dread Armada.
Only white may show the world the shield for which they died.
The White Cliffs.[1] Stanza 4

Queen Victoria. Chap. 6

In women's hearts he[2] had always read as in an open book. . . . He realised everything — the interacting complexities of circumstance and character, the pride of place mingled so inextricably with personal arrogance, the super-abundant emotionalism, the ingenuousness of outlook, the solid, the laborious respectability, shot through so incongruously by temperamental cravings for the coloured and the strange, the singular intellectual limitations. and the mysteriously essential female elements impregnating every particle of the whole. [1] Wealth comes only from production, and all that the wrangling grabbers, loafers and jobbers get to deal with comes from somebody's toil and sacrifice. Who, then, is he who provides it all? The Forgotten Man . . . delving away in patient industry, supporting his family, paying his taxes, casting his vote, supporting the church and the school . . . but he is the only one for whom there is no provision in the great scramble and the big divide. Such is the Forgotten Man. He works, he votes, generally he prays — but he always pays. . . . All the burdens fall on him, or on her, for the Forgotten Man is not seldom a woman. — WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER [1840–1910], Professor of Political and Social Science at Yale: The Forgotten Man [1883], a speech.

The Forgotten Man, title of address at North Carolina Teachers' College [1897]. — WALTER HINES PAGE [1855–1918]

All honor to the one that in this hour
Cries to the world as from a lighted tower —
Cries for the Man Forgotten.

EDWIN MARKHAM [1852–1940]: The Forgotten Man

[1] Nothing is so much to be feared as fear. — HENRY DAVID THOREAU: Quoted by Ralph Waldo Emerson: Essay on Thoreau, Centenary Edition of Emerson's Works, Vol. X, p. 480. In Thoreau's Journal, Sept. 7, 1851.

[2] I am as desirous of being a good neighbor as I am of being a bad subject. — HENRY DAVID THOREAU: On the Duty of Civil Disobedience [1848]

The test of our progress is not whether we add more to the abundance of those who have much; it is whether we provide enough for those who have too little.

Second Inaugural Address [January 20, 1937]

If they can take it, I can.

Replying to the suggestion that the inauguration ceremony be held indoors on account of bad weather [January 20, 1937]

War is a contagion.

Speech at Chicago [October 5, 1937]

Quarantine the aggressors.

On this tenth day of June, 1940, the hand that held the dagger has struck it into the back of its neighbor.[3]

Address to the Graduating Class, University of Virginia, Charlotteville [June 10, 1940]

And while I am talking to you, mothers and fathers, I give you one more assurance. I have said this before, but I shall say it again, and again, and again: Your boys are not going to be sent into any foreign wars.

Campaign speech in Boston [October 30, 1940]

We must be the great arsenal of democracy.

Message to Congress [January 6, 1941]

Four freedoms: The first is freedom of speech and expression — everywhere in the world. The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way, everywhere in the world. The third is freedom from want . . . everywhere in the world. The fourth is freedom from fear . . . anywhere in the world.

Ibid.

We, too, born to freedom, are willing to fight to maintain freedom. We, and all others who believe as deeply as we do, would rather die on our feet than live on our knees.

Response on receiving the degree of Doctor of Civil Law conferred by Oxford University, at a special convocation, Harvard University [June 19, 1941][1]

Men with a passion for anonymity.

Qualification for advisors and assistants

Yesterday, December 7, 1941 — a date which will live in infamy — the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked by naval and air forces of the Empire of Japan.

War Message to Congress [December 8, 1941]

Never before have we had so little time in which to do so much.

[1] Last week we had a sleigh-ride, with six white horses. We went like the wind over the hollows in the snow; — the driver called them "thank-you-ma'ams," because they make everybody bow. — HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW [1807–1882]: Kavanagh, Chapter 12 [1849]

Life's a road that's got a good many thank-you-ma'ams to go bump n' over. — OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES [1809–1894]: The Guardian Angel [1867]

"O Sue! let's ride tergether" — I wuz solemn

[1] Read by Major General Edwin M. Watson, serving as proxy for President Roosevelt.

We all know that books burn — yet we have the greater knowledge that books cannot be killed by fire. People die, but books never die. No man and no force can abolish memory. . . . In this war, we know, books are weapons.

Message to the American Booksellers Association, April 23, 1942

The American Unknown Soldier who lies here did not give his life on the fields of France merely to defend his American home for the moment that was passing. He gave it that his family, his neighbors and all his fellow Americans might live in peace in days to come. His hope was not fulfilled.

Address at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Washington [November 11, 1942]

Men's souls will be shaken with the violences of war. They fight not for the lust of conquest. They fight to end conquest. They fight to liberate. They fight to let justice arise, and tolerance and good-will among all Thy people. They yearn but for the end of battle, for their return to the haven of home. Some will never return. Embrace these, Father, and receive them, Thy heroic servants, into Thy kingdom. And for us at home — fathers, mothers, children, wives, sisters and brothers of brave men overseas, whose thoughts and prayers are ever with them — help us, Almighty God, to rededicate ourselves in renewed faith in Thee in this hour of great sacrifice.

Invasion Day Prayer [June 6, 1944]

During the Nineteenth Century, during that era of development and expansion on this continent we felt a natural isolation, geographic, economic and political, an isolation from the vast world which lay overseas. Not until this generation, roughly this century, have people here and elsewhere been compelled more and more to widen the orbit of their vision to include every part of the world.

Speech, broadcast, accepting the nomination for a fourth term as President [July 20, 1944]

All of our people — except full-blooded Indians — are immigrants, or descendants of immigrants, including even those who came here on the Mayflower.

Campaign speech in Boston [November 4, 1944]

A political party which works both sides of the street.

Ibid.

We have learned that we cannot live alone, in peace; that our own well-being is dependent on the well-being of other nations, far away. We have learned that we must live as men, and not as ostriches, nor as dogs in the manger. We have learned to be citizens of the world, members of the human community.

Fourth Term Inaugural Address [January 20, 1945]

There are a great many prima donnas in the world. All of them wish to be heard. There may be a little delay while we listen to more prima donnas.

Report of Crimea Conference to Congress [March 1, 1945]

More than an end to war, we want an end to the beginnings of all wars.

Address written for Jefferson Day Dinners broadcast, April 13, 1945 [President Roosevelt died suddenly, April 12, at Warm Springs, Georgia.]

The only limit to our realization of to-morrow will be our doubts of to-day.

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT AND WINSTON SPENCER CHURCHILL

The President of the United States and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, representing His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, have met at sea. . . . They have agreed upon the following joint dec'aration.

The Atlantic Charter, drawn up aboard U.S.S. Augusta, off the coast of Maine. Issued in Washington, August 14, 1941

FIRST, their countries seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other.

SECOND, they desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned. . . .

SIXTH, after the final destruction of the Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want. . . .

EIGHTH, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armament continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential.

to see your shipmates die.

The Open Boat. Stanza 4

As I went down by Hastings Mill I lingered in my going To smell the smell of piled-up deals and feel the salt wind blowing.

Hastings Mill. Stanza 1

Along the wharves in sailor town a singing whisper goes Of wind among the anchored ships, the wind that blows Off a broad brimming water, where the summer day had died
Like a wounded whale a-sounding in the sunset tide.

Sailor Town. Stanza 1

When the long day's tramp is over, when the journey's done,
I shall dip down from some hill-top at the going down o' the sun,
And turn in at the open door, and lay down staff and load,
And wash me clean of the heat o' the day, and white dust o' the road.

Journey's End. Stanza 1

"When a ship's no more than a ship to me, An' there's nowheres left as I want to see:
When the fun's all flat, an' the jokes all stale,
An' there ain't no taste in the cakes an'
ale,
You can stitch me up as soon as you like
In a corner o' wore-out sail," said Mike,

[3] Title of play by George S. Kaufman, 1925.

[4] Origin of the phrase is obscure; it dates from World War I. The musical comedy, Fifty Million Frenchmen, by Cole Porter, was produced in 1929. When Texas Guinan and her troupe were refused entry into France in 1931, she was quoted as saying: "It goes to show that fifty million French can be wrong." She promptly renamed her show Too Hot for Paris and toured the U. S. with it.

Statement to reporters, April 13, 1945, the day after his accession to the office of President of the United States

The responsibility of the great states is to serve and not to dominate the world.

First Address to Congress, April 16, 1945

When Kansas and Colorado have a quarrel over the water in the Arkansas River they don't call out the National Guard in each State and go to war over it. They bring a suit in the Supreme Court of the United States and abide by the decision. There isn't a reason in the world why we cannot do that internationally.

[1] An announcement more fateful for human history than the whole war itself. — The New York Herald Tribune, August 7, 1945.

[2] At Magny's dinner. They said that Berthelot had predicted that in a hundred years of physical and chemical science man would learn to know the atom, and that with this knowledge he would be able, at his will, to dim, extinguish or re-light the sun like a Carcel lamp. Claude Bernard, for his part, is said to have announced that with a hundred years more of physiological knowledge we would be able to make the organic law ourselves — to manufacture human life, in competition with the Creator.

For our part we did not raise any objection to all this talk, but we do believe that at that particular stage of scientific development, the good Lord, with a flowing white beard, will arrive on Earth with his chain of keys and will say to humanity, just like they do at the Art Gallery at five o'clock, "Gentlemen, it's closing time." ("Messieurs, on ferme.") — Edmond de Goncourt [1822–1896] and Jules de Goncourt [1830–1870]: Journals, April 7, 1869.

Ibid. Stanza 6

How at the corners of streets
It seems one suddenly meets
The unforgotten face, the long-dead moment living!
"No, they were — they are gone,"
We murmur. "We live on."
Persistent Instant. Stanza 1

All around you in the ranks of department stores and banks,
Hotels and office buildings, restaurants and flats and towers,
A million brains of weary folk are throbbing through the hours
With wishes tremendous — from some of which defend us —
But most are longings old for the country to enfold
And drown them in its purple and greenery and gold.

Facing an immemorial tragic truth:
The sinking splendor and the waning light!
Prester John Contemplates the Setting Sun

I flung my soul to the air like a falcon flying. . . .
I shall start a heron soon
In the marsh beneath the moon —
A strange white heron rising with silver on its wings.
The Falconer of God. Stanza 1

I beat forever
The fens and the sedges.
The pledge is still the same — for all disastrous pledges,
All hopes resigned!
My soul still flies above me for the quarry it shall find.
The Falconer of God. Stanza 4

You are to me what the bowstring is to the shaft,
Speeding my purpose aloft and aflame and afar.
Dedication. Stanza 2

Neither will I put myself forward as others may do,
Neither, if you wish me to flatter, will I flatter you;
I will look at you grimly, and so you will know I am true.
Eternal Masculine. Stanza 1

And then, like lightning in the dead of night,
Fill with wild, crackling, intermitting light
My mind and soul and senses — and next be Aloof, askance as a dryad in a tree.
The Woodcutter's Wife. Stanza 2

You cannot slay yourself in me,
Nor I — to all eternity —
Destroy my truest self in you.
All that our ingrate thought would do,
All senseless wounds we give and take,

Are powerless — for the other's sake.
We Ask No Shield. Stanza 3

O Love, a thousand, thousand voices,
From night to dawn, from dawn to night,
Have cried the passion of their choices

And crawled another day toward dying.
Animalcule. Stanza 7

Voice of the forum loud and harsh
Full of frog-rhetoric of the marsh;
Awful percipience whose small eye
Views art through ordure of the sty;
Apocalyptic commonplace
Whose every utterance is base —
Yearlong the nations cry to thee,
God of our gods, Stupidity!

That men cannot devise
Some scheme of life to banish fear

Shine, Perishing Republic. Stanza 1

You make haste on decay: not blameworthy; life is good, be it stubbornly long or suddenly
A mortal splendor: meteors are not needed less than mountains: shine, perishing republic.
But for my children, I would have them keep their distance from the thickening center; corruption Never has been compulsory, when the cities lie at the monster's feet there are left the mountains.

Practical People

After all, after all we endure, who has grown wise?
We take our mortal momentary hour

Sanguine, some few ways wise, you and all men are drawn out of this depth

Is drawn out of this depth. Your tragic quality

SIR BERNARD LAW MONTGOMERY (VISCOUNT MONTGOMERY OF ALAMEIN)

[1887–]

On the eve of this great adventure, I send my best wishes to every soldier in the Allied team. To us is given the honor of striking a blow for freedom which will live in history, and in the better days that lie ahead men will speak with pride of our doings. We have a great and righteous cause. Let us pray that the Lord, mighty in battle, will go forth with our armies and that His special providence will aid us in the struggle.

Message to his troops, June 5, 1944, on the eve of the Allied invasion of Europe[1]

I am not a bit anxious about my battles. If I am anxious I don't fight them. I wait until I am ready.

Every hundred years or so it becomes necessary for a change to take place in the body of poetry . . . a fresh movement appears and produces a few great men, and once more the force and vigour die from the results of age; the movement is carried on by weak and worthless imitators, and a change becomes necessary again.

By the canal in Flanders I watched a barge's prow
Creep slowly past the poplar-trees; and there I made a vow
That when these wars are over and I am home at last However much I travel I shall not travel fast.
Horses and cars and yachts and planes: I've no more use for such:
For in three years of war's alarms I've hurried far too much;
And now I dream of something sure, silent and slow and large;
So when the War is over — why, I mean to buy a barge.

WILLIAM L. LAURENCE

[1888–]

The Atomic Age began at exactly 5:30 Mountain War Time on the morning of July 16, 1945, on a stretch of semi-desert land about fifty airline miles from Alamogordo, New Mexico.

At that great moment in history, ranking with the moment in the long ago when man first put fire to work for him and started on his march to civilization, the vast energy locked within the hearts of the atoms of matter was released for the first time in a burst of flame such as had never before been seen on this planet.[1]

In The New York Times, September 26, 1945

Zero, the code name given to the spot chosen for lighting the first atomic fire on this planet.

Ibid.

At zero minus one minute all observers at Base Camp, about 150 of the "Who's Who" in science and the armed forces, lay down prone on the ground in their pre-assigned trenches, face and eyes directed toward the ground and with the head away from Zero.

In The New York Times, September 26, 1945

A great ball of fire about a mile in diameter, changing colors as it kept shooting upward, from deep purple to orange, expanding, growing bigger, rising as it was expanding, an elemental force freed from its bonds after being chained for billions of years.

Ibid.

At first it was a giant column that soon took the shape of a supramundane mushroom. For a fleeting instant it took the form of the Statue of Liberty magnified many times.

Arabs could be swung on an idea as on a cord; for the unpledged allegiance of their minds made them obedient servants. None of them would escape the bond till success had come, and with it responsibility and duty and engagements. Then the idea was gone and the work ended — in ruins.

Revolt in the Desert. Chap. 19

I grew proud of the enemy [the Germans] who had killed my brothers. They were two thousand miles from home, without hope and without guides, in conditions mad enough to break the bravest nerves. Yet their sections held together in firm rank, sheering through the wrack of Turk and Arab like armoured ships, high-faced and silent. When attacked they halted, took position, fired to order. There was no haste, no crying, no hesitation. They were glorious.

Ibid. Chap. 34

It came upon me freshly how the secret of uniform was to make a crowd solid, dignified, impersonal: to give it the singleness and tautness of an upstanding man. This death's livery which walled its bearers from ordinary life, was sign that they had sold their wills and bodies to the State: and contracted themselves into a service not the less abject for that its beginning was voluntary.

NEWMAN LEVY

[1888–   ]

In Spain, where the courtly Castilian hidalgo twangs lightly each night his romantic guitar,
Where the castanets clink on the gay piazetta, and strains of fandangoes are heard from afar,
There lived, I am told, a bold hussy named Carmen, a pampered young vamp full of devil and guile.
Cigarette and cigar men were smitten with Carmen; from near and from far men were caught with her smile.

Opera Guyed. Carmen

But here's our friend José who seizes her bridle. A wild homicidal glint gleams in his eye.
He's mad and disgusted and cries out, "You've busted the heart that once trusted you. Wed me or die!"
Though Carmen is frightened at how this scene might end, I'm forced to admit she is game to the last.
She says to him "Banish the notion and vanish. Vamos!" which is Spanish for "run away fast."
A scream and a struggle! She reels and she staggers, for Don José's dagger's plunged deep in her breast.
No more will she flirt in her old way, that's certain. So ring down the curtain, poor Carmen's at rest.

NOTES

1. Flourish: The stage direction here is obscure. Clarke claims it should read "flarish," thus changing the meaning of the passage to "flarish" (that is, the King's), but most authorities have agreed that it should remain "flourish," supplying the predicate which is to be flourished. There was at this time a custom in the countryside of England to flourish a mop as a signal to the passing vender of berries, signifying that in that particular household there was a consumer-demand for berries, and this may have been meant in this instance. That Shakespeare was cognizant of this custom of flourishing the mop for berries is shown in a similar passage in the second part of King Henry IV, where he has the Third Page enter and say, "Flourish." Cf. also Hamlet, IV, 7:4.

O young and brave, it is not sweet to die,
To fall and leave no record of the race,
A little dust trod by the passers-by,
Swift feet that press your lonely resting-place;
Your dreams unfinished, and your song unheard —
Who wronged your youth by such a careless word?

When the Poincarés and Ludendorffs have brought a man to death they have not finished with him. They use his body to slay others. The most precious gain of Nationalism from war and bloodshed (and they have many) is this profiteering in the dead.

Leviathan [Of the speeches in war cemeteries] [1923]

The adventurer is within us, and he contests for our favour with the social man we are obliged to be. These two sorts of life are incompatibles; one we hanker after, the other we are obliged to. There is no other conflict so deep and bitter as this.

Twelve Against the Gods. Introduction [1929]

We, like the eagles, were born to be free. Yet we are obliged, in order to live at all, to make a cage of laws for ourselves and to stand on the perch. We are born as wasteful and unremorseful as tigers; we are obliged to be thrifty, or starve, or freeze. We are born to wander, and cursed to stay and dig.

He, and the world with him, — for Wilson's adventure was the world's, and one day the world will know it, even the fools — were not the victims of a vulgar trick, unless the dizziness that pulls down climbers from the peak is some cunning of the Alps. We fell there because the height was too great, because he saw all the countries of the world, the bare immensity of the mass of common people which he had worshipped all his life, but never imagined until that day he knew he had them, their lives, and all uncountable, future ages of them in his own two hands. Seeing, a great vertigo leapt on him.

Twelve Against the Gods. Woodrow Wilson. [1929]

Like Arthur and the legendary Alexander, and many other lesser men, he [Woodrow Wilson] left, even though defeated, a hope, a promise, that League, which is as it were a symbol of his perished flesh and blood, a fragment torn out of his heart and left with us, to serve for one who will come after in a retaking up of his adventure.

I'm a lean dog, a keen dog, a wild dog, and alone;
I'm a rough dog, a tough dog, hunting on my own;
I'm a bad dog, a mad dog, teasing silly sheep;
I love to sit and bay the moon, to keep fat souls from sleep.

Lone Dog. Stanza 1

I've hated all that's mean and cold,
All that's dusty, tame, and old,
Comfortable lies in books,
Pallid Virtue's sidelong looks,

And walk where only saints have been.

To the Unborn. Stanza 3

It was young David mocked the Philistine,
It was young David laughed beside the river.
There came his mother — his and yours and mine —
With five smooth stones,[1] and dropped them in his quiver.

Five Smooth Stones. Stanza 3

The first stone is love, and that shall fail you.
The second stone is hate, and that shall fail you.
The third stone is knowledge, and that shall fail you.
The fourth stone is prayer, and that shall fail you.
The fifth stone shall not fail you.

Ibid. Stanza 5

The fifth stone is a magic stone, my David,
Made up of fear and failure, lies and loss.

Ibid. Stanza 10

Oh, bless your blindness, glory in your groping!
Mock at your betters with an upward chin!
And when the moment has gone by for hoping,
Sling your fifth stone, O son of mine, and win.
Grief do I give you, grief and dreadful laughter;
Sackcloth for banner, ashes in your wine.
Go forth, go forth, nor ask me what comes after;
The fifth stone shall not fail you, son of mine.
Go forth, go forth, and slay the Philistine.

To drink into my eyes the shine
Of every slanting silver line,
To catch the freshened, fragrant breeze
From drenched and dripping apple-trees.

Ibid. Line 119

I know not how such things can be,
I only know there came to me
A fragrance such as never clings

To me, that's grown so free from care
Since my heart broke!

The Merry Maid. Stanza 2

Love has gone, and left me and the days are all alike.
Eat I must, and sleep I will — and would that night were here!
But ah, to lie awake and hear the slow hours strike!
Would that it were day again, with twilight near!

Fatal Interview. IV

Love in the open hand, nothing but that,
Ungemmed, unhidden, wishing not to hurt,
As one should bring you cowslips in a hat
Swung from the hand, or apples in her skirt,
I bring you, calling out as children do:
"Look what I have! — And these are all for you."

St. Nicholas, in addition to protecting sailors, children, travellers, and merchants, is also the patron saint of pawnbrokers. The story goes that a nobleman of the saint's native town, Parara in Asia Minor, had lost all his money, and did not know how he could endow his three beautiful daughters. St. Nicholas, hearing of his trouble, went by night and flung through the window three bags of gold with which the nobleman was able to provide handsome dowries. These three bags are shown in all early ikons as three gold apples, and the gold apples of St. Nicholas are the origin of the pawnbroker's sign.

Of 17 West 4th Street, Oyster Bay.

Ozymandias Revisited[2]

Things did not vibrate so when I was young . . .
But now all rattles, beats, drums, bombinates.
My ears are shaken with an incessant whir.
The air-drill chatters, the riveter palpitates.
"Brrr!" goes the world; "Brr-rrr-rrr!"
After a while the clinching-nail unclinches,
The gasket shudders on its uneasy bed,
The tie-plate ties no more, and the bolt flinches,
And the nut tinily turns upon its thread.

Lines Written in a Moment of Vibrant Ill-health

There I stood, and humbly scanned
The miracle that sense appals,

Death seems to provide the minds of the Anglo-Saxon race with a greater fund of innocent amusement than any other single subject . . . the tale must be about dead bodies or very wicked people, preferably both, before the Tired Business Man can feel really happy.

The Third Omnibus of Crime. Introduction

Every work of creation is threefold, an earthly trinity to match the heavenly. First there is the Creative Idea, passionless, timeless, beholding the whole work complete at once. . . . Second, there is the Creative Energy begotten of that idea, working in time from the beginning to the end, with sweat and passion. . . . Third, there is the Creative Power, the meaning of the work and its response to the living soul. . . . And these three are one, each equally in itself the whole work.

To Franklin D. Roosevelt, I say: You took a new breath 22 years ago when Polio struck you down, and you overcame the blow, and became stronger and greater because of it. You took a fresh breath when you were called to the Presidency in a moment of riots and bread lines and collapse. You took a fresh breath when, after years of unheeded warnings, the enemy struck.

Now, out of that reservoir of strength, which is ever refilled by those who know the secret of overcoming, take one more breath for the completion of our struggle, and for our peace.

And to you who hear me, I say: Take that fresh breath with him. Give him no worship — for that we reserve for God. But breathe into the will of this man, your will; lend to him your strength; share with him your faith; that with him, and through him, we may realize our mighty victory, and with him and through him set our feet upon the pathway to a new and better, and more honest world.

DUKE OF WINDSOR
(KING EDWARD VIII)

[1894–]

At long last I am able to say a few words of my own. I have never wanted to withhold anything, but until now it has not been constitutionally possible for me to speak.

I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love.

I now quit altogether public affairs and I lay down my burden.

It may be some time before I return to my native land, but I shall always follow the fortunes of the British race and empire with profound interest and if, at any time in the future, I can be found of service to His Majesty in a private station I shall not fail.

And now we all have a new King. I wish him and you, his people, happiness and prosperity with all my heart.

God bless you all! God save the King!

After nearly five years of toil and suffering, we must renew that crusading impulse on which we entered the war and met its darkest hour. We and our Allies are sure that our fight is against evil and for a world in which godliness and honor may be the foundation of the life of men in every land.
Broadcast message for the Invasion of Normandy, June 6, 1944

The whole purport of literature, which is the notation of the heart. Style is but the faintly contemptible vessel in which the bitter liquid is recommended to the world.

For what human ill does not dawn seem to be an alleviation?
Ibid. III

We come from a world where we have known incredible standards of excellence, and we dimly remember beauties which we have not seized again. . . . The public for which masterpieces are intended is not on this earth.

Rebecca: The address was like this: It said: Jane Crofut; The Crofut Farm. Grover's Corners; Sutton County; New Hampshire; United States of America.

George: What's funny about that?

Rebecca: But listen, it's not finished; the United States of America; Continent of North America; Western Hemisphere; the Earth; the Solar System; the Universe; the Mind of God, — that's what it said on the envelope.

The dead don't stay interested in us living people for very long. Gradually, gradually, they let go hold of the earth . . . and the ambitions they had . . . and the pleasures they had . . . and the things they suffered . . . and the people they loved. They get weaned away from earth — that's the way I put it, weaned away.

That's what it was to be alive. To move about in a cloud of ignorance; to go up and down trampling on the feelings of those about you. To spend and waste time as though you had a million years. To be always at the mercy of one self-centered passion, or another. Now you know — that's the happy existence you wanted to go back to.

Bawl out their strange despair

It is so they die on the plains, the great, old buffalo,

Our earth is but a small star in the great universe. Yet of it we can make, if we choose, a planet unvexed by war, untroubled by hunger or fear, undivided by senseless distinctions of race, color or theory.

Prayer, written for and read by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the United Nations on Flag Day, June 14, 1942

Grant us brotherhood, not only for this day but for all our years — a brotherhood not of words but of acts and deeds. We are all of us children of earth — grant us that simple knowledge. If our brothers are oppressed, then we are oppressed. If they hunger we hunger. If their freedom is taken away our freedom is not secure.

Grant us a common faith that man shall know bread and peace — that he shall know justice and righteousness, freedom and security, an equal opportunity and an equal chance to do his best, not only in our own lands, but throughout the world. All modern American literature comes from one book by Mark Twain called Huckleberry Finn. If you read it you must stop where the Nigger Jim is stolen from the boys. That is the real end. The rest is just cheating. But it's the best book we've had. All American writing comes from that. There was nothing before. There has been nothing as good since.

Not this August, nor this September; you have this year to do in what you like. Not next August, nor next September; that is still too soon; they are still too prosperous from the way things pick up when armament factories start at near capacity; they never fight as long as money can still be made without. . . . But the year after that or the year after that they fight.

It is natural that women should like the birds whose domestic affairs can be observed under the eaves; they love the sweetest singers, the brightest plumage, the species not too shy to be seen at close range. For them the waders and swimmers, the awkward of leg, the harsh of cry, the wild of soul, have seldom the same appeal. But that which flees from men, that will men have. Women of all people ought to understand this, but they do not, quite.

[1] The phrase originated in a radio address by General Emilio Mola, during the Spanish Civil War [1936–1939]. He was leading four columns of troops against Madrid. He designated the Franco sympathizers and supporters, engaged in espionage, sabotage, and other subversive activities within the defense lines, as his fifth column. The expression rapidly became universal to describe an enemy concealed within one's own lines, boring from within.

Subsequently, Colonel Richard C. Patterson, Jr. called gossipers and rumor-mongers a sixth column; and later the Liberty Mutual Insurance Company, in a series of advertisements, called carelessness leading to accidents in industry a seventh column.

Life is adventure in experience, and when you are no longer greedy for the last drop of it, it means no more than that you have set your face, whether you know it or not, to the day when you shall depart without a backward look. Those who look backward longingly to the end die young, at whatever age.

An Almanac for Moderns. March 18

The time to hear bird music is between four and six in the morning. Seven o'clock is not too late, but by eight the fine rapture is over, due, I suspect, to the contentment of the inner man that comes with breakfast; a poet should always be hungry or have a lost love.

Broadway in Review [1940]

Death re-creates an individual out of someone who has fallen singly from the ranks. In his loneliness by a foreign roadside, this man or that ceases to be Government Issue, a mass commodity produced by a mass response out of a mass need and hope. He once again becomes man's issue, and woman's, too.

Anno domini — that's the most fatal complaint of all in the end.

Good-bye, Mr. Chips. Chap. 1 [1934]

The austere serenity of Shangri-La. Its forsaken courts and pale pavilions shimmered in repose from which all the fret of existence had ebbed away, leaving a hush as if moments hardly dared to pass.

Lost Horizon. Chap. 5 [1933]

When the High Lama asked him whether Shangri-La was not unique in his experience, and if the Western world could offer anything in the least like it, he answered with a smile: "Well, yes — to be quite frank it reminds me very slightly of Oxford."

Ibid. Chap. 9

Perhaps the exhaustion of the passions is the beginning of wisdom, if you care to alter the proverb. That also, my son, is the doctrine of Shangri-La.

Brave Men [1944]

Then darkness enveloped the whole American armada. Not a pinpoint of light showed from those hundreds of ships as they surged on through the night toward their destiny, carrying across the ageless and indifferent sea tens of thousands of young men, fighting for . . . for . . . well, at least for each other.

He awakes at morning in a foreign land, he draws his breath in labor in the wool-soft air of Europe: the wool-gray air is all about him like a living substance; it is in his heart, his stomach, and his entrails; it is in the slow and vital movements of the people; it soaks down from the sodden skies into the earth, into the heavy buildings, into the limbs and hearts and brains of living men. . . .

It was there now; it will always be there. They had it in Merry England and they had it in Gay Paree; and they were seldom merry, and they were rarely gay. The wet, woolen air is over Munich; it is over Paris; it is over Rouen and Madame Bovary; it soaks into England; it gets into boiled mutton and the Brussels sprouts; it gets into Hammersmith on Sunday; it broods over Bloomsbury and the private hotels and the British Museum; it soaks into the land of Europe and keeps the grass green.

Where can you match the mighty music of their names? — The Monongahela, the Colorado, the Rio Grande, the Columbia, the Tennessee, the Hudson (Sweet Thames!); the Kennebec, the Rappahannock, the Delaware, the Penobscot, the Wabash, the Chesapeake, the Swannanoa, the Indian River, the Niagara (Sweet Afton!); the Saint Lawrence, the Susquehanna, the Tombigbee, the Nantahala, the French Broad, the Chattahoochee, the Arizona, and the Potomac (Father Tiber!) — these are a few of their princely names, these are a few of their great, proud, glittering names, fit for the immense and lonely land that they inhabit.

Oh, Tiber! Father Tiber! You'd only be a suckling in that mighty land! And as for you, sweet Thames, flow gently till I end my song.

It is Europeans, for the most part, who have constructed these great ships, but without America they have no meaning. These ships are alive with the supreme ecstasy of the modern world, which is the voyage to America. There is no other experience that is remotely comparable to it, in its sense of joy, its exultancy, its drunken and magnificent hope which, against reason and knowledge, soars into a heaven of fabulous conviction, which believes in the miracle and sees it invariably achieved.

Of Time and the River. Book VIII [1935]

The young men of this land are not, as they are often called, a "lost" race — they are a race that never yet has been discovered. And the whole secret, power, and knowledge of their own discovery is locked within them — they know it, feel it, have the whole thing in them — and they cannot utter it.

The Golden Calf to which the most devoted and mystic adoration of the masses goes in our days is: Sovereignty. No symbol carrying the pretension of a deity caused so much misery, hatred, starvation and mass execution as the notion "Sovereignty of the Nation."

WALLACE WADSWORTH

Paul Bunyan! the mightiest man that ever came into the woods! Never do woodsmen tire of hearing of him. Never do the stories of his tremendous labors grow old to them, for not only was he the first one of all their kind,[2] but he was also the greatest lumber-jack that ever lived, the hero of them all.

Something a boy should never see.
I turned and ran, precipitously.

Resting in the forehead, and secure in his gaze.
The 'great I' is an unfortunate intruder
Quarrelling with 'I tiring' and 'I sleeping'
And all those other 'I's who long for 'We dying.'

Poems. 9

I think continually of those who were truly great.
Who, from the womb, remembered the soul's history

Beyond the town there lies the open country
Where, gathering speed, she acquires mystery,
The luminous self-possession of ships on ocean.

I say this plain. Of every strenuous word
In weighty volumes ponderously shelved,
In each address, all artful eloquence
Of those adept in the enchanted phrase,
Take heed. Read. Listen. There is much to learn.
But strictest thought and deepest sense pertain
To the honor of God. Do not shun His name.
Now the sun goes noonward. Whether you return
With two or three or singly, still you walk
Companioned, among brothers, going home.

W. R. RODGERS

Our flags climbed down their own ropes like spiders

I burn for England, even as she burns
In living flame, that when her peace is come Flame shall destroy whoever seeks to turn
Her sacrifice to profit — and the homes
Of those who fought — to wreckage,
In a war for freedom — who were never free.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH OF ENGLAND

[1926–]

If we all go forward together with an unwavering faith, a high courage and a quiet heart, we shall be able to make of this ancient commonwealth which we all love so dearly an even grander thing — more free, more prosperous, more happy and a more powerful influence for good in the world — than it has been in the greatest days of our forefathers. To accomplish that we must give nothing less than the whole of ourselves.
Radio broadcast from Capetown, South Africa, to the British Commonwealth on her twenty-first birthday [April 21, 1947]

I declare before you all that my whole life, whether it be long or short, shall be devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family to which we all belong, but I shall not have strength to carry out this resolution alone unless you join in it with me, as I now invite you to do.

Epitaph on Joe Miller[1]

Would you, my friend, a finished sceptic make,
To form his nature these materials take:
A little learning; twenty grains of sense
Joined with a double share of ignorance;
Infuse a little wit into the skull,
Which never fails to make a mighty fool;
Two drams of faith; a tun of doubting next;
Let all be with the dregs of reason mixt:
When in his mind these jarring seeds are sown,
He'll censure all things but approve of none.

And what is a conqueror? Have not you, too, gone about the earth like an evil genius, blasting the fair fruits of peace and industry; plundering, ravaging, killing, without law, without justice, merely to gratify an insatiable lust for dominion? All that I have done to a single district with a hundred followers, you have done to whole nations with a hundred thousand. If I have stripped individuals, you have ruined kings and princes. If I have burned a few hamlets, you have desolated the most flourishing kingdoms and cities of the earth. Art and part.

A Scottish law phrase, an accessory before and after the fact. A man is said to be art and part of a crime when he contrives the manner of the deed, and concurs with and encourages those who commit the crime, although he does not put his own hand to the actual execution of it. — SCOTT: *Tales of a Grand*father, Chap. 22 (Execution of Morton)

Art preservative of all arts.

From the inscription upon the façade of the house in Haarlem, Holland, formerly occupied by Laurens Koster (or Coster), who is credited, among others, with the invention of printing with movable types, about 1440 or 1446. Mention is first made of this inscription about 1628:

Begging the question.

This is a common logical fallacy, petitio principii; and the first explanation of the phrase is to be found in Aristotle's Topica, VIII, 13, where the five ways of begging the question are set forth. The earliest English work in which the expression is found is The Arte of Logike plainlie set forth in our English Tongue, &c. [1584].

Bitter end.

This phrase is somewhat ambiguous as now used. The older form, "better end," was used to designate a crisis, or a moment of extremity. When in a gale a vessel has paid out all her cable, her cable has run out to the "better end," — the end which is secured within the vessel and little used. Robinson Crusoe, in describing the terrible storm in Yarmouth Roads, says: "We rode with two anchors ahead, and the cables veered out to the better end." CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales, The Squieres Tale, Line 224, says: "They demen gladly to the badder ende," Skeat's glossary giving "worse" as the definition for "badder."

Cockles of the heart.

R. G. Latham [1812–1888], English philologist, wrote that the most probable explanation of the phrase lies (1) in the likeness of the heart to a cockle-shell, — the base of the former being compared to the hinge of the latter; (2) in the zoological name for the cockle and its congeners, Cardium (heart). A contemporary explanation [1936] is the comparison of the cockle, or fire chamber, of the furnace with the chambers (ventricles and auricles) of the heart, hence, to warm the cockles of the heart. See Cervantes, page 1154.

Consistency thou art a jewel.

A popular saying, like "Be good, and you will be happy," or "Virtue is its own reward," that, like Topsy, just "growed." From the earliest times it has been the popular tendency to call this or that cardinal virtue, or bright and shining excellence, a jewel, by way of emphasis. For example, Iago says:

"Good name, in man or woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls."

Shakespeare elsewhere calls experience a "jewel." Miranda says her modesty is the "jewel" in her dower; and in All's Well that Ends Well, Diana terms her chastity the "jewel" of her house. — R. A. WIGHT

O discretion, thou art a jewel! — The Skylark, a Collection of Well-chosen Songs [London, 1772]

Dead as Chelsea.

To get Chelsea, to obtain the benefit of that hospital (for old soldiers). "Dead as Chelsea, by God!" an exclamation uttered by a grenadier at Fontenoy, 1745, on having his leg carried away by a cannon-ball. — Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue, quoted by BRADY in Varieties of Literature [1826]

Dollar diplomacy.

Diplomacy used to promote the financial or commercial interests of a country abroad. — Webster's Collegiate Dictionary

Imperialistic activity by the President received another name. Republicans now simply called it "dollar diplomacy." — BEARD: Basic History of the United States, [1944], page 353, discussing the Taft administration. The expression was used in Harper's Weekly, April 23, 1910

Free soil, free men, free speech, Frémont.

Rallying cry of the Republican Party in 1856, when John Charles Frémont [1813–1890], "the Pathfinder," was the party's candidate for the presidency.

Gentle craft.

According to John Brady [died 1814], in Clavis Calendaria [1812], this designation arose from the fact that in an old romance, a prince named Crispin is made to exercise, in honour of his namesake, Saint Crispin, the trade of shoemaking. There is a tradition that King Edward IV, in one of his disguises, once drank with a party of shoemakers, and pledged them. The story is alluded to in the old play of George a-Greene [1599]:

Marry, because you have drank with the King,
And the King hath so graciously pledged you,
You shall no more be called shoemakers
But you and yours, to the world's end,
Shall be called the trade of the gentle craft.

G. I. Joe.

This name, chosen for the soldier in Lieutenant DAVE BREGER's comic strip for Yank, the Army weekly, first appeared in the issue of June 17, 1942, and was speedily adopted as the popular appellation for all U. S. soldiers in World War II. Writing in Time [February 26, 1945], Lieutenant Breger said: "I decided on 'G. I. Joe,' the 'G. I.' [Government Issue] because of its prevalence in Army talk, and the 'Joe' for the alliterative effect."

The goose hangs high.

Originally, perhaps, "the goose honks high," — it cries and flies high. Wild geese fly higher when the weather is fine or promises to be fine. Hence, the prospects are bright; everything is favourable. — Century Dictionary

Another explanation is that in some parts of the country a goose is hung high to season, and denotes that a feast of roast goose will soon be ready.

How old is Ann?

This became a popular quotation when The New York Press, October 16, 1903, printed a simple problem: "Mary is 24 years old. She is twice as old as Ann was when Mary was as old as Ann is now. How old is Ann?" It seems incredible that so simple an equation in algebra should have caused so much anxiety, but it did. The answer is that Ann is 18.

Roland for an Oliver.

These were the two most famous of Charlemagne's paladins, and their exploits are rendered so ridiculously and equally extravagant by the old romancers, that from them arose the saying, to signify matching one incredible lie with another, giving tit for tat, as good as one receives. In King Henry VI, Part I, Act I, Sc. 2, Line 30, Shakespeare says [in 1589]:

England all Olivers and Rowlands bred

The sixty-four dollar question.

This phrase first used April 21, 1940 on a Columbia Broadcasting System program, Take It Or Leave It. This is a quiz program consisting of seven increasingly difficult questions for which the participant is awarded $1, $2, $4, $8, $16, $32, and $64 respectively for each question correctly answered, but may retire after any question. The $64 question is the climax question. Actually, because the audience is disappointed when a person answers six questions correctly and misses the seventh, the most difficult question is the sixth or $32 question.

The woods are full of them.

Alexander Wilson [1766–1813], in the Preface to his American Ornithology [1808], quotes these words and relates the story of a boy who had been gathering flowers. On bringing them to his mother, he said: "Look, my dear ma! What beautiful flowers I have found growing in our place! Why, all the woods are full of them!"

THE NEW ENGLAND PRIMER[1]

In Adam's fall
We sinned all.

My Book and Heart
Must never part.

Young Obadias,
David, Josias, —
All were pious.

Peter denyed
His Lord, and cryed.

Young Timothy
Learnt sin to fly.

Xerxes did die,
And so must I.

Zaccheus he Did climb the tree
Our Lord to see.

Our days begin with trouble here,
Our life is but a span,
And cruel death is always near,
So frail a thing is man.

Now I lay me down to take my sleep,[1]
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

His wife, with nine small children and one at the breast, following him to the stake.

Martyrdom of John Rogers, Burned at Smithfield, February 14, 1554[2]

EPITAPHS

A house she hath, 'tis made of such good fashion,
The tenant ne'er shall pay for reparation,
Nor will the landlord ever raise her rent
Or turn her out of doors for non-payment;
From chimney-tax this cell is free,
To such a house who would not tenant be?

For Rebecca Bogess, Folkestone, August 22, 1688

It is so soon that I am done for,
I wonder what I was begun for.

For a child aged three weeks, Cheltenham Churchyard

She tasted of life's bitter cup,
Refused to drink the potion up;
She turned her little head aside,
Disgusted with the task and died.

For a child aged six months

Here lies John Knott:
His father was Knott before him,
He lived Knott, died Knott,
Yet underneath this stone doth lie
Knott christened, Knott begot,
And here he lies and still is Knott.

Perthshire Churchyard

Here lie I, Martin Elginbrodde:
Ha'e mercy o' my soul, Lord God,

[1] As early as 1691, Benjamin Harris, of Boston, advertised as in press the second impression of the New England Primer. The oldest copy known to be extant is dated 1737.

[1] The first record of this prayer is found in the Enchiridion Leonis [A. D. 1160]. In the earliest edition of the Primer, the prayer is given as above, which is copied from the reprint of 1777. In the edition of 1784 it is altered to read, "Now I lay me down to sleep." In the edition of 1814, the second line of the prayer reads, "I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep."

A dying preacher I have been,
To dying hearers such as you.
Though dead, a preacher still I am
To such as come my grave to view.
Let this to you a warning be
That quickly you must follow me.

Elder Samuel Waldo, South Dover (Wingdale) Cemetery, Dutchess County, New York, September 10, 1798

The Queene was brought by water to White-hall,
At every stroake the oares teares let fall:
More clung about the Barge, fish under water
Wept out their eyes of pearle, and swome blinde after.
I think the Barge-men might with easier thighes
Have rowed her thither in her peoples eyes,
For how so ere, thus much my thoughts have scand,
She'd come by water, had she come by land.

Here lies Sir Jenkin Grout, who loved his friend, and persuaded his enemy: what his mouth ate, his hand paid for: what his servants robbed, he restored: if a woman gave him pleasure, he supported her in pain: he never forgot his children: and whoso touched his finger, drew after it his whole body.

Quoted by RALPH WALDO EMERSON in his Essay, Manners

This is the grave of Mike O'Day
Who died maintaining his right of way.
His right was clear, his will was strong,
But he's just as dead as if he'd been wrong.

JUNIUS

One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate and constitute law. What yesterday was fact, to-day is doctrine.

The Letters of Junius.[1] Dedication to the English Nation

The liberty of the press is the Palladium of all the civil, political, and religious rights of an Englishman.

Ibid.

These are the gloomy companions of a disturbed imagination; the melancholy madness of poetry, without the inspiration.[2]

Ibid. VII, To Sir William Draper [March 3, 1769]

There are some hereditary strokes of character by which a family may be as clearly distinguished as by the blackest features of the human face.

Ibid. XII, To the Duke of Grafton [May 30, 1769]

I do not give you to posterity as a pattern to imitate, but as an example to deter.

Ibid.

I believe there is yet a spirit of resistance in this country, which will not submit to be oppressed; but I am sure there is a fund of good sense in this country, which cannot be deceived.

Ibid. XVI, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser (H. S. Woodfall) [July 19, 1769]

We owe it to our ancestors to preserve entire those rights, which they have delivered to our care: we owe it to our posterity, not to suffer their dearest inheritance to be destroyed.

Ibid. XX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [August 8, 1769]

When the constitution is openly invaded, when the first original right of the people, from which all laws derive their authority, is directly attacked, inferior grievances naturally lose their force, and are suffered to pass by without punishment or observation.

The Letters of Junius. XXX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 17, 1769]

There is a moment of difficulty and danger at which flattery and falsehood can no longer deceive, and simplicity itself can no longer be misled.

Ibid. XXXV,[1] To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [December 19, 1769]

They [the Americans] equally detest the pageantry of a King, and the supercilious hypocrisy of a bishop.[2]

Ibid.

The least considerable man among us has an interest equal to the proudest nobleman, in the laws and constitution of his country, and is equally called upon to make a generous contribution in support of them; — whether it be the heart to conceive, the understanding to direct, or the hand to execute.[3]

Ibid. XXXVII, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [March 19, 1770]

We lament the mistakes of a good man, and do not begin to detest him until he affects to renounce his principles.

The Letters of Junius. XLI, To Lord Mansfield [November 14, 1770]

[1] This letter is of great significance in the history of the liberty of the press. The publisher was prosecuted for seditious libel, and the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty of printing and publishing only." After a second trial, Woodfall was freed on the payment of costs.

[2] See Rufus Choate, page 393.

The injustice to an individual is sometimes of service to the public. Facts are apt to alarm us more than the most dangerous principles.

The Letters of Junius. XLI, To Lord Mansfield [November 14, 1770]

An honest man, like the true religion, appeals to the understanding, or modestly confides in the internal evidence of his conscience. The impostor employs force instead of argument, imposes silence where he cannot convince, and propagates his character by the sword.

Ibid.

Private credit is wealth; — public honour is security. — The feather that adorns the royal bird, supports his flight. Strip him of his plumage, and you fix him to the earth.

Ibid. XLII, On the Falkland Islands [January 30, 1771]

If individuals have no virtues, their vices may be of use to us.

Ibid. LIX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 5, 1771]

The temple of fame is the shortest passage to riches and preferment.

Ibid.

Love not me for comely grace,
For my pleasing eye or face,
Nor for any outward part,
No, nor for a constant heart.

When want comes in at the door, love flies out of the window.[1]

The Oxford Dictionary of English Proverbs traces this back to J. Clarke: Paroemiologia [1639]. Leonard Merrick in 1902 published his novel When Loves Flies Out o' the Window

The King of France went up the hill
With twenty thousand men;
The King of France came down the hill,
And ne'er went up again.

Though little, I'll work as hard as a Turk,
If you'll give me employ,
To plow and sow, and reap and mow,
And be a farmer's boy.

The Farmer's Boy. Stanza 2 [before 1689]

The United Voice of all His Majesty's free and loyal Subjects in America — Liberty and Property, and no Stamps.

Motto of various American colonial newspapers [1765–1766]

Lost is our old simplicity of times,
The world abounds with laws, and teems with crimes.

On the Proceedings Against America.[2] Stanza 1

Our cargoes of meat, drink, and cloaths beat the Dutch.

Siege of Boston [1775]

Virtus sui gloria.

Think that day lost whose descending sun
Views from thy hand no noble action done.

Bobart, son of a celebrated botanist, died in 1719.

An Austrian army, awfully array'd,
Boldly by battery besiege Belgrade;
Cossack commanders cannonading come,
Deal devastation's dire destructive doom;
Ev'ry endeavour engineers essay,
For fame, for freedom, fight, fierce furious fray.
Gen'rals 'gainst gen'rals grapple, — gracious God!
How honors Heav'n heroic hardihood!
Infuriate, indiscriminate in ill,
Just Jesus, instant innocence instill!
Kinsmen kill kinsmen, kindred kindred kill.
Labour low levels longest, loftiest lines;
Men march 'midst mounds, moats, mountains, murd'rous mines.
Now noisy, noxious numbers notice nought,
Of outward obstacles o'ercoming ought;
Poor patriots perish, persecution's pest!
Quite quiet Quakers "Quarter, quarter" quest;
Reason returns, religion, right, redounds,
Suwarrow, stop such sanguinary sounds!
Truce to thee, Turkey, terror to thy train!
Unwise, unjust, unmerciful Ukraine!
Vanish vile vengeance, vanish victory vain!
Why wish we warfare? wherefore welcome won Xerxes, Xantippus, Xavier, Xenophon?
Yield, ye young Yaghier yeomen, yield your yell!
Zimmerman's, Zoroaster's, Zeno's zeal
Again attract; arts against arms appeal.
All, all ambitious aims, avaunt, away!
Et cætera, et cætera, et cæterā.

Alliteration, or the Siege of Belgrade: a Rondeau[1]

When shall we three meet again?[1]

Parting Friends [Dartmouth College song, 1830]

The cunning seldom gain their ends;
The wise are never without friends.

The Fox and the Hen. Moral[2]

A fox went out in a hungry plight

Ibid. Stanza 3

Oh, the praties they are small —
Over here, over here.
Oh, the praties they are small
When we dig 'em in the fall,
And we eat 'em, coats and all,
Full of fear, full of fear.
Irish Famine Song [1846–1847]

Oh, potatoes they grow small,
In Kansas.
Oh, potatoes they grow small,
For they plant them in the fall,
And they eat 'em skins and all,
In Kansas.
Kansas version of famine song

Van Amburgh is the man who goes with all the shows,
He gets into the lion's cage, and tells you all he knows.
He puts his head in the lion's mouth, and keeps it there a while,
And when he takes it out again, he greets you with a smile.
Menagerie, or Showman's Song[2]

Oh, ye'll tak' the high road an' I'll tak' the low road,
An' I'll be in Scotland before ye;
But trouble it is there an' mony hearts are sair,[3]
On the bonnie, bonnie banks of Loch Lomond.
Scottish Ballad, Loch Lomond.[4]
Refrain

So I said, "Old man, for whom digg'st thou this grave

I pray the prayer the Easterners do,
May the peace of Allah abide with you;
Wherever you stay, wherever you go,
May the beautiful palms of Allah grow;
Through days of labor and nights of rest,
The love of good Allah make you blest.
So I touch my heart as the Easterners do, —
May the peace of Allah abide with you.

Listen to the Exhortation of the Dawn!
Look to this Day!
For it is Life, the very Life of Life.
In its brief course lie all the Verities and Realities of your Existence:
The Bliss of Growth,
The Glory of Action,
The Splendor of Beauty.
For Yesterday is but a Dream,
And To-morrow is only a Vision;
But To-day well-lived makes every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness,
And every To-morrow a Vision of Hope.
Look well therefore to this Day!
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn.
The Salutation of the Dawn, from the Sanskrit

The woman was not taken
From Adam's head, you know,

[1] See Shakespeare, page 77.

[2] The other traditional version, repudiated by New Bedford authority, was that the skipper said: "All I want out of you is silence, and damn little of that."

So she must not command him,
'Tis evidently so;
The woman was not taken
From Adam's feet, you see,
So he must not abuse her —
The meaning seems to be.
The woman she was taken
From under Adam's arm,
Which shows he must protect her
From injury and harm.

Old Scotch Nuptial Song [before 1860][1]

Yestreen the Queen had four Maries,
The night she'll hae but three;
There was Mary Seaton, and Mary Beaton,
And Mary Carmichael, and me.

And she answered with a laugh,
No, but you may carry half.

Katie Lee and Willie Gray. Stanza 8

"I drink to one," he said,
"Whose image never may depart,
Deep graven on this grateful heart,
Till memory be dead.
To one whose love for me shall last
When lighter passions long have passed,
So holy 'tis, and true."

Mr. Finney had a turnip,
And it grew behind the barn,
And it grew, and it grew,
And the turnip did no harm.

Mr. Finney's Turnip.[2] Stanza 1

Of all the funny things that live, in woodland, marsh, or bog,
That creep the ground or fly the air, the funniest thing's a frog.

The Scientific Frog. Stanza 1 [1860s]

I belong to that highly respectable tribe
Which is known as the Shabby Genteel . . .
Too proud to beg, too honest to steal.

The Shabby Genteel. Stanza 1 (Sung by Sol Smith Russell [1848–1901] in A Poor Relation)

Hands off! Stand back! Leave us alone!
You shall not rob us of our own;
We will be free! We will be free!
God and Right our standard be.

War-Song of the Boers. Stanza 1 [1881]

I'm Terence O'Reilly, I'm a man of renown . . .
If they'd let me be, I'd have Ireland free,
On the railroads you'd not pay any fare,

Is That Mr. Reilly? [1]
Stanza 1 [1882]

Is that Mr. Reilly, can anyone tell?
Is that Mr. Reilly that owns the hotel?
Well, if that's Mr. Reilly, they speak of so highly,
Upon me soul, Reilly, you're doin' quite well.

Ibid. Chorus

Sow a Thought, and you reap an Act;
Sow an Act, and you reap a Habit;
Sow a Habit, and you reap a Character;
Sow a Character, and you reap a Destiny.

Quoted by SAMUEL SMILES [1812–1904] in Life and Labour [1887]

The Monkey married the Baboon's sister,
Smacked his lips and then he kissed her.

The Monkey's Wedding. Stanza 1 (Regimental March of the Ninth U. S. Cavalry)

King Arthur had three sons — that he had;
He had three sons of yore,
And he kicked them out the door
Because they could not sing — that he did.

King Arthur: English Folksong [2]

In good old Colony times
When we lived under the King,
Three roguish chaps
Fell into mishaps
Because they could not sing.

Another version, once popular as an American college song, In Good Old Colony Times

Reuben, I have long been thinking
What a good world this would be,
If the men were all transported
On this side the Northern Sea.

Reuben and Rachel.[1] Stanza 1

Mankind looks forth with careful glance,
Time steady plies the oar,
While old age calmly waits to hear
The keel upon the shore.

Life Voyage (on an engraving by F. T. Stuart from a painting by Clarence M. Dobell)

There is never a daughter of Eve but once, ere the tale of her days is done,
She will know the scent of the Eden rose, just once beneath the sun!
And whatever else she may win or lose, endure, or do, or dare,
She will never forget the enchantment it gave to the common air;
For the world may give her content or joy, fame, sorrow, or sacrifice,
But the hour that brought the scent of the rose, she lived it in Paradise.

The Rose of Eden: Arabic Legend [2]

I loathe, abhor, despise,
Abominate dried apple pies.
I like good bread, I like good meat,
Or anything that's fit to eat,
But of all poor grub beneath the skies,
The poorest is dried apple pies.
Give me the toothache or sore eyes
In preference to such kind of pies.

Dried Apple Pies

Tread on my corns, or tell me lies,
But don't pass me dried apple pies! [3]

This is the grave of Murphy,
They buried him today —
He led the Life of Riley
While Riley was away.

[2] From English County Songs, collected [1893] by LUCY E. BROADWOOD and J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND.

[1] An adaptation of this old song, entitled "Reuben and Cynthia," was sung in Charles Hoyt's play, A Trip to Chinatown [1890].

[2] Published in All the Year Round, a periodical edited by Charles Dickens and continued by his son, Charles, after the death of the elder Dickens in 1870. The poem appeared in The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, July 13, 1878. Rudyard Kipling quotes from this poem in "Mrs. Hauksbee Sits Out," in Under the Deodars.

The poem has been attributed to Susan K. Phillips.

But he couldn't eat prune pie,
Nor, as a matter of fact, could I.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY: Doubletaph

If I had but a thousand a year, Gaffer Green,
If I had but a thousand a year,
What a man I would be, and what sights I would see.

Robin Ruff.[1] Stanza 1

There's a place that is better than this, Robin Ruff,
And I hope in my heart you'll go there,
Where the poor man's as great though he hath no estate,
Aye, as if he'd a thousand a year.

Ibid. Stanza 6

If any lift of mine may ease
The burden of another,
God give me love and care and strength
To help my ailing brother.

If Any Little Word of Mine. Stanza 2 [1880]

There is a mystery in human hearts,
And though we be encircled by a host
Of those who love us well and are beloved,
To every one of us, from time to time,
There comes a sense of utter loneliness.

A Solitary Way. Stanza 1 [1885]

And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a solitary way.

Ibid. Stanza 3

In the first person, simply shall foretells,
In will a threat or else a promise dwells;
Shall in the second and third does threat,
Will then simply foretells a future feat.

Grammar, Irish National Schools

Try what you will, there's nothing like leather.

Nothing Like Leather

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpet, ring no bells;
The book of life the shining record tells.

Attributed to Elizabeth Barrett Browning, but not found in her writings

The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday,
Among the fields above the sea,
Among the winds at play,
Among the lowing of the herds,
The rustling of the trees,
Among the singing of the birds,
The humming of the bees.
The foolish fears of what might pass
I cast them all away
Among the clover-scented grass,
Among the new-mown hay,
Among the hushing of the corn
Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born —
Out in the fields with God!

Out in the Fields (Anonymous, in St. Paul's Magazine, August 20, 1898, page 307. Reprinted in The Boston Globe, April 30, 1899)[1]

The halls of fame are open wide
And they are always full;
Some go in by the door called "push,"
And some by the door called "pull."

Quoted by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin in a speech in the House of Commons

He who whispers down a well
About the goods he has to sell,
Will never reap the golden dollars
Like him who shows them round and hollers.

Quoted by the Prince of Wales (the present Duke of Windsor); thought to be of American origin

The codfish lays ten thousand eggs,
The homely hen lays one.
The codfish never cackles
To tell you what she's done.
And so we scorn the codfish,
While the humble hen we prize,

Old jingle

Monday's child is fair of face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is loving and giving,
Thursday's child works hard for a living.
Friday's child is full of woe,
Saturday's child has far to go,
But the child that is born on the Sabbath-day
Is brave and bonny, and good and gay.
Birthdays (Quoted in Miser Farebrother by B. L. Farjeon, Harper's Weekly, September 17, 1887)

Cut your nails on Monday, cut them for wealth,
Cut them on Tuesday, cut them for health,
Cut them on Wednesday, cut them for news,
Cut them on Thursday, a new pair of shoes.
Cut them on Friday, cut them for sorrow,
Cut them on Saturday, see sweetheart to-morrow.
Cut them on Sunday, cut them for evil,
The whole of the week you'll be ruled by the devil.

The boy called out "Wolf, Wolf!" and the villagers came out to help him. A few days afterward he tried the same trick, and again they came to his help. Shortly after this a Wolf actually came, but this time the villagers thought the boy was deceiving them again and nobody came to his help.

The Shepherd's Boy

A liar will not be believed, even when he speaks the truth.

Ibid.

Never soar aloft on an enemy's pinions.

The Tortoise and the Birds

Do but set the example yourself, and I will follow you. Example is the best precept.[2]

The Two Crabs

Never trust a friend who deserts you at a pinch.

The Two Fellows and the Bear

United we stand, divided we fall.[1]

The Four Oxen and the Lion

A little thing in hand is worth more than a great thing in prospect.[2]

The Fisher and the Little Fish

Little by little does the trick.

The Crow and the Pitcher

I will have nought to do with a man who can blow hot and cold with the same breath.

The Man and the Satyr

Thinking to get at once all the gold the Goose could give, he killed it and opened it only to find, — nothing.

The Goose with the Golden Eggs

Put your shoulder to the wheel.

Hercules and the Waggoner

The gods help them that help themselves.

Ibid.

Please all, and you will please none.

The Man, the Boy, and the Donkey

Who is to bell the Cat? It is easy to propose impossible remedies.

Belling the Cat

When the Hare awoke from his nap, he saw the Tortoise just near the winning post. Plodding wins the race.

The Hare and the Tortoise

We would often be sorry if our wishes were gratified.[3]

The Old Man and Death

Union gives strength.

The Bundle of Sticks

While I see many hoof-marks going in, I see none coming out. It is easier to get into the enemy's toils than out again.

The Lion, the Fox, and the Beasts

The haft of the arrow had been feathered with one of the eagle's own plumes. We often give our enemies the means of our own destruction.[4]

Who is my foe I must but hate as one Whom I may yet call friend: and him who loves me
Will I but serve and cherish as a man Whose love is not abiding. Few be they Who reaching friendship's port have there found rest.
The Death of Ajax, translated by CHARLES STUART CALVERLEY [1831–1884]

Long since I knew to treat my foe like one Whom I hereafter as a friend might love
If he deserved it, and to love my friend
As if he still might one day be my foe:
For little is the trust we can repose
In human friendships.

HERODOTUS
[484–424 B. C.]

Translation by William Beloe
[1756–1817]

Call no man happy till you know the nature of his death; he is at best but fortunate.[1]

Book I, Clio. Chap. 32

They [the Persians] are accustomed to deliberate on matters of the highest moment when warm with wine; but whatever they in this situation may determine is again proposed to them on the morrow, in their cooler moments, by the person in whose house they had before assembled. If at this time also it meet their approbation, it is executed; otherwise it is rejected. Whatever also they discuss when sober, is always a second time examined after they have been drinking.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 133

They joined battle, and the Phocaeans won, yet it was but a Cadmean victory.[3]

Ibid. Chap. 166

The art of medicine in Egypt is thus exercised: one physician is confined to the study and management of one disease; there are of course a great number who practice this art; some attend to the disorders of the eyes, others to those of the head, some take care of the teeth, others are conversant with all diseases of the bowels; whilst many attend to the cure of maladies which are less conspicuous.

titude, our form of government is called a democracy. Wherein there is not only an equality amongst all men in point of law for their private controversies, but in election to public offices we consider neither class nor rank, but each man is preferred according to his virtue or to the esteem in which he is held for some special excellence: nor is any one put back even through poverty, because of the obscurity of his person, so long as he can do good service to the commonwealth.

History. Book II, Chap. 37, Pericles' Funeral Oration over the Athenians who fell in the first year of the Peloponnesian War

And when Athens shall appear great to you, consider then that her glories were purchased by valiant men, and by men that learned their duty; by men that were sensible of dishonour when they came to act; by such men as, though they failed in their attempt, yet would not be wanting to the city with their virtue, but made unto it a most honourable contribution.

Ibid.

To famous men all the earth is a sepulchre.

Ibid.

Their virtues shall be testified not only by the inscription on stone at home but in all lands wheresoever in the unwritten record of the mind, which far beyond any monument will remain with all men everlastingly.

HIPPOCRATES

[460–377 B. C.]

Translation by William Henry Rich Jones [1817–1885]

I swear by Apollo Physician, by Asclepius, by Health, by Panacea, and by all the gods and goddesses, making them my witnesses, that I will carry out, according to my ability and judgment, this oath and this indenture. To hold my teacher in this art equal to my own parents; to make him partner in my livelihood; when he is in need of money to share mine with him; to consider his family as my own brothers, and to teach them this art, if they want to learn it, without fee or indenture. I will use treatment to help the sick according to my ability and judgment, but never with a view to injury and wrong doing. I will keep pure and holy both my life and my art. In whatsoever houses I enter, I will enter to help the sick, and I will abstain from all intentional wrong-doing and harm. And whatsoever I shall see or hear in the course of my profession in my intercourse with men, if it be what should not be published abroad, I will never divulge, holding such things to be holy secrets. Now if I carry out this oath, and break it not, may I gain forever reputation among all men for my life and for my art; but if I transgress it and forswear myself, may the opposite befall me.

The Physician's Oath

Healing is a matter of time, but it is sometimes also a matter of opportunity.

Precepts. Chap. 1

Sometimes give your services for nothing, calling to mind a previous benefaction or present satisfaction. And if there be an opportunity of serving one who is a stranger in financial straits, give full assistance to all such. For where there is love of man, there is also love of the art. For some patients, though conscious that their condition is perilous, recover their health simply through their contentment with the goodness of the physician. And it is well to superintend the sick to make them well, to care for the healthy to keep them well, but also to care for one's own self, so as to observe what is seemly.

Precepts. Chap. 6

In all abundance there is lack.

Ibid. Chap. 8

If for the sake of a crowded audience you do wish to hold a lecture, your ambition is no laudable one, and at least avoid all citations from the poets, for to quote them argues feeble industry.

[2] Halcyon days. — SHAKESPEARE: King Henry VI, Part I, Act I, Sc. 1, L. 131

The appellation of Halcyon-days, which was applied to a rare and bloodless week of repose. — GIBBON: Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Chap. 48

[3] Translated by THOMAS MITCHELL [1783–1845].

[4] Translated by RICHARD CUMBERLAND [1732–1811].

O the days that are gone by, O the days that are no more,
When my eye was bold and fearless, and my hand was on the oar.

The Wasps

Bitt'rest stroke of all we feel it, that an idle brood be fed
At our cost, who never handled oar or jav'lin, never bled, Nor so much as rais'd a blister in their suff'ring country's stead.

DIONYSIUS THE ELDER

[430–367 B. C.]

Let thy speech be better than silence, or be silent.

Fragment 6

PLATO

[427–347 B. C.]

Translation by BENJAMIN JOWETT. Oxford University Press

He who is of a calm and happy nature will hardly feel the pressure of age, but to him who is of an opposite disposition youth and age are equally a burden.

The Republic. Book I, 329-D

No physician, in so far as he is a physician, considers his own good in what he prescribes, but the good of his patient; for the true physician is also a ruler having the human body as a subject, and is not a mere money-maker.

Ibid. 342-D

When there is an income-tax, the just man will pay more and the unjust less on the same amount of income.

Ibid. 343-D

Mankind censure injustice, fearing that they may be the victims of it and not because they shrink from committing it.

Ibid. 344-C

Necessity, who is the mother of invention.[1]

Ibid., Book II, 369-C

The beginning is the most important part of the work.

The Republic. Book II, 377-B

A fit of laughter which has been indulged to excess almost always produces a violent reaction.

Ibid. Book III, 388-E

Beauty of style and harmony and grace and good rhythm depend on simplicity.

Ibid. 400-D

Musical training is a more potent instrument than any other, because rhythm and harmony find their way into the inward places of the soul.

Ibid. 401-D

Gymnastic as well as music should begin in early years.

Ibid. 403-C

They do certainly give very strange and new-fangled names to diseases.

Ibid. 405-C

The judge should not be young; he should have learned to know evil, not from his own soul, but from late and long observation of the nature of evil in others: knowledge should be his guide, not personal experience.

Ibid. 409-B

Everything that deceives may be said to enchant.

Ibid. 413-C

Under the influence either of poverty or of wealth, workmen and their work are equally liable to degenerate.

Ibid. Book IV, 421-E

Wealth is the parent of luxury and indolence, and poverty of meanness and viciousness, and both of discontent.

Ibid. 422

The direction in which education starts a man will determine his future life.

Ibid. 425-B

What is the prime of life? May it not be defined as a period of about twenty years in a woman's life, and thirty in a man's?

Ibid. Book V, 460-E

Let there be one man who has a city obedient to his will, and he might bring into existence the ideal polity about which the world is so incredulous.

---

[1] See Richard Franck, page 171.

The Republic. Book V, 502-B

Astronomy compels the soul to look upwards and leads us from this world to another.

Ibid. Book VII, 529

I have hardly ever known a mathematician who was capable of reasoning.

Ibid. 531-E

Solon was under a delusion when he said that a man when he grows old may learn many things — for he can no more learn much than he can run much; youth is the time for any extraordinary toil.

Ibid. 536-D

Bodily exercise, when compulsory, does no harm to the body; but knowledge which is acquired under compulsion obtains no hold on the mind.

Ibid. 536-E

Let early education be a sort of amusement; you will then be better able to find out the natural bent.

Ibid. 537

The character of the son begins to develop when he hears his mother complaining that her husband has no place in the government, of which the consequence is that she has no precedence among other women.

Ibid. Book VIII, 549-C

Oligarchy: A government resting on a valuation of property, in which the rich have power and the poor man is deprived of it.

Ibid. 550-C

Democracy, which is a charming form of government, full of variety and disorder, and dispensing a sort of equality to equals and unequals alike.[1]

Ibid. 558-C

The people have always some champion whom they set over them and nurse into greatness. . . . This and no other is the root from which a tyrant springs; when he first appears he is a protector.

Ibid. 565-C

In the early days of his power, he is full of smiles, and he salutes every one whom he meets.

The Republic. Book VIII, 566-D

When the tyrant has disposed of foreign enemies by conquest or treaty, and there is nothing to fear from them, then he is always stirring up some war or other, in order that the people may require a leader.

Ibid. 566-E

Has he not also another object which is that they may be impoverished by payment of taxes, and thus compelled to devote themselves to their daily wants and therefore less likely to conspire against him?

Ibid. 567

What a poor appearance the tales of poets make when stripped of the colours which music puts upon them, and recited in simple prose.

Ibid. Book X, 601-B

There are three arts which are concerned with all things: one which uses, another which makes, a third which imitates them.

Ibid. 601-D

No human thing is of serious importance.

Ibid.

The soul of man is immortal and imperishable.

Ibid. 608-D

These are the Fates, daughters of Necessity . . . Lachesis singing of the past, Clotho of the present, Atropos of the future.

Ibid. 617-C

You are young, my son, and, as the years go by, time will change and even reverse many of your present opinions. Refrain therefore awhile from setting yourself up as a judge of the highest matters.[1]

Laws. 888

[1] See Aristotle, page 1090.

[1] I could never divide myself from any man upon the difference of an opinion, or be angry with his judgment for not agreeing with me in that from which perhaps within a few days I should dissent myself. — Sir Thomas Browne: Religio Medici (Everyman ed.), P. 7

And this which you deem of no moment is the very highest of all: that is whether you have a right idea of the gods, whereby you may live your life well or ill.

Laws. 888

Not one of them who took up in his youth with this opinion that there are no gods, ever continued until old age faithful to his conviction.

Ibid.

ZEUXIS
[Circa 400 B. C.]

Criticism comes easier than craftsmanship.

Quoted by PLINY in Natural History

ARISTOTLE
[384–322 B. C.]

Poverty is the parent of revolution and crime.

Politics.[1] Book II

Even when laws have been written down, they ought not always to remain unaltered.

Ibid.

The law has no power to command obedience except that of habit, which can only be given by time, so that a readiness to change from old to new laws enfeebles the power of the law.

Ibid.

That judges of important causes should hold office for life is not a good thing, for the mind grows old as well as the body.

Ibid.

If liberty and equality, as is thought by some, are chiefly to be found in democracy, they will be best attained when all persons alike share in the government to the utmost.[2]

Ibid. Book IV

The best political community is formed by citizens of the middle class. Those States are likely to be well administered in which the middle class is large, and larger if possible than both the other classes, or at any rate than either singly; for the addition of the middle class turns the scale and prevents either of the extremes from being dominant.

Politics. Book IV

Inferiors revolt in order that they may be equal, and equals that they may be superior. Such is the state of mind which creates revolutions.

Ibid. Book V

Revolutions break out when opposite parties, the rich and the poor, are equally balanced, and there is little or nothing between them; for, if either party were manifestly superior, the other would not risk an attack upon them.

Ibid.

All admit that in a certain sense the several kinds of character are bestowed by nature. Justice, a tendency to Temperance, Courage, and the other types of character are exhibited from the moment of birth.

Nicomachean Ethics. VI, 13, 1

In practical matters the end is not mere speculative knowledge of what is to be done, but rather the doing of it. It is not enough to know about Virtue, then, but we must endeavour to possess it, and to use it, or to take any other steps that may make us good.

Ibid. X, 9, 1

The generality of men are naturally apt to be swayed by fear rather than by reverence, and to refrain from evil rather because of the punishment that it brings, than because of its own foulness.

Ibid.

What makes men good is held by some to be nature, by others habit or training, by others instruction. As for the goodness that comes by nature, this is plainly not within our control, but is bestowed by some divine agency on certain people who truly deserve to be called fortunate.

DEMOSTHENES

[384–322 B. C.]

I do not purchase regret at such a price.

Reply to Laïs

Though a man escape every other danger, he can never wholly escape those who do not want such a person as he is to exist.

De Falsa Legatione.[1] 228

Every advantage in the past is judged in the light of the final issue.

First Olynthiac.[1] 11

Like the diet prescribed by doctors, which neither restores the strength of the patient nor allows him to succumb, so these doles that you are now distributing neither suffice to ensure your safety nor allow you to renounce them and try something else.

Third Olynthiac.[1] 33

To remind the man of the good turns you have done him is very much like a reproach.

MENANDER

[343–292 B. C.]

Translation by FRANCIS G. ALLINSON, Loeb Classical Library

You knew not how to live in clover.

The Girl from Samos. Act 2, Sc. 4

The man who first invented the art of supporting beggars made many wretched.

The Fishermen. Fragment

We live, not as we wish to, but as we can.

The Lady of Andros. Fragment

In many ways the saying "Know thyself" is not well said. It were more practical to say "Know other people." [2]

Thrasyleon. Fragment

I call a fig a fig, a spade a spade.[3]

Unidentified minor fragment

A woman is necessarily an evil, but he that gets the most tolerable one is lucky.[1]

Unidentified minor fragment

Manner, not gold, is woman's best adornment.

Fragment. Quoted in The Spectator, January 3, 1712

PILPAY OR BIDPAI [2]

[Circa 326 B. C.?]

We ought to do our neighbour all the good we can. If you do good, good will be done to you; but if you do evil, the same will be measured back to you again.[3]

Chap. 1. Dabschelim and Pilpay

It has been the providence of Nature to give this creature [the cat] nine lives instead of one.[4]

Ibid. Fable 3, The Greedy and Ambitious Cat

There is no gathering the rose without being pricked by the thorns.[5]

Chap. 2. Fable 6, The Two Travellers

Wise men say that there are three sorts of persons who are wholly deprived of judgment, — they who are ambitious of preferments in the courts of princes; they who make use of poison to show their skill in curing it; and they who intrust women with their secrets.

Chap. 2. Fable 6, The Two Travellers

Men are used as they use others.

Ibid. Fable 9, The King Who Became Just

What is bred in the bone will never come out of the flesh.[1]

Ibid. Fable 14, The Two Fishermen

Guilty consciences always make people cowards.[2]

Chap. 3. Fable 3, The Prince and His Minister

Whoever . . . prefers the service of princes before his duty to his Creator, will be sure, early or late, to repent in vain.

Ibid.

There are some who bear a grudge even to those that do them good.

Ibid. Fable 6, A Religious Doctor

There was once, in a remote part of the East, a man who was altogether void of knowledge and experience, yet presumed to call himself a physician.

Ibid. Fable 8, The Ignorant Physician

He that plants thorns must never expect to gather roses.[3]

Ibid.

Honest men esteem and value nothing so much in this world as a real friend. Such a one is as it were another self, to whom we impart our most secret thoughts, who partakes of our joy, and comforts us in our affliction; add to this, that his company is an everlasting pleasure to us.

Chap. 4. Choice of Friends

That possession was the strongest tenure of the law.[1]

Chap. 5. Fable 4, The Cat and the Two Birds

Wild elephants are caught by tame;
With money it is just the same.

TERENCE

[185–159 B. C.]

Translation by HENRY THOMAS RILEY [1816–1878]. The references are to the text of the Bohn Classical Library.

Of surpassing beauty and in the bloom of youth.

Andria. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 45 (72)

Hence these tears.

Ibid. Line 99 (126)

That is a true proverb which is wont to be commonly quoted, that "all had rather it were well for themselves than for another."

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 5, Line 15 (426)

The quarrels of lovers are the renewal of love.[1]

Ibid. Act III, Sc. 3, Line 23 (555)

Look you, I am the most concerned in my own interests.[2]

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 1, Line 12 (636)

In fine, nothing is said now that has not been said before.[3]

Eunuchus. The Prologue, Line 41

Immortal gods! how much does one man excel another! What a difference there is between a wise person and a fool!

Ibid. Act II, Sc. 2, Line 1 (232)

I have everything, yet have nothing; and although I possess nothing, still of nothing am I in want.[4]

Ibid. Line 12 (243)

There are vicissitudes in all things.

Ibid. Line 45 (276)

The very flower of youth.[5]

Ibid. Sc. 3, Line 27 (319)

I did not care one straw.

Eunuchus. Act III, Sc. 1, Line 21 (411)

Jupiter, now assuredly is the time when I could readily consent to be slain, lest life should sully this ecstasy with some disaster.[1]

Ibid. Sc. 5, Line 2 (550)

This and a great deal more like it I have had to put up with.

Ibid. Act IV, Sc. 6, Line 8 (746)

Take care and say this with presence of mind.[2]

Ibid. Line 31 (769)

It behooves a prudent person to make trial of everything before arms.

Ibid. Sc. 7, Line 19 (789)

I know the disposition of women: when you will, they won't; when you won't, they set their hearts upon you of their own inclination.

Ibid. Line 42 (812)

I took to my heels as fast as I could.

Ibid. Act V, Sc. 2, Line 5 (844)

Many a time, . . . from a bad beginning great friendships have sprung up.

Ibid. Line 34 (873)

I only wish I may see your head stroked down with a slipper.[3]

Ibid. Sc. 8, Line 1 (1028)

I am a man, and nothing that concerns a man do I deem a matter of indifference to me.[4]

Heauton Timoroumenos. Act I, Sc. 1, Line 25 (77)

This is a wise maxim, "to take warning from others of what may be to your own advantage."

Ibid. Sc. 2, Line 36 (210)

That saying which I hear commonly repeated, — that time assuages sorrow.

[8] Translated by CYRUS R. EDMONDS.

Nothing can be more disgraceful than to be at war with him with whom you have lived on terms of friendship.

De Amicitia. XXI

He removes the greatest ornament of friendship, who takes away from it respect.

Ibid. XXII

There is no greater bane to friendship than adulation, fawning, and flattery.

Ibid. XXV

Crimes are not to be measured by the issue of events, but from the bad intentions of men.

Paradox III

There is no place more delightful than home.

Epistolae. IV, 8

While the sick man has life there is hope.[1]

Ibid. IX, 10

For as I like a young man in whom there is something of the old, so I like an old man in whom there is something of the young; and he who follows this maxim, in body will possibly be an old man, but he will never be an old man in mind.

De Senectute.[2] XI

Old age is by nature rather talkative.

Ibid. XVI

Old age, especially an honored old age, has so great authority, that this is of more value than all the pleasures of youth.

Ibid. XVII

Intelligence, and reflection, and judgment, reside in old men, and if there had been none of them, no states could exist at all.

Ibid. XIX

The short period of life is long enough for living well and honourably.[3]

The harvest of old age is the recollection and abundance of blessings previously secured.

De Senectute. XIX

Nor, in truth, would the honours of illustrious men continue after death, if their own spirits did not make us preserve a longer remembrance of them.

Ibid. XXII

Old age is the consummation of life, just as of a play.

SALLUST

[86–34 B. C.]

Translation by J. C. ROLFE

Experience has shown that to be true which Appius [4] says in his verses, that every man is the architect of his own fortune; [5] and this proverb is especially true of you, who have excelled others to such a degree that men are sooner wearied in singing the praises of your deeds than you in doing deeds worthy of praise.

[70–19 B. C.]

Age carries all things, even the mind, away.

Bucolics. IX, Line 51

We have now made you for a time out of marble.

Eclogues. VII, Line 35

Love conquers all.[1]

Ibid. X, Line 69

Be favourable to bold beginnings.[2]

Georgics. I, Line 40

Practice, by taking thought, might little by little hammer out divers arts.

Ibid. Line 133

Let the fields and the gliding streams in the valleys delight me. Inglorious, let me court the rivers and forests.[3]

Ibid. II, Line 485

Some trouble the dangerous seas with oars, others rush to arms.

Ibid. Line 503

Happy they whose walls already rise.

Aeneid. Book I, Line 437

While rivers run into the sea, while on the mountains shadows move over the slopes, while heaven feeds the stars, ever shall thy honour, thy name, and thy praises endure.

Ibid. Line 607

I fear the Greeks, even when bringing gifts.[4]

Ibid. Book II, Line 49

Do not commit your poems to pages alone. Sing them, I pray you.

Minor Poems. Copa: Syrisca, a Dancing Girl,[1] Line 29

Here's Death, twitching my ear: "Live," says he, "for I'm coming."[2]

Ibid. Line 38

These lines made I, another steals my honors;
So you for others, oxen, bear the yoke;
So you for others, bees, store up your honey;
So you for others, sheep, put on your fleece;
So you for others, birds, construct your nests.[3]

[2] For the reverse side of the Great Seal of the United States (first used on the silver dollar certificates, series of 1935) this line of Virgil has been adapted, changed from the imperative mood, Audacibus annue coeptis, to the indicative mood, Annuit coeptis, He smiles on our beginnings.

[3] These lines preface PHILIP FRENEAU'S poem, The Indian Student.

[4] See Euripides, page 1082.

[1] Attributed to Virgil by CHARISIUS, the Grammarian, and by SUETONIUS, though modern scholars question the authenticity of all the minor poems.

[2] Quoted by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in a radio address on his ninetieth birthday [March 8, 1931].

[3] Virgil wrote a distich, praising Caesar, and Bathyllus claimed the lines. To expose him, Virgil wrote beneath the distich the following incomplete verses, and Caesar asked Bathyllus to finish the lines. He could not, and Virgil then supplied the missing words (italicized below):

Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter honores;
Sic vos non vobis, fertis aratra boves;
Sic vos non vobis, mellificatis apes;
Sic vos non vobis, vellera fertis oves;
Sic vos non vobis, nidificatis aves.

With soaring head I'll strike the stars of heaven.

Odes, Book I.[1] I, To Maecenas, Line 35

No task's too steep for human wit.

Ibid. III, To a Ship Bearing Virgil Over Seas, Line 37

With equal foot Pluto knocks at hovels of the poor,
And at the tyrant's towers.

Ibid. IV, Spring, Line 13

To-night with wine drown care.

Ibid. VII, To Plancus, Line 30

Melt me this cold, freely the firelogs throwing
On hearth, my Thaliarchus! And

Two-eared, of Sabine make, unlock Wine, with four years a-glowing! [2]

Ibid. IX, To Thaliarchus, Line 5

What next morn's sun may bring, forebear to ask;
But count each day that comes by gift of chance
So much to the good.

SENECA

[8 B. C.–A. D. 65]

Translation by W. H. D. ROUSE, Loeb Classical Library

What fools these mortals be.[3]

Epistles. 1, 3

It is not the man who has too little, but the man who craves more, that is poor.

Ibid. 2, 2

Love of bustle is not industry.

Ibid. 3, 5

Live among men as if God beheld you; speak to God as if men were listening.

Ibid. 10, 5

The best ideas are common property.

Ibid. 12, 11

Men do not care how nobly they live, but only how long, although it is within the reach of every man to live nobly, but within no man's power to live long.

Ibid. 22, 17

A great pilot can sail even when his canvas is rent.

Ibid. 30, 3

Man is a reasoning animal.

Ibid. 41, 8

That most knowing of persons, — gossip.

PLINY THE ELDER

[A. D. 23–79]

With some alterations, from translations by John Bostock, M.D. [1773–1846] and Henry Thomas Riley [1816–1878]. Bohn Classical Library

In comparing various authors with one another, I have discovered that some of the gravest and latest writers have transcribed, word for word, from former works, without making acknowledgment.

Natural History. Book I, Dedication, Sect. 22

The world, and whatever that be which we call the heavens, by the vault of which all things are enclosed, we must conceive to be a deity, to be eternal, without bounds, neither created nor subject at any time to destruction. To inquire what is beyond it is no concern of man; nor can the human mind form any conjecture concerning it.

Ibid. Book II, Sect. 1

It is ridiculous to suppose that the great head of things, whatever it be, pays any regard to human affairs.

Ibid. Sect. 20

Everything is soothed by oil, and this is the reason why divers send out small quantities of it from their mouths, because it smooths every part which is rough.[2]

Ibid. Sect. 234

---

[1] Pliny, in his Natural History, Book 8, Sect. 148, and Aelian, in his Various Histories, relate the same fact as to the dogs drinking from the Nile. "To treat a thing as the dogs do the Nile" was a common proverb with the ancients, signifying to do it superficially.

[2] Non semper ea sunt quae videntur.

See Longfellow, page 433.

[3] Everybody has his own delusion assigned to him: but we do not see that part of the bag which hangs on our back. — Catullus: Poem 22, L. 20

Whosoever shall call me madman, shall hear as much from me, and shall learn to look back upon the bag that hangs behind him. — Horace: Satires, Book II, III

All watch the wallet on the back that walks before. — Persius: 4, 24

[1] See Aesop, page 1076.

[2] Why does pouring oil on the sea make it clear and calm? Is it for that the winds, slipping the smooth oil, have no force, nor cause any waves? — Plutarch: Natural Questions, IX

Bishop Adain [A. D. 651] gave to a company about to take a journey by sea "some holy oil, It is far from easy to determine whether she [Nature] has proved to him a kind parent or a merciless stepmother.[1]

Natural History. Book VII, Sect. 1

Man alone at the very moment of his birth, cast naked upon the naked earth, does she abandon to cries and lamentations.[2]

Ibid. Sect. 2

To laugh, if but for an instant only, has never been granted to man before the fortieth day from his birth, and then it is looked upon as a miracle of precocity.[3]

Ibid.

Man is the only one that knows nothing, that can learn nothing without being taught. He can neither speak nor walk nor eat, and in short he can do nothing at the prompting of nature only, but weep.[4]

Ibid. Sect. 4

With man, most of his misfortunes are occasioned by man.[1]

Natural History. Book VII, Sect. 5

Indeed, what is there that does not appear marvellous when it comes to our knowledge for the first time?[2] How many things, too, are looked upon as quite impossible until they have been actually effected?

Ibid. Sect. 6

The human features and countenance, although composed of but some ten parts or little more, are so fashioned that among so many thousands of men there are no two in existence who cannot be distinguished from one another.[3]

Ibid. Sect. 8

All men possess in their bodies a poison which acts upon serpents; and the human saliva, it is said, makes them take to flight, as though they had been touched with boiling water. The same substance, it is said, destroys them the moment it enters their throat.[4]

Ibid. Sect. 15

It has been observed that the height of a man from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot is equal to the distance between the tips of the middle fingers of the two hands when extended in a straight line.

Ibid. Sect. 77

When a building is about to fall down, all the mice desert it.[5]

Ibid. Book VIII, Sect. 103

---

saying, 'I know that when you go abroad you will meet with a storm and contrary wind; but do you remember to cast this oil I give you into the sea, and the wind shall cease immediately.' " — BEDE: Ecclesiastical History, Book III, Chap. 14

In JARED SPARKS' edition of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S Works, Vol. VI, P. 354, there are letters between Franklin, Brownrigg, and Parish on the stilling of waves by means of oil.

[1] To man the earth seems altogether
No more a mother, but a step-dame rather.
GUILLAUME DE SALLUSTE DU BARTAS [1544–1590]: Divine Weekes and Workes, First Weeke, Third Day

[2] He is born naked, and falls a-whining at the first. — BURTON: Anatomy of Melancholy, Part I, Sect. 2, Memb. 3, Subsect. 10

And when I was born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, which is of like nature; and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do. — The Wisdom of Solomon, VII, 3

It was the custom among the ancients to place the new-born child upon the ground immediately after its birth.

[3] This term of forty days is mentioned by ARISTOTLE in his Natural History, as also by some modern physiologists.

[4] No language but a cry. — TENNYSON: In Memoriam, LIV, 5

[1] Man's inhumanity to man. — BURNS: Man Was Made to Mourn

[2] Omne ignotum pro magnifico (Everything that is unknown is taken to be grand). — TACITUS: Agricola, 30

[3] See Sir Thomas Browne, page 144.

[4] Madame d'Abrantes relates that when Bonaparte was in Cairo he sent for a serpent-detecter (Psylli) to remove two serpents that had been seen in his house. He having enticed one of them from his hiding-place, caught it in one hand, just below the jawbone, in such a manner as to oblige the mouth to open, when spitting into it, the effect was like magic: the reptile appeared struck with instant death. — Memoirs, Vol. I, Chap. 59

[5] This is alluded to by CICERO in his letters to Atticus, and is mentioned by AELIAN (Animated Nature, Book VI, Chap. 41). Compare the modern proverb, "Rats desert a sinking ship."

Bears when first born are shapeless masses of white flesh a little larger than mice, their claws alone being prominent. The mother then licks them gradually into proper shape.[1]

Natural History. Book VIII, Sect. 126

It has become quite a common proverb that in wine there is truth.

Ibid. Book XIV, Sect. 141

Cincinnatus was ploughing his four jugera of land upon the Vaticanian Hill, — the same that are still known as the Quintian Meadows, — when the messenger brought him the dictatorship, finding him, the tradition says, stripped to the work.

Ibid. Book XVIII, Sect. 20

The agricultural population, says Cato, produces the bravest men, the most valiant soldiers, and a class of citizens the least given of all to evil designs.

Ibid. Sect. 26

Why is it that we entertain the belief that for every purpose odd numbers are the most effectual? [2]

Ibid. Book XXVIII, Sect. 23

It was a custom with Apelles, to which he most tenaciously adhered, never to let any day pass, however busy he might be, without exercising himself by tracing some outline or other, — a practice which has now passed into a proverb.[3] It was also a practice with him, when he had completed a work, to exhibit it to the view of the passers-by in his studio, while he himself, concealed behind the picture, would listen to the criticisms. . . . Under these circumstances, they say that he was censured by a shoemaker for having represented the shoes with one latchet too few. The next day, the shoemaker, quite proud at seeing the former error corrected, thanks to his advice, began to criticize the leg; upon which Apelles, full of indignation, popped his head out and reminded him that a shoemaker should give no opinion beyond the shoes,[1] — a piece of advice which has equally passed into a proverbial saying.

Tenth Discourse, On Servants. Chap. 7

Like men with sore eyes: they find the light painful, while the darkness, which permits them to see nothing, is restful and agreeable.

Eleventh, or Trojan, Discourse. Chap. 2

Most men are so completely corrupted by opinion that they would rather be notorious for the greatest calamities than suffer no ill and be unknown.

Ibid. Chap. 6

Generally speaking, men are too cowardly to be willing to undergo severe suffering, since they fear death and pain, but they highly prize being mentioned as having suffered.

The most perfect soul, says Heraclitus, is a dry light, which flies out of the body as lightning breaks from a cloud.

Ibid. Romulus, Page 45

Anacharsis, coming to Athens, knocked at Solon's door, and told him that he, being a stranger, was come to be his guest, and contract a friendship with him; and Solon replying, "It is better to make friends at home," Anacharsis replied, "Then you that are at home make friendship with me."

Ibid. Solon, Page 99

Themistocles said that he certainly could not make use of any stringed instrument; could only, were a small and obscure city put into his hands, make it great and glorious.

Ibid. Themistocles, Page 134

Eurybiades lifting up his staff as if he were going to strike, Themistocles said, "Strike, if you will, but hear." [2]

Ibid. Page 141

Themistocles said to Antiphates, . . . "Time, young man, has taught us both a lesson."

Ibid. Page 145

"You speak truth," said Themistocles; "I should never have been famous if I had been of Seriphus; [3] nor you, had you been of Athens."

Ibid.

Laughing at his own son, who got his mother, and, by his mother's means, his father also, to indulge him, he told him that he had the most power of any one in Greece: "For the Athenians command the rest of Greece, I command the Athenians, your mother commands me, and you command your mother." [4]

Ibid.

Of two who made love to his daughter, he preferred the man of worth to the one who was rich, saying he desired a man without riches, rather than riches without a man.

Lives. Themistocles, Page 145

Themistocles replied that a man's discourse was like to a rich Persian carpet, the beautiful figures and patterns of which can be shown only by spreading and extending it out; when it is contracted and folded up, they are obscure and lost.[1]

Ibid. Page 152

Moderation is best, and to avoid all extremes.

Ibid. Camillus, Page 159

Caesar once, seeing some wealthy strangers at Rome, carrying up and down with them in their arms and bosoms young puppy-dogs and monkeys, embracing and making much of them, took occasion not unnaturally to ask whether the women in their country were not used to bear children.

Ibid. Pericles, Page 182

He who busies himself in mean occupations produces, in the very pains he takes about things of little or no use, an evidence against himself of his negligence and indisposition to what is really good.

[4] "Men," said Marcus Cato, "usually command women; but we command all men, and the women command us." But this, indeed, is borrowed from the sayings of Themistocles. — Lives, Marcus Cato, P. 416

Diophantus, the young son of Themistocles, made his boast often and in many companies, that whatsoever pleased him pleased also all Athens; for whatever he liked, his mother liked; and whatever his mother liked, Themistocles liked; and whatever Themistocles liked, all the Athenians liked. — Of the Training of Children

When the son of Themistocles was a little saucy toward his mother, he said that this boy had more power than all the Grecians; for the Athenians governed Greece, he the Athenians, his wife him, and his son his wife. — Apophthegms of Kings and Great Commanders, Themistocles

[1] Themistocles said speech was like to tapestry; and like it, when it was spread it showed its figures, but when it was folded up, hid and spoiled them. — Apophthegms of Kings and Great Commanders, Themistocles

So very difficult a matter is it to trace and find out the truth of anything by history.

Lives. Pericles, Page 194

Menenius Agrippa concluded, at length, with the celebrated fable: "It once happened that all the other members of a man mutinied against the stomach, which they accused as the only idle, uncontributing part in the whole body, while the rest were put to hardships and the expense of much labour to supply and minister to its appetites." [2]

Ibid. Coriolanus, Page 266

Men are usually more stung and galled by reproachful words than hostile actions.

Lives. Timoleon, Page 316

A Roman divorced from his wife, being highly blamed by his friends, who demanded, "Was she not chaste? Was she not fair? Was she not fruitful?" holding out his shoe, asked them whether it was not new and well made. "Yet," added he, "none of you can tell where it pinches me." [1]

Ibid. Aemilius Paulus, Page 322

Petty repeated annoyances, arising from unpleasantness or incongruity of character, have been the occasion of such estrangement as to make it impossible for man and wife to live together with any content.

Translation [1865] by THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON [1823–1911], based on that [1758] of ELIZABETH CARTER [1717–1806]

To a reasonable creature, that alone is insupportable which is unreasonable; but everything reasonable may be supported.

Discourses. Chap. 2

When you have shut your doors, and darkened your room, remember never to say that you are alone, for you are not alone;[3] but God is within, and your genius is within, — and what need have they of light to see what you are doing?

Ibid. Chap. 14

No great thing is created suddenly, any more than a bunch of grapes or a fig. If you tell me that you desire a fig, I answer you that there must be time. Let it first blossom, then bear fruit, then ripen.

Ibid. Chap. 15

Any one thing in the creation is sufficient to demonstrate a Providence to an humble and grateful mind.

Ibid. Chap. 16

Were I a nightingale, I would act the part of a nightingale; were I a swan, the part of a swan.

Ibid.

Since it is Reason which shapes and regulates all other things, it ought not itself to be left in disorder.

Ibid. Chap. 17

Practise yourself, for heaven's sake, in little things; and thence proceed to greater.

Discourses. Chap. 18

Why, then, do you walk as if you had swallowed a ramrod?

Ibid. Chap. 21

Difficulties are things that show what men are.

Ibid. Chap. 24

If we are not stupid or insincere when we say that the good or ill of man lies within his own will, and that all beside is nothing to us, why are we still troubled?

Ibid. Chap. 25

In theory there is nothing to hinder our following what we are taught; but in life there are many things to draw us aside.

Ibid. Chap. 26

Appearances to the mind are of four kinds. Things either are what they appear to be; or they neither are, nor appear to be; or they are, and do not appear to be; or they are not, and yet appear to be. Rightly to aim in all these cases is the wise man's task.

Ibid. Chap. 27

The appearance of things to the mind is the standard of every action to man.

That We Ought Not to Be Angry with Mankind. 27

For what constitutes a child? — Ignorance. What constitutes a child? — Want of instruction; for they are our equals so far as their degree of knowledge permits.

That Courage Is Not Inconsistent with Caution. Book II, 1

The materials of action are variable, but the use we make of them should be constant.

How Nobleness of Mind May Be Consistent with Prudence. 5

Shall I show you the muscular training of a philosopher? "What muscles are those?" — A will undisappointed; evils avoided; powers daily exercised; careful resolutions; unerring decisions.

Wherein Consists the Essence of Good. 8

[3] Though in a wilderness, a man is never alone. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Religio Medici (Everyman ed.), P. 82

What is the first business of one who studies philosophy? To part with self-conceit. For it is impossible for any one to begin to learn what he thinks that he already knows.

How to Apply General Principles to Particular Cases. 17

Every habit and faculty is preserved and increased by correspondent actions, — as the habit of walking, by walking; or running, by running.

How the Semblances of Things Are to Be Combated. 18

Whatever you would make habitual, practise it; and if you would not make a thing habitual, do not practise it, but habituate yourself to something else.

Ibid.

Reckon the days in which you have not been angry. I used to be angry every day; now every other day; then every third and fourth day; and if you miss it so long as thirty days, offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving to God.

Ibid.

Be not hurried away by excitement, but say, "Semblance, wait for me a little. Let me see what you are and what you represent. Let me try you."

Ibid.

There are some things which men confess with ease, and others with difficulty.

Of Inconsistency. 21

Who is there whom bright and agreeable children do not attract to play and creep and prattle with them?

Concerning a Person Whom He Treated with Disregard. 24

Two rules we should always have ready, — that there is nothing good or evil save in the will; and that we are not to lead events, but to follow them.

In What Manner We Ought to Bear Sickness. Book III, 10

In every affair consider what precedes and what follows, and then undertake it.[1]

That Everything Is to Be Undertaken with Circumspection. 15

First say to yourself what you would be; and then do what you have to do.

Concerning Such as Read and Dispute Ostentatiously. 23

Let not another's disobedience to Nature become an ill to you; for you were not born to be depressed and unhappy with others, but to be happy with them. And if any is unhappy, remember that he is so for himself; for God made all men to enjoy felicity and peace.

That We Ought Not to Be Affected by Things Not in Our Own Power. 24

Everything has two handles, — one by which it may be borne; another by which it cannot.[1]

PLINY THE YOUNGER

[A. D. 61–105]

Translation [1746] by William Melmoth [1710–1799]. Bohn Classical Library

Modestus said of Regulus that he was "the biggest rascal that walks upon two legs."

Letters.[2] Book I, Letter 5, 14

There is nothing to write about, you say. Well, then, write and let me know just this, — that there is nothing to write about; or tell me in the good old style if you are well. That's right. I am quite well.[3]

Ibid. Letter 11, 1

Ibid. Book V, Letter 19, 2

That indolent but agreeable condition of doing nothing.[2]

Ibid. Book VIII, Letter 9, 3

Objects which are usually the motives of our travels by land and by sea are often overlooked and neglected if they lie under our eye. . . . We put off from time to time going and seeing what we know we have an opportunity of seeing when we please.

Ibid. Letter 20, 1

His only fault is that he has no fault.[3]

EMPEROR HADRIAN

[A. D. 76–138]

Dear fleeting, sweeting, little soul,
My body's comrade and its guest,
What region now must be thy goal,
Poor little wan, numb, naked soul,
Unable, as of old, to jest? [4]

Dying Farewell to His Soul, to Honor the Tomb of His Friend, Voconius

I've no mind to be a Florus,
Strolling round among the drink-shops,
Skulking round among the cook-shops,
Victim of fat-gorged mosquitoes.

MARCUS AURELIUS ANTONINUS

[A. D. 121–180]

Translation by Morris Hickey Morgan [1859–1910]

This Being of mine, whatever it really is, consists of a little flesh, a little breath, and the part which governs.

Meditations. II, 2

The ways of the gods are full of providence.

Ibid. 3

Thou wilt find rest from vain fancies if thou doest every act in life as though it were thy last.[1]

Ibid. 5

Find time still to be learning somewhat good, and give up being desultory.

Ibid. 7

No state sorrier than that of the man who keeps up a continual round, and pries into "the secrets of the nether world," as saith the poet, and is curious in conjecture of what is in his neighbour's heart.

Ibid. 13

Though thou be destined to live three thousand years and as many myriads besides, yet remember that no man loseth other life than that which he liveth, nor liveth other than that which he loseth.

Ibid. 14

For a man can lose neither the past nor the future; for how can one take from him that which is not his? So remember these two points: first, that each thing is of like form from everlasting and comes round again in its cycle, and that it signifies not whether a man shall look upon the same things for a hundred years or two hundred, or for an infinity of time; second, that the longest lived and the shortest lived man, when they come to die, lose one and the same thing.

As for life, it is a battle and a sojourning in a strange land; but the fame that comes after is oblivion.

Meditations. II, 17

Waste not the remnant of thy life in those imaginations touching other folk, whereby thou contributest not to the common weal.

Ibid. III, 4

A man should be upright, not be kept upright.

Ibid. 5

Never esteem anything as of advantage to thee that shall make thee break thy word or lose thy self-respect.

Ibid. 7

Let no act be done at haphazard, nor otherwise than according to the finished rules that govern its kind.

Ibid. IV, 2

By a tranquil mind I mean nothing else than a mind well ordered.

Ibid. 3

Think on this doctrine, — that reasoning beings were created for one another's sake; that to be patient is a branch of justice, and that men sin without intending it.

Ibid.

The universe is change; our life is what our thoughts make it.

Ibid.

Nothing can come out of nothing,[1] any more than a thing can go back to nothing.

Ibid. 4

Death, like generation, is a secret of Nature.

Ibid. 5

That which makes the man no worse than he was makes his life no worse: it has no power to harm, without or within.

Ibid. 8

Whatever happens at all happens as it should; thou wilt find this true, if thou shouldst watch narrowly.

Ibid. 10

How much time he gains who does not look to see what his neighbour says or does or thinks, but only at what he does himself, to make it just and holy.

Meditations. IV, 18

Whatever is in any way beautiful hath its source of beauty in itself, and is complete in itself; praise forms no part of it. So it is none the worse nor the better for being praised.

Ibid. 20

All that is harmony for thee, O Universe, is in harmony with me as well. Nothing that comes at the right time for thee is too early or too late for me. Everything is fruit to me that thy seasons bring, O Nature. All things come of thee, have their being in thee, and return to thee.

Ibid. 23

"Let thine occupations be few," saith the sage,[2] "if thou wouldst lead a tranquil life."

Ibid. 24

Love the little trade which thou hast learned, and be content therewith.

Ibid. 31

Remember this, — that there is a proper dignity and proportion to be observed in the performance of every act of life.

Ibid. 32

All is ephemeral, — fame and the famous as well.

Ibid. 35

Observe always that everything is the result of a change, and get used to thinking that there is nothing Nature loves so well as to change existing forms and to make new ones like them.

Ibid. 36

Search men's governing principles, and consider the wise, what they shun and what they cleave to.

Ibid. 38

Time is a sort of river of passing events, and strong is its current; no sooner is a thing brought to sight than it is swept by and another takes its place, and this too will be swept away.

Ibid. 43

[2] Democritus apud Senecam: De Ira, III, 6; De Animi Tranquillitate, 13

All that happens is as usual and familiar as the rose in spring and the crop in summer.

Meditations. IV, 44

That which comes after ever conforms to that which has gone before.

Ibid. 45

Mark how fleeting and paltry is the estate of man, — yesterday in embryo, to-morrow a mummy or ashes. So for the hair's-breadth of time assigned to thee live rationally, and part with life cheerfully, as drops the ripe olive, extolling the season that bore it and the tree that matured it.

Ibid. 48

Deem not life a thing of consequence. For look at the yawning void of the future, and at that other limitless space, the past.

Ibid. 50

Always take the short cut; and that is the rational one. Therefore say and do everything according to soundest reason.

Ibid. 51

In the morning, when thou art sluggish at rousing thee, let this thought be present; "I am rising to a man's work."

Ibid. V, 1

A man makes no noise over a good deed, but passes on to another as a vine to bear grapes again in season.

Ibid. 6

Nothing happens to anybody which he is not fitted by nature to bear.

Ibid. 18

Live with the gods.

Ibid. 27

Look beneath the surface; let not the several quality of a thing nor its worth escape thee.

Ibid. VI, 3

The controlling Intelligence understands its own nature, and what it does, and whereon it works.

Ibid. 5

Do not think that what is hard for thee to master is impossible for man; but if a thing is possible and proper to man, deem it attainable by thee.

Ibid. 19

If any man can convince me and bring home to me that I do not think or act aright, gladly will I change; for I search after truth, by which man never yet was harmed.

Meditations. VI, 21

What is not good for the swarm is not good for the bee.

Ibid. 54

How many, once lauded in song, are given over to the forgotten; and how many who sung their praises are clean gone long ago!

Ibid. VII, 6

One Universe made up of all that is; and one God in it all, and one principle of Being, and one Law, the Reason, shared by all thinking creatures, and one Truth.

Ibid. 9

Let not thy mind run on what thou lackest as much as on what thou hast already.

Ibid. 27

Just as the sand-dunes, heaped one upon another, hide each the first, so in life the former deeds are quickly hidden by those that follow after.

Ibid. 34

The art of living is more like wrestling than dancing, in so far as it stands ready against the accidental and the unforeseen, and is not apt to fall.

Ibid. 61

Remember this, — that very little is needed to make a happy life.

Ibid. 67

Remember that to change thy mind and to follow him that sets thee right, is to be none the less the free agent that thou wast before.

Ibid. VIII, 16

Look to the essence of a thing, whether it be a point of doctrine, of practice, or of interpretation.

Ibid. 22

Be not careless in deeds, nor confused in words, nor rambling in thought.

Ibid. 51

Think not disdainfully of death, but look on it with favour; for even death is one of the things that Nature wills.

Ibid. IX, 3

A wrong-doer is often a man that has left something undone, not always he that has done something.

Meditations. IX, 5

Blot out vain pomp; check impulse; quench appetite; keep reason under its own control.

Ibid. 7

Things that have a common quality ever quickly seek their kind.

Ibid. 9

All things are the same, — familiar in enterprise, momentary in endurance, coarse in substance. All things now are as they were in the day of those whom we have buried.

Ibid. 14

Everything is in a state of metamorphosis. Thou thyself art in everlasting change and in corruption to correspond; so is the whole universe.

Ibid. 19

Forward, as occasion offers. Never look round to see whether any shall note it. . . . Be satisfied with success in even the smallest matter, and think that even such a result is no trifle.

Ibid. 29

Whatever may befall thee, it was preordained for thee from everlasting.

Ibid. X, 5

"The earth loveth the shower," and "the holy ether knoweth what love is." [1] The Universe, too, loves to create whatsoever is destined to be made.

[1] On the 16th of April, 1521, Luther entered the imperial city [of Worms]. . . . On his approach . . . the Elector's chancellor entreated him, in the name of his master, not to enter a town where his death was decided. The answer which Luther returned was simply this. — Baron von Bunsen [1791–1860]: Life of Luther

I will go, though as many devils aim at me as there are tiles on the roofs of the houses. — Leopold von Ranke [1795–1886]: History of the Reformation, Vol. I, P. 533, translated by Sarah Taylor Austin [1793–1867].

Luther it was who, when advised not to trust himself in Worms, declared, "Although there be as many devils in Worms as there are tiles on the house-tops, I will go." — Alexander Smith: Dreamthorp, A Shelf in My Bookcase

Sismondi [1773–1842], Vol. 16, Pp. 241, 242, corrected the expression which had become altered to "Tout est perdu fors l'honneur."

The letter itself is printed entire in Histoire Civile, Physique et Morale de Paris by Jacques Antoine Dulaure [1755–1835]: "Pour vous avertir comment se porte le ressort de mon infortune, de toutes choses ne m'est demeuré que l'honneur et la vie, — qui est sauvé."

[6] AESCHINES [389–314 B.C.] ascribes to Demosthenes the expression, "The sinews of affairs are cut" (Adv. Ctesiphon, Chap. 53). DIOGENES LAERTIUS, in his Life of Bion, Book IV, Chap. 7, Sect. 3, represents Bion as saying, "Riches were the sinews of business," or, as the phrase may mean, "of the state." Referring perhaps to this maxim of the philosopher Bion, PLUTARCH says in his Life of Cleomenes, "He that first said that money was the sinews of affairs, seems especially in that saying to refer to war" (Modern Library Giant ed., P. 986). Accordingly we find money called expressly "the sinews of war" in LIBANIUS, Oration 46, and by the scholiast on PINDAR, Olymp., I, 4, and in CICERO, Philipp., V, 2, "nervos belli, infinitam pecuniam."

Fragment

GEORGIUS FABRICIUS
[1516–1571]

He doth raise his country's fame with his own
And in the mouths of nations yet unborn
His praises shall be sung; Death comes to all
But great achievements raise a monument
Which shall endure until the sun grows cold.

In Praise of Georgius Agricola [1494–1555]. Quoted by Herbert Clark Hoover and Lou Henry Hoover in their translation of Agricola's De Re Metallica, Page XXIV

PIERRE DE RONSARD
[1524–1585]

When you are old, and in the candle light
Sit spinning by the fire at close of day,
You'll sing my songs in praise of you, and say:
"Thus Ronsard sang, whilst still my eyes were bright." [1]

MICHEL DE MONTAIGNE
[1533–1592]

Translation by Charles Cotton [1630–1687], revised by Hazlitt and Wight

Man in sooth is a marvellous vain, fickle, and unstable subject.[1]

Works.[2] Book I, Chap. 1, That Men by Various Ways Arrive at the Same End

All passions that suffer themselves to be relished and digested are but moderate.[3]

Ibid. Chap. 2, Of Sorrow

It is not without good reason said, that he who has not a good memory should never take upon him the trade of lying.[4]

Ibid. Chap. 9, Of Liars

He who should teach men to die would at the same time teach them to live.[5]

Ibid. Chap. 19, That to Study Philosophy Is to Learn to Die

The laws of conscience, which we pretend to be derived from nature, proceed from custom.

Ibid. Chap. 22, Of Custom

Accustom him to everything, that he may not be a Sir Paris, a carpet-knight,[6] but a sinewy, hardy, and vigorous young man.

Ibid. Chap. 25, On the Education of Children

It can be of no importance to me of what religion my physician or my lawyer is; this consideration has nothing in common with the offices of friendship which they owe me.

Works. Book I, Chap. 27, Of Friendship

We were halves throughout, and to that degree that methinks, by outliving him, I defraud him of his part.

Ibid.

There are some defeats more triumphant than victories.[1]

Ibid. Chap. 30, Of Cannibals

Nothing is so firmly believed as what we least know.

Ibid. Chap. 31, Of Divine Ordinances

A wise man never loses anything if he have himself.

Ibid. Chap. 38, Of Solitude

Even opinion is of force enough to make itself to be espoused at the expense of life.

Ibid. Chap. 40, Of Good and Evil

Plato says, " 'Tis to no purpose for a sober man to knock at the door of the Muses"; and Aristotle says "that no excellent soul is exempt from a mixture of folly." [2]

Ibid. Book II, Chap. 2, Of Drunkenness

For a desperate disease a desperate cure.[3]

Ibid. Chap. 3, The Custom of the Isle of Cea

And not to serve for a table-talk.[4]

Ibid.

To which we may add this other Aristotelian consideration, that he who confers a benefit on any one loves him better than he is beloved by him again.[5]

Ibid. Chap. 8, Of the Affection of Fathers

The middle sort of historians (of which the most part are) spoil all; they will chew our meat for us.

Ibid. Chap. 10, Of Books

The only good histories are those that have been written by the persons themselves who commanded in the affairs whereof they write.

Works. Book II, Chap. 10, Of Books

She [virtue] requires a rough and stormy passage; she will have either outward difficulties to wrestle with, or internal difficulties.[1]

Ibid. Chap. 11, Of Cruelty

There is, nevertheless, a certain respect, and a general duty of humanity, that ties us, not only to beasts that have life and sense, but even to trees and plants.

Ibid.

Some impose upon the world that they believe that which they do not; others, more in number, make themselves believe that they believe, not being able to penetrate into what it is to believe.

Ibid. Chap. 12, Apology for Raimond Sebond [2]

When I play with my cat, who knows whether I do not make her more sport than she makes me?

Ibid.

'Tis one and the same Nature that rolls on her course, and whoever has sufficiently considered the present state of things might certainly conclude as to both the future and the past.[3]

Ibid.

The souls of emperors and cobblers are cast in the same mould. . . . The same reason that makes us wrangle with a neighbour causes a war betwixt princes.

Ibid.

Man is certainly stark mad; he cannot make a worm, and yet he will be making gods by dozens.

Ibid.

Why may not a goose say thus: "All the parts of the universe I have an interest in: the earth serves me to walk upon, the sun to light me; the stars have their influence upon me; I have such an advantage by the winds and such by the waters; there is nothing that yon heavenly roof looks upon so favourably as me. I am the darling of Nature! Is it not man that keeps, lodges, and serves me?"

[3] See Plutarch, page 1113.

Works. Book II, Chap. 12, Apology for Raimond Sebond

Arts and sciences are not cast in a mould, but are formed and perfected by degrees, by often handling and polishing, as bears leisurely lick their cubs into form.[1]

Ibid.

He that I am reading seems always to have the most force.

Ibid.

Apollo said that every one's true worship was that which he found in use in the place where he chanced to be.[2]

Ibid.

The mariner of old said thus to Neptune in a great tempest, "O God! thou mayest save me if thou wilt, and if thou wilt, thou mayest destroy me; but whether or no, I will steer my rudder true." [3]

Ibid. Chap. 16, Of Glory

How many worthy men have we known to survive their own reputation! [4]

Ibid.

There is another sort of glory, which is the having too good an opinion of our own worth.

Ibid. Chap. 17, Of Presumption

One may be humble out of pride.

Ibid.

Nature has presented us with a large faculty of entertaining ourselves alone; and often calls us to it, to teach us that we owe ourselves partly to society, but chiefly and mostly to ourselves.

Works. Book II, Chap. 18, On Giving the Lie

I find that the best virtue I have has in it some tincture of vice.

Ibid. Chap. 20, That We Taste Nothing Pure

Saying is one thing, and doing is another.

Ibid. Chap. 31, Of Anger

Is it not a noble farce, wherein kings, republics, and emperors have for so many ages played their parts, and to which the whole vast universe serves for a theatre? [1]

Ibid. Chap. 36, Of the Most Excellent Men

Nature forms us for ourselves, not for others; to be, not to seem.

Ibid. Chap. 37, Of the Resemblance of Children to Their Brothers

There never was in the world two opinions alike, no more than two hairs or two grains; the most universal quality is diversity.[2]

Ibid. Of the Resemblance of Children to Their Fathers

The public weal requires that men should betray, and lie, and massacre.

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 1, Of Profit and Honesty

I will follow the right side even to the fire, but excluding the fire if I can.

Ibid.

Does not he to whom you betray another, to whom you were as welcome as to himself, know that you will at another time do as much for him?

Ibid.

Like rowers, who advance backward.[3]

Ibid.

I speak truth, not so much as I would, but as much as I dare; and I dare a little the more, as I grow older.

Of Repentance

It happens as with cages: the birds without despair to get in, and those within despair of getting out.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 5, Upon Some Verses of Virgil

And to bring in a new word by the head and shoulders, they leave out the old one.

Ibid.

All the world knows me in my book, and my book in me.

Ibid.

'Tis so much to be a king, that he only is so by being so. The strange lustre that surrounds him conceals and shrouds him from us; our sight is there broken and dissipated, being stopped and filled by the prevailing light.[3]

Ibid. Chap. 7, Of the Inconvenience of Greatness

We are born to inquire after truth; it belongs to a greater power to possess it. It is not, as Democritus said, hid in the bottom of the deeps, but rather elevated to an infinite height in the divine knowledge.[4]

Ibid. Chap. 8, Of the Art of Conversation

I moreover affirm that our wisdom itself, and wisest consultations, for the most part commit themselves to the conduct of chance.[5]

Ibid.

What if he has borrowed the matter and spoiled the form, as it oft falls out? [6]

Ibid.

The oldest and best known evil was ever more supportable than one that was new and untried.[1]

Works. Book III, Chap. 9,
Of Vanity

Not because Socrates said so, . . . I look upon all men as my compatriots.

Ibid.

My appetite comes to me while eating.[2]

Ibid.

There is no man so good, who, were he to submit all his thoughts and actions to the laws, would not deserve hanging ten times in his life.

Ibid.

Saturninus said, "Comrades, you have lost a good captain to make him an ill general."

Ibid.

A little folly is desirable in him that will not be guilty of stupidity.[3]

Ibid.

Habit is a second nature.[4]

Ibid. Chap. 10

We seek and offer ourselves to be gulled.

Ibid. Chap. 11, Of Cripples

I have never seen a greater monster or miracle in the world than myself.

Ibid.

Men are most apt to believe what they least understand.

Ibid.

I have here only made a nosegay of culled flowers, and have brought nothing of my own but the thread that ties them together.

Ibid. Chap. 12, Of Physiognomy

Amongst so many borrowed things, I am glad if I can steal one, disguising and altering it for some new service.

Ibid.

I am further of opinion that it would be better for us to have [no laws] at all than to have them in so prodigious numbers as we have.

There is more ado to interpret interpretations than to interpret the things, and more books upon books than upon all other subjects; we do nothing but comment upon one another.

Ibid.

What can we do with those people who will not believe anything unless it is in print? . . . I would as soon quote one of my friends as I would Aulus Gellius or Macrobius.

Ibid.

For truth itself has not the privilege to be spoken at all times and in all sorts.

Ibid.

The diversity of physical arguments and opinions embraces all sorts of methods.

Ibid.

Let us a little permit Nature to take her own way; she better understands her own affairs than we.

Ibid.

I have ever loved to repose myself, whether sitting or lying, with my heels as high or higher than my head.

Reflections, or Sentences and Moral Maxims

Our virtues are most frequently but vices disguised.[1]

We have all sufficient strength to endure the misfortunes of others.

Maxim 19

Philosophy triumphs easily over past evils and future evils; but present evils triumph over it.[2]

Maxim 22

We need greater virtues to sustain good than evil fortune.

Maxim 25

Neither the sun nor death can be looked at with a steady eye.

Maxim 26

If we were without faults, we should not take so much pleasure in remarking them in others.

Maxim 31

Interest speaks all sorts of tongues, and plays all sorts of parts, even that of disinterestedness.

Maxim 39

We are never so happy nor so unhappy as we imagine.

Maxim 49

There are few people who would not be ashamed of being loved when they love no longer.

Maxim 71

True love is like ghosts, which everybody talks about and few have seen.

Maxim 76

The love of justice is simply, in the majority of men, the fear of suffering injustice.

Maxim 78

Silence is the best resolve for him who distrusts himself.

Maxim 79

Friendship is only a reciprocal conciliation of interests, and an exchange of good offices; it is a species of commerce out of which self-love always expects to gain something.

Maxim 83

Everyone complains of his memory, and no one complains of his judgment.

Maxim 89

A man who is ungrateful is often less to blame than his benefactor.

Maxim 96

The understanding is always the dupe of the heart.

Maxim 102

Nothing is given so profusely as advice.

Maxim 110

The true way to be deceived is to think oneself more knowing than others.

Maxim 127

Usually we praise only to be praised.

Maxim 146

Our repentance is not so much regret for the ill we have done as fear of the ill that may happen to us in consequence.

Maxim 180

Most people judge men only by success or by fortune.

Maxim 212

Hypocrisy is a homage vice pays to virtue.

Maxim 218

Too great haste to repay an obligation is a kind of ingratitude.

Maxim 226

There is great ability in knowing how to conceal one's ability.

Maxim 245

The pleasure of love is in loving. We are happier in the passion we feel than in that we inspire.[1]

Maxim 259

We always like those who admire us; we do not always like those whom we admire.

Maxim 294

The gratitude of most men is but a secret desire of receiving greater benefits.[2]

Maxim 298

Lovers are never tired of each other, though they always speak of themselves.

Maxim 312

We pardon in the degree that we love.

Maxim 330

We hardly find any persons of good sense save those who agree with us.[3]

Maxim 347

The greatest fault of a penetrating wit is to go beyond the mark.

Maxim 377

We may give advice, but we cannot inspire the conduct.

Maxim 378

The veracity which increases with old age is not far from folly.

Maxim 416

Nothing prevents our being natural so much as the desire to appear so.

Maxim 431

In their first passion women love their lovers, in all the others they love love.[4]

Maxim 471

Quarrels would not last long if the fault was only on one side.

HANS JAKOB CHRISTOFFEL VON GRIMMELSHAUSEN

[Circa 1620–1676]

For gluttony and drunkenness, hunger and thirst, wenching and dicing and playing, riot and roaring, murdering and being murdered, slaying and being slain, torturing and being tortured, hunting and being hunted, harrying and being harried, robbing and being robbed, frighting and being frighted, causing trouble and suffering trouble, beating and being beaten: in a word, hurting and harming, and in turn being hurt and harmed — this was their[3] whole life. And in this career they let nothing hinder them: neither winter nor summer, snow nor ice, heat nor cold, rain nor wind, hill nor dale, wet nor dry; ditches, mountain-passes, ramparts and walls, fire and water, were all the same to them. Father nor mother, sister nor brother, no, nor the danger to their own bodies, souls, and consciences, nor even loss of life and of heaven itself, or aught else that can be named, will ever stand in their way, for ever they toil and moil at their own strange work, till at last, little by little, in battles, sieges, attacks, campaigns, yea, and in their winter-quarters too (which are the soldiers' earthly paradise, if they can but happen upon fat peasants) they perish, they die, they rot and consume away, save but a few, who in their old age, unless they have been right thrifty reivers and robbers, do furnish us with the best of all beggars and vagabonds.

Thoughts. Chap. 4, 1

Montaigne [1] is wrong in declaring that custom ought to be followed simply because it is custom, and not because it is reasonable or just.

Ibid. 6

Thus we never live, but we hope to live; and always disposing ourselves to be happy, it is inevitable that we never become so.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 5, 2

If the nose of Cleopatra had been shorter, the whole face of the earth would have been changed.

Ibid. Chap. 8, 29

The last thing that we find in making a book is to know what we must put first.

Ibid. Chap. 9, 30

Rivers are highways that move on, and bear us whither we wish to go.

Ibid. 38

What a chimera, then, is man! what a novelty, what a monster, what a chaos, what a subject of contradiction, what a prodigy! A judge of all things, feeble worm of the earth, depositary of the truth, cloaca of uncertainty and error, the glory and the shame of the universe! [3]

Ibid. Chap. 10, 1

We know the truth, not only by the reason, but also by the heart.

Ibid.

For as old age is that period of life most remote from infancy, who does not see that old age in this universal man ought not to be sought in the times nearest his birth, but in those most remote from it? [4]

Ibid. Prop. XIX

Nothing exists from whose nature some effect does not follow.

Ibid. Prop. XXXVI

He who would distinguish the true from the false must have an adequate idea of what is true and false.

Ibid. Part II, Prop. XLII, Proof

Will and Intellect are one and the same thing.

Ibid. Prop. XLIX, Corollary

He that can carp in the most eloquent or acute manner at the weakness of the human mind is held by his fellows as almost divine.

Ibid. Part III, Preface

Surely human affairs would be far happier if the power in men to be silent were the same as that to speak. But experience more than sufficiently teaches that men govern nothing with more difficulty than their tongues.

Ethics. Part III, Prop. II, Note

Pride is therefore pleasure arising from a man's thinking too highly of himself.

Ibid. Prop. XXVI, Note

It may easily come to pass that a vain man may become proud and imagine himself pleasing to all when he is in reality a universal nuisance.

Ibid. Prop. XXX, Note

Sadness diminishes or hinders a man's power of action.

Ibid. Prop. XXXVII, Proof

Self-complacency is pleasure accompanied by the idea of oneself as cause.

Ibid. Prop. LI, Note

It therefore comes to pass that every one is fond of relating his own exploits and displaying the strength both of his body and his mind, and that men are on this account a nuisance one to the other.

Ibid. Prop. LIV, Note

I refer those actions which work out the good of the agent to courage, and those which work out the good of others to nobility. Therefore temperance, sobriety, and presence of mind in danger, etc., are species of courage; but modesty, clemency, etc., are species of nobility.

Ibid. Prop. LIX, Note

Fear cannot be without hope nor hope without fear.

Ibid. Definition XIII, Explanation

So long as a man imagines that he cannot do this or that, so long is he determined not to do it: and consequently, so long it is impossible to him that he should do it.

Well pleased a prisoner to be,
Because, my God, it pleases Thee.

A Prisoner's Song, Castle of Vincennes, France. Stanza 1

But though my wing is closely bound,
My heart's at liberty;
My prison walls cannot control
The flight, the freedom of the soul.[1]

That weary listlessness, which renders life unsupportable to the voluptuous and the indolent, is unknown to those who can employ themselves by reading.

Telemachus. Book II

Commerce is a kind of spring, which, diverted from its natural channel, ceases to flow. There are but two things which invite foreigners — profit and convenience. If you render commerce less convenient, or less gainful, they will insensibly forsake you.

Ibid. Book III

There were some who said that a man at the point of death was more free than all others, because death breaks every bond, and over the dead the united world has no power.

Ibid. Book V

Love is conquered only by flight. Against such an enemy, true courage consists in fear and retreat, in retreat without deliberation, and without looking back.

Ibid. Book VI

By labor Wisdom gives poignancy to pleasure, and by pleasure she restores vigor to labor.

Telemachus. Book VII

The Social Contract[1] [1762]. Book I, Chap. 1

The strongest is never strong enough to be always the master, unless he transforms strength into right, and obedience into duty.

Ibid. Chap. 3

The right of conquest has no foundation other than the right of the strongest.

Ibid. Chap. 4

As soon as public service ceases to be the chief business of the citizens, and they would rather serve with their money than with their persons, the State is not far from its fall.

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 15

Good laws lead to the making of better ones; bad ones bring about worse. As soon as any man says of the affairs of the State, "What does it matter to me?" the State may be given up for lost.

The Social Contract [1762]. Book III, Chap. 15

Never exceed your rights, and they will soon become unlimited.

A Discourse on Political Economy

Money is the seed of money, and the first guinea is sometimes more difficult to acquire than the second million.

Ibid.

God makes all things good; man meddles with them and they become evil.

Émile, or Education[1] [1762]. Book I

Medicine is all the fashion in these days, and very naturally. It is the amusement of the idle and unemployed, who do not know what to do with their time in taking care of themselves. If by ill-luck they had happened to be born immortal, they would have been the most miserable of men; a life they could not lose would be of no value to them. Such men must have doctors to threaten and flatter them, to give them the only pleasure they can enjoy, the pleasure of not being dead.

Ibid.

Hygiene is the only useful part of medicine, and hygiene is rather a virtue than a science. Temperance and industry are man's true remedies; work sharpens his appetite and temperance teaches him to control it.

Ibid.

What wisdom can you find that is greater than kindness?

Ibid. Book II

The happiest is he who suffers least; the most miserable is he who enjoys least. Ever more sorrow than joy, — this is the lot of all of us.

Who has many wishes has generally but little will. Who has energy of will has few diverging wishes. Whose will is bent with energy on one, must renounce the wishes for many things.

Say not you know another entirely, till you have divided an inheritance with him.

He who, when called upon to speak a disagreeable truth, tells it boldly and has done is both bolder and milder than he who nibbles in a low voice and never ceases nibbling.[1]

The public seldom forgive twice.

Venerate four characters: the sanguine, who has checked volatility and the rage for pleasure; the choleric who has subdued passion and pride; the phlegmatic emerged from indolence; and the melancholy who has dismissed avarice, suspicion and asperity.

To one of his aides [1803]. Quoted in R. M. JOHNSTON: The Corsican

What is the throne? — a bit of wood gilded and covered with velvet. I am the state[4] — I alone am here the representative of the people. Even if I had done wrong you should not have reproached me in public — people wash their dirty linen at home. France has more need of me than I of France.

Philosophy of History.[1]
Introduction

Amid the pressure of great events, a general principle gives no help.

Ibid.

To him who looks upon the world rationally, the world in its turn presents a rational aspect. The relation is mutual.

Ibid.

The history of the world is none other than the progress of the consciousness of Freedom.

Ibid.

We may affirm absolutely that nothing great in the world has been accomplished without passion.

Ibid.

It is easier to discover a deficiency in individuals, in states, and in Providence, than to see their real import and value.

Ibid.

Life has a value only when it has something valuable as its object.

Ibid.

Serious occupation is labor that has reference to some want.

Ibid. Part I, Sect. 2, Chap. 1

It is a matter of perfect indifference where a thing originated; the only question is: "Is it true in and for itself?"

Ibid. Part III, Sect. 3, Chap. 2

When liberty is mentioned, we must always be careful to observe whether it is not really the assertion of private interests which is thereby designated.

Ibid. Part IV, Sect. 3, Chap. 2

The Few assume to be the deputies, but they are often only the despoilers of the Many.

Studies in Pessimism.[2] On the Sufferings of the World

Suicide thwarts the attainment of the highest moral aim by the fact that, for a real release from this world of misery, it substitutes one that is merely apparent.

Ibid. On Suicide

Hatred comes from the heart; contempt from the head; and neither feeling is quite within our control.

Ibid. Psychological Observations

If a man sets out to hate all the miserable creatures he meets, he will not have much energy left for anything else; whereas he can despise them, one and all, with the greatest ease.

Essays. Personality, or What a Man Is

A man who has no mental needs, because his intellect is of the narrow and normal amount, is, in the strict sense of the word, what is called a philistine.

Ibid.

Fame and honor are twins; and twins, too, like Castor and Pollux, of whom one was mortal and the other was not. Fame is the undying brother of ephemeral honor.

Essays. Fame

Pride is an established conviction of one's own paramount worth in some particular respect; while vanity is the desire of rousing such a conviction in others. Pride works from within; it is the direct appreciation of oneself. Vanity is the desire to arrive at this appreciation indirectly, from without.

ALPHONSE M. L. LAMARTINE
[1790–1869]

What is our life but a succession of preludes to that unknown song whose first solemn note is sounded by Death?

Love is the enchanted dawn of every heart, but what mortal is there over whose first joys and happiness does not break some storm, dispelling with its icy breath his fanciful illusions, and shattering his altar? What soul, thus cruelly wounded, does not at times try to dream away the recollection of such storms in the solitude of country life? And yet, man, it seems, is not able to bear the languid rest on Nature's bosom, and when the trumpet sounds the signal of danger, he hastens to join his comrades, no matter what the cause that calls him to arms. He rushes into the thickest of the fight and amid the uproar of the battle regains confidence in himself and his powers.[1]

HONORÉ DE BALZAC
[1799–1850]

In the matter of commerce, encouragement does not mean protection. A nation's true policy is to relieve itself of paying tribute to other nations, but to do so without the humiliating assistance of custom houses and prohibitory laws. Manufacturing industry depends solely on itself, competition is its life. Protect it, and it goes to sleep; it dies from monopoly as well as from the tariff. The nation that succeeds in making all other nations its vassals will be the one which first proclaims commercial liberty; it will have enough manufacturing power to supply its productions at a cheaper price than those of its rivals.

Note added to the Definitive Edition of Notre Dame de Paris [1832]

The sea never tells what it means to do. There is everything in this abyss, even chicanery. One might almost say that the sea had designs; it advances and retreats, it proposes and retracts, it prepares a squall and then gives up its plan, it promises destruction and does not keep its word. It threatens the North, and strikes the South.

Never were there so many sleepless nights as in the time of this man [Napoleon]. Never did one see so many anguished mothers gaze from the ramparts of the towns. Never was there such silence when one spoke of death. And yet there was never so much joy, life, warlike music, in all hearts. There was never such pure sunshine as that which dried all this blood. People said that God made it for this man; they called it Austerlitz weather. But he made it himself with his incessant gunfire, and the only clouds were on the morrow of his battles.

Ibid. Part II, Chap. 3

Consolation is not what you need. Weep and be not consoled, but weep. Only every time that you weep be sure to remember that your little son is one of the angels of God, and rejoices at your tears, and points at them to the Lord God; and a long while yet will you keep that great mother's grief. But it will turn in the end to quiet joy, and your bitter tears will be only tears of tender sorrow that purifies the heart.

The Brothers Karamazov.[2]
Part I, Book II, Chap. 3

Even those who have renounced Christianity and attack it, in their inmost being still follow the Christian ideal, for hitherto neither their subtlety nor the ardour of their hearts has been able to create a higher ideal of man and of virtue than the ideal given by Christ of old. When it has been attempted, the result has been only grotesque.

Ibid. Part II, Book IV, Chap. 1

Until you have become really, in actual fact, a brother to every one, brotherhood will not come to pass. No sort of scientific teaching, no kind of common interest, will ever teach men to share property and privileges with equal consideration for all. Every one will think his share too small and they will be always envying, complaining and attacking one another.

The Brothers Karamazov.
Part II, Book VI, Chap. 2

Ibid. Chap. 3

Love all God's creation,[1] the whole and every grain of sand in it. Love every leaf, every ray of God's light. Love the animals, love the plants, love everything. If you love everything, you will perceive the divine mystery in things. Once you perceive it, you will begin to comprehend it better every day. And you will come at last to love the whole world with an all-embracing love.

Ibid.

Much on earth is hidden from us, but to make up for that we have been given a precious mystic sense of our living bond with the other world, with the higher heavenly world, and the roots of our thoughts and feelings are not here but in other worlds. An Enemy of the People. Act I

The most crying need in the humbler ranks of life is that they should be allowed some part in the direction of public affairs. That is what will develop their faculties and intelligence and self-respect.

Ibid. Act II

The public doesn't require any new ideas. The public is best served by the good, old-fashioned ideas it already has.

Ibid.

An editor cannot always act as he would prefer. He is often obliged to bow to the wishes of the public in unimportant matters. Politics are the most important thing in life — for a newspaper.

The most dangerous enemy to truth and freedom amongst us is the compact majority.

Ibid. Act IV

You should never wear your best trousers when you go out to fight for freedom and truth.

Ibid. Act V

To crave for happiness in this world is simply to be possessed by a spirit of revolt. What right have we to happiness?

Ghosts. Act I

It is not only what we have inherited from our fathers that exists again in us, but all sorts of old dead ideas and all kinds of old dead beliefs and things of that kind. They are not actually alive in us; but there they are dormant, all the same, and we can never be rid of them. Whenever I take up a newspaper and read it, I fancy I see ghosts creeping between the lines. There must be ghosts all over the world.

Peer Gynt. Act I

For fortune such as I've enjoyed I have to thank America. My amply-furnished library I owe to Germany's later schools. From France, again, I get my waistcoats, my manners, and my spice of wit, — from England an industrious hand, and keen sense for my own advantage. The Jew has taught me how to wait. Some taste for dolce far niente I have received from Italy, — and one time, in a perilous pass, to eke the measure of my days, I had recourse to Swedish steel.

Peer Gynt. Act IV

I hold that man is in the right who is most closely in league with the future.

Letter to Georg Brandes
[January 3, 1882]

COUNT LYOF NIKOLAYEVITCH TOLSTOI

[1828–1910]

The Frenchman is conceited from supposing himself mentally and physically to be inordinately fascinating both to men and to women. An Englishman is conceited on the ground of being a citizen of the best-constituted state in the world, and also because he as an Englishman always knows what is the correct thing to do, and knows that everything that he, as an Englishman, does do is indisputably the best thing. An Italian is conceited from being excitable and easily forgetting himself and other people. A Russian is conceited precisely because he knows nothing and cares to know nothing, since he does not believe it possible to know anything fully. A conceited German is the worst of them all, and the most hardened of all, and the most repulsive of all; for he imagines that he possesses the truth in a science of his own invention, which is to him absolute truth.

Cities of the Plain. Part II, Page 8

It is often simply from want of the creative spirit that we do not go to the full extent of suffering. And the most terrible reality brings us, with our suffering, the joy of a great discovery, because it merely gives a new and clear form to what we have long been ruminating without suspecting it.

I thought how markedly . . . these works [Richard Wagner's music dramas] participate in that quality of being — albeit marvellously — always incomplete, which is the peculiarity of all the great works of the nineteenth century, with which the greatest writers of that century have stamped their books, but, watching themselves at work as though they were at once author and critic, have derived from this self-contemplation a novel beauty, exterior and superior to the work itself, imposing upon it retrospectively a unity, a greatness which it does not possess.

Ibid. Page 211

The bonds that unite another person to ourself exist only in our mind. Memory as it grows fainter relaxes them, and notwithstanding the illusion by which we would fain be cheated and with which, out of love, friendship, politeness, deference, duty, we cheat other people, we exist alone. Man is the creature that cannot emerge from himself, that knows his fellows only in himself; when he asserts the contrary, he is lying.

The Sweet Cheat Gone. Page 47

We believe that according to our desire we are able to change the things round about us, we believe this because otherwise we can see no favourable solution. We forget the solution that generally comes to pass and is also favourable: we do not succeed in changing things according to our desire, but gradually our desire changes. The situation that we hoped to change because it was intolerable becomes unimportant. We have not managed to surmount the obstacle, as we were absolutely determined to do, but life has taken us round it, led us past it, and then if we turn round to gaze at the remote past, we can barely catch sight of it, so imperceptible has it become.

The Empire was guilty, the Republic has been merely unfortunate. The Empire was bad and sinister in its principle which was personal autocracy; the Republic is just and fruitful in its principle which is government by the people itself. It has erred only through the mistakes of its organization and functioning whose origin it is easy to demonstrate and for which it is easy to find the remedy.

Space, like time, engenders forgetfulness; but it does so by setting us bodily free from our surroundings and giving us back our primitive, unattached state. . . . Time, we say, is Lethe; but change of air is a similar draught, and, if it works less thoroughly, does so more quickly.

The Magic Mountain.[1] Chap. 1

A man lives not only his personal life, as an individual, but also, consciously or unconsciously, the life of his epoch and his contemporaries.

Ibid. Chap. 2

It gives me a most peculiar feeling, when somebody is so stupid, and then ill into the bargain. It must be the most melancholy thing in life. . . . One always has the idea of a stupid man as perfectly healthy and ordinary, and of illness as making one refined and clever and unusual.

All interest in disease and death is only another expression of interest in life, as is proven by the humanistic faculty of medicine, that addresses life and its ails always so politely in Latin, and is only a division of the great and pressing concern which, in all sympathy, I now name by its name: the human being, the delicate child of life, man.

History shows that there are no invincible armies.

Address broadcast July 3, 1941. Declaration of War. (Germany invaded Russia June 22, 1941)

In case of a forced retreat of Red Army units, all rolling stock must be evacuated; to the enemy must not be left a single engine, a single railway car, not a single pound of grain or a gallon of fuel. Collective farmers must drive off their cattle and turn over their grain to the safekeeping of State authorities for transportation to the rear. All valuable property including non-ferrous metals, grain and fuel which cannot be withdrawn must without fail be destroyed.

In areas occupied by the enemy, guerrilla units, mounted and foot, must be formed, diversionist groups must be organized to combat enemy troops, to foment guerrilla warfare everywhere, to blow up bridges, roads, damage telephone and telegraph lines, and to set fire to forests, stores and transports.

In occupied regions conditions must be made unbearable for the enemy and all his accomplices. They must be hounded and annihilated at every step and all their measures frustrated.

In the hearts of all the peoples who have united to assure the triumph of right and liberty there is a tremendous aspiration toward a better future. . . . It is not tolerable, it is not possible, that from so much death, so much sacrifice and ruin, so much heroism, a greater and better humanity shall not emerge.

Speech in Ottawa, Canada [July 11, 1944]

Strength through Joy.

Instruction for the German Labor Front, December 2, 1933

FRANZ WERFEL
[1890–1945]

Yes, death is strong, but look you, the strongest,
Stronger is music than death.

Poems:[1] The Beyond [1945]

The westward slope of life has this relief:
God lengthens time, as time becomes more brief.

HERMANN GOERING

[1893–1946]

The German Folk must become a Folk of flyers.

Address, February, 1933

Shoot first and inquire afterwards, and if you make mistakes, I will protect you.

Instruction for the Prussian Police, 1933

I am in the habit of shooting from time to time, and if I sometimes make mistakes, at least I have shot.

Address at Essen, March 10, 1933

Guns will make us powerful; butter will only make us fat.[2]

Radio broadcast, summer of 1936

Our task is to secure for all time the superiority which Germany has obtained over all countries in the air.

Address, March 1, 1939

Adolf Hitler is the greatest German of all time.

Proclamation on Hitler's 50th Birthday, April 20, 1939

The Führer's deeds followed each other hard as hammer blows.

Address, May 1, 1939

BARON EHRENFRIED GUNTHER VON HUENEFELD

[1893–1929]

To-morrow, we shall start on our great journey. After a trying period of expectancy, we have entered upon the stage of certainty. Now the last word lies with the God of weathers and to confide in Him is the duty of every sincere sportsman.

Interview, before his transatlantic air flight in the Bremen [April 12–13, 1928]

Silent I ponder. Ended is the flight,
And He whose hands upheld us in the air,
Whose grace has calmed the snowstorm and the night,
Is now with me and folds my hands in prayer.

Song of Thanks in the Lighthouse at Greenly, after the safe landing of the Bremen

He who has glimpsed the awful face of Death
Can but confess Thy mercy and Thy might;
Who never bowed his heart before Thy cross,
He never saw the unadulterate Light.

Ibid.

JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP

[1893–1946]

The Führer is always right.

Königsberg address, August 24, 1939

The Führer and Stalin have decided upon friendship. The non-aggression pact has established a firm and unshakable foundation on which both States will build and develop.

Moscow address, August 24, 1939

Dear Ciano, I cannot tell you anything as yet because every decision is locked in the impenetrable bosom of the Führer. However, one thing is certain: if we attack, the Russia of Stalin will be erased from the map within eight weeks.

Quoted in The Ciano Diaries [June 15, 1941]. Page 583

ALFRED ROSENBERG

[1893–1946]

We have saved the civilization of Europe from the Bolshevik disaster. He who fights against Germany, fights for world Bolshevism.

Heiligenstadt address, August 8, 1935

For decades education in Germany has been looked on merely as a means of increasing knowledge. Instead of this, National Socialism has decreed education to be the strengthening of character.

I feel that in this cell, this gloomy Veronese cell where I am confined during my last days of this earthly life, I am surrounded by all those whom I have loved and who love me. Neither walls nor men can prevent it. It is hard to think that I shall not be able to gaze into the eyes of my three children or to press my mother to my heart, or my wife, who in my hours of sorrow has revealed herself a strong, sure, and faithful companion. But I must bow to the will of God, and a great calm is descending upon my soul.

Fascism and National Socialism believe indeed in the rise of certain peoples, but doubt the general progress of mankind as a whole. In contrast to the view represented by Giambattista Vico and others of a cycle of culture, they [Fascism and National Socialism] regard historical evolution as the fulfilment of the mission of the Folk, which is determined, according to National Socialism by the Folk's racial mission, and according to Fascism by its cultural mission.

[1] Religion is the sign of the oppressed creature, the feelings of a heartless world, just as it is the spirit of unspiritual conditions. It is the opium of the people. — KARL MARX [1818–1883]: Introduction to a Critique of the Hegelian Philosophy of Right [1844]

[2] Bruno Bauer [1809–1882], a German philosophical, theological and historical writer of the Hegelian school.

The great Jehovah speaks to us
In Genesis and Exodus;
Leviticus and Numbers see,
Followed by Deuteronomy.
Joshua and Judges sway the land,
Ruth gleans a sheaf with trembling hand,
Samuel and numerous Kings appear,
Whose Chronicles we wondering hear;
Ezra and Nehemiah now
Esther, the beauteous mourner, show;
Job speaks in sighs, David in Psalms,
The Proverbs teach to scatter alms.
Ecclesiastes then comes on
And the sweet Song of Solomon.
Isaiah, Jeremiah then,
With Lamentations takes his pen.
Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's lyres Swell Joel, Amos, Obadiah's.
Next Jonah, Micah, Nahum come,
And lofty Habakkuk finds room.
While Zephaniah, Haggai call,
Rapt Zechariah builds his wall,
And Malachi with garments rent,
Concludes the ancient Testament.

Old Testament. (American Tract Society, 1852)

Matthew and Mark, and Luke and John,
The Holy Gospels wrote,
Describing how the Saviour died —
His life — and all He taught;
Acts prove how God the Apostles owned
With signs in every place;
St. Paul, in Romans, teaches us
How man is saved by grace;
The Apostle, in Corinthians,
Instructs, exhorts, reproves;
Galatians shows that faith in Christ
Alone the Father loves.
Ephesians and Philippians tell What Christians ought to be;
Colossians bids us live to God
And for eternity.
In Thessalonians we are taught
The Lord will come from Heaven;
In Timothy and Titus
A bishop's rule is given.
Philemon marks a Christian's love,
Which only Christians know;
Hebrews reveals the Gospel
Prefigured by the law;
James teaches without holiness
Faith is but vain and dead;
St. Peter points the narrow way
In which the saints are led;
John, in his three Epistles,
On love delights to dwell;
St. Jude gives awful warning
Of judgment, wrath, and hell;
The Revelation prophesies
Of that tremendous day
When Christ, and Christ alone, shall be
The trembling sinner's stay.

New Testament. (American Tract Society, 1852)

These are the twelve Apostles' names:
Peter and Andrew, John and James,
Two pair of brothers who lived by the sea,
When Jesus said to them, "Follow me."
Then James the Less and Jude were called, too,
Philip, and also Bartholomew,
Matthew, and Thomas who doubted His word,
Simon, and Judas who sold his Lord.

Have no other gods but me;
Unto no image bow the knee;
Take not the name of God in vain;
Do not the Sabbath day profane;
Honour thy father and thy mother too;
And see that thou no murder do;
From vile adultery keep thou clean;
And steal not, though thy state be mean;
Bear not false witness — shun that blot;
What is thy neighbour's covet not.

Ibid. LXXV, 6

He putteth down one and setteth up another.

Ibid. 7

They go from strength to strength.

Ibid. LXXXIV, 7

A day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

Ibid. 10

Mercy and truth are met together: righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

Ibid. LXXXV, 10

A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night.

Ibid. XC, 4

We spend our years as a tale that is told.[1]

Ibid. 9

The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away.[2]

Ibid. 10

So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Ibid. 12

Establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.

Ibid. 17

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.

Ibid. XCI, 2

Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday.

Psalms. XCI, 6

He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways.

  which we have not seized upon, 1006 Beautifier of complexion or form, no, 413 rank is a great, 425 Beautiful, a mother made it, 941 and free, 367
  and just, all that was, 771 and to be wooed, 68
  answer, always the, 992 are friends, 858
  as feet of friend, 528
  as roses, money is as, 412 as woman's blush, as, 404
  as words, so, 865
  babbie, the most, 634
  beneath his touch, grow, 327 beyond all grace of youth, 947 birds let me go with you, 876 city of Prague, 625
  doings of thy soul, 862 dream, like a, 392
  dreamer wake unto me, 568
  English girl, bright and, 624 fold, entered that, 805 for patriot dream, 737 for situation, 1230 gate, at the, 608
  I loved her for that she was, 506 in leaves that mix, 1005 in middle age, 975 is love, 858
  is night, how, 322 is this living, 858
  made this world so, 773 mouth in the world, most, 222 my blue-eyed, my, 590 nothing very, 947 over the house-tops, 536
  palace, 171
  pale clay, 595
  palms of Allah, 1064
  pea-green boat, 498

  Rosalie Lee, 432 scorn looks, 55 seems right, the, 409, 430 seems somewhere, 597 sentiments, all the, 529
  snow, fair as the, 560 snow had melted, 814
  snow, O the snow the, 560 stripped and swift, 1009 taste for the, 374
  the bright, the, 665
  the good the true the, 599
  they stood, how, 907 to be free is, 858
  to behold, delicate and, 1252 to make oneself, an universal instinct, 833

Beautiful, too, this year, 982 unseen temple, 796
  upon the mountains are the feet, 1238 very, beautiful indeed, 947 whatever is, is complete in itself, 1125 whole, makes His, 683 with light, 809 within, God make thee, 442 woman cooking dinner, 1018 wonderful star, 439 wonderful world, great wide, 553 words sublimely, 586
  young scorn, 978
Beautifully blue, darkly deeply, 322
Beautify our souls, 646
Beautifying touch, its, 690
Beauty a short-lived tyranny, 1129
  a silent deceit, 1129
  a witty, is a power, 576 always room for, 697 an ivory mischief, 1129
  and delight, for love and, 368 and goodness, connection of, 571 and her chivalry, gathered her, 352 and high degree, lady of, 958 and in righteousness, in, 1253 and invulnerability, creation of, 826 and mystery of the ships, 436 and pride, bride in her, 474 and the stars were one, 830 and truth tho' never found, 655 as a, I'm not a great star, 876 as much, as could die, 119 as much, as they sing, 620 at the heart of things, 754 attractive, 1151
  barbarous in, 672
  bare, looked on, 981 be with me, 858
  being the best of all we know, 668 bereft of, 52
  born of murmuring sound, 297 bring to life fresh, 476 burns, when unexpected, 929 but skin deep, 506
  by mourning, crowned, 581 calls and glory shows the way, 186 come near your, 68 conscious stone to, grew, 408 courage youth, toll of, 857 crieth in an attic, 614
  curved is the line of, 444 dead black chaos comes again, 102, 106 dedicate his, to the sun, 77 die for, 409
  divinely superfluous, 947 double, whenever a swan, 391 draws us with a single hair, 212 dreamed that life was, 508 e'er gave, all that, 244
  Elysian, 303
  fades away, thy perfect, 619 fashioned well, save, 1186 fatal gift of, 354
  fed my common earth; her, 857 filled the world with, 1254 filling all the land with, 705 fills the air with, 354 flower of glorious, 179 flowing curves of, 444 for ashes, give unto them, 1238 furled, discloses hidden, 625 glowing with remembered eyes, 953 Beauty going, feel your, 865 hard with respect to, 483 has no ebb, where, 792 hath strange power, 157 health wealth and, 165 heart-breaking, will remain, 947 hint of the old lost, 445 hold a plea, 107
  home, come with, 858 humbled to the earth, 1005
  I like their, 239
  impassioned for its, 429 in a building, light is principal, 147 in his life, a daily, 103 in naked, more adorned, 152 in quest of that one, 856 in the heart breaks, 858 in this plain room, see, 902 intensity and pure classic, 1010 invisible, has a word, 881 is a flower, 869 is a pledge, 770
  is eternity, 922 is everlasting, 948 is its own excuse, 441 is its own excuse for being, 409 is its own reward, 987 is not immortal, 863 is pleasure, 769 is something indescribable, 770 is that Medusa's head, 978 is truth truth beauty, 383
  Isle of, 388
  itself doth of itself persuade, 106 left their, on the shore, 408 lies in many eyes, 335 lies unseen, 445 life and, are the same, 1019 light from her own, 367 lingers, lines where, 355 lives, swear that, 927 loved your, 793 lover of all, 445
  made amends by, 805 making beautiful old rhyme, 108 manliest, 274
  mate for, should be a man, 425 more amiable than, 196 music even in the, 145 must be truth, 385
  my warm-hearted, 1034 mystery of, can never be comprehended, 791 naught but vanity in, 522 never guessed before, 973 no excellent, 111
  no spring nor summer, 117
  nor good talk, 'tisn't, 786 of a butterfly's wing, 1011 of a great machine, 945 of a human face, 858 of a thousand stars, 32 of an aged face, 905 of beauty, O, 893
  of body and mind, such, 905 of growing plants, 1164 of joy, incredible, 947 of old men is the grey head, 1234 of style and harmony, 1088 of surpassing, 1094 of the good old cause, 298 of the house is order, 1065 of the infinite, 860 of the lilies, in the, 522 of the world, all the, 169 of the world has two edges, 919 of things was born before the eyes, 947 old age that layer-up of, 68 or form, relates to, 480
Beauty our eyes could never see, 809 perception of, 515 personal, 1129
  pitiful, 758
  poets' forms of, 531 power of, I remember, 176 praise forms no part of, 1125 principle of, in all things, 385 principle of, shall persist, 844 provoketh thieves, 48 rhythmical creation of, 461 right by force of, 409 scandal the doom of, 1101 seemed great, 938 seems right by force of, 430 seen from unseen must rise, 906 set in rings of, 572 shaft of, towering high, 715 share, unashamed his, 1005 should harbour a heart, 256 sister of, 994
  slain, with him is, 102, 106 smiling in her tears, 327 soon grows familiar, 194 splendor of, 1064
  stands in the admiration, 156 stands looking into the soul, 1201 such, as a woman's eye, 41 such seems your, still, 108 sweetest, will decay, 269 that is to be, 757
  that underlies the passing phase, 560 the gift of God, 1129
  the king all arrayed in his, 387
  the sadness of things, the, 606 thou art all, 187
  though injurious, 157 to wear, left thee but, 628 too much, upon this earth, 797 truly blent, 54
  truth and love are one, 668 unmask her, to the moon, 90 verse fame and, 385 walks in, like the night, 356 wandering on her way, 793 was sold, her, 824
  water is a thing of, 512 wealth and power, blood of, 424 wends, path where, 883
  whether waking or asleep, 153 which old Greece or Rome, 442 who walks with, 940
  why talk of, 992
  with thee in, 555
  without grace, 414
  without vanity, 351 withstand your, 998 wrought out from within, 645
  yet to find, is there, 944
Beauty's chain, sport with, 337 cloth, scrap of, 852 ears, hangs from, 267
  ensign, 80 heavenly ray, 356 passion strong, in, 799

Beauty-creams, tonics and the, 955
Beaux, where none are, 239
Beaver hat, on account of his, 498
  in Canadian brooks, 451
Becalmed at eve, as ships, 519
  by the shores of age, 644
Became him, nothing in this life, 84
Because he is my little child, 1200 of you we will be glad, 843

Because thou art virtuous, 54
Beck of a baleful star, 756
Becks and wreathed smiles, 160
Becket's tomb, went to, 875
Beckons and beckons, oh it, 874 me away, hand which, 205 on every hand, 846
Beckoned, while a bright future, 1048
Beckoning shadows dire, 157
Becky Sharp's acute remark, 563 Become a man, dare do all that may, 85 a rich man, ever, 822
  a thousand, little one shall, 1238 all that he was created capable of being, 376 as sounding brass, I am, 1246 lost and dead, merge itself and, 536 mad, out of learning, 126 what we are capable of, 704 Becomes a man, nothing so, 66 him ill, 41
  his captain's captain, 104
  the throned monarch, 46
Becomest thy bed, 105
Bed, a little, to rest my head, 382 again, back to, 856 and board, peace and plenty, 1025 and so to, 180, 903
  angels all glorious came to my, 648 are the weans in their, 475 be blest that I lye on, 164 be in, and sleep not, 1001 born in, in bed we die, 1158 bravely thou becomest thy, 105 dread grave as little as, 183 dreamless, 446 early to, and early to rise, 227 earth in an earthy, 469 earth's low, 950

  earth's meager, 1023
  every, is narrow, 980
  first and worst one is a, 610 glory's brightest, 386 goes to, in time, 841 goes to, mellow, 127 goes to, wi' the sun, 56 golden, 794
  great, at Ware, 200
  half-hidden in its grassy, 637 holy angels guard thy, 199 hue as red as the rosy, 431
  I want to go to, 667
  I will not go to, to-night, 610
  if they seldom die in, 683 in, by nine, 964 in, we laugh, 1158 is the boon for me, 831 lies in his, 58 little rudely sculptured, 682 made his pendent, 85

  may show the near approach, 1158 mighty large, 200
  mourn upon thy, 632
Bed, no use in my going to, 389 of ancient mould, swampy, 879 of death, faith kneeling by, 31 of death, smooth the, 213 of delphiniums (blue), 914 of honour, what may be that, 200 of roses, bein' Gawd ain't a, 967 of some beloved child, by the, 985 of squills how blue, 929 of straws in the wind, 1015 of violets, one, 928
  one and all they died in, 610 ought to arise from, 1022 out of his, at midnight, 62 out of, two hours sooner, 121 patient in his, 1036

Bedtime, I would 't were, Hal, 63
Bedward, dormitive I take to, 145
Bee, bringeth home the, 328 brisk as a, 233
  busie as a, 23
  busy, has no time for sorrow, 282 curtained, 972
  does not concern the, 584
  enclosed and through amber shown, 111, 995 goes to the flower, as a, 627 had stung it newly, 163 is on the wing, 345 like the industrious, 970 little busy, 199
  love in my bosom like a, 27 not good for swarm not good for, 1126 nothing so like a soul, 1184 rained-on, 870 soul of the sparrow and the, 570 winds his sullen horn, 247 worm or, 677

Beetle's wing, no thicker than a, 811
Beeves and home-bred kine, 298
  moaned like, 858
  ten thousand, at pasture, 575
Befall a soul, saddest thing that can, 587 that fine prosperity, 585 whatever may, 880
  whatever, was preordained, 1127
Befallen thee, that which hath, 1249
Befell at forty-odd, 392
  mark what, 845
Befitting each, all bound as is, 538
Before and after, looking, 96 and after, we look, 366
  I cease to do and be, 594 nothing, and nothing behind, 317 such things can come, 753
  the beginning of years, 633 the sun rises, 229
  their buttons be disclosed, 90 their loved ones in disgrace, 728 them, world was all, 156

Before us lies, know that which, 154 you know me gone, 628
you make a friend, 138
Beforehand, never tell your resolution, 130 paid, 1157
Befriend himself by doing good, 1081
Beg a penny by an by, 961 a trivial contribution, 760
Homer himself must, 123 of fate, simple boon I, 820 often our own harms, 104 or to borrow, to, 185 they, I give, 20
too proud to, 1065
Began a lang digression, 285 best can't end worst, what, 490 each day with poetry, if we, 723 this universal frame, 176 to hold her tongue, 1058 to soothe and smile, 282
Beget a temperance, acquire and, 94 new wars, can, 921
the greater for its overthrow, 576
Begets crystals of perfect form, 1204
Begetter, to the onlie, 107
Beggar, absent-minded, 782 don't know nor do, 782

should be no choosers, 14
Beggar's daughter, blind, 257
Beggar'd all description, 104
Beggarly account, a, 80 boy, when I was a, 528 elements, weak and, 1247
Scotchman, 233
Beggary in love that can be reckon'd, 104 Begged for a blessing on his meat, 166 for certain and was blind, he, 493 he never sighed, he never, 928 Begging bread, 1230
the question, 1053
Begin a journey on Sundays, 192 again, get up and, 487
as heresies end as superstitions, 564 finish what I, 444
in gladness, poets in youth, 297 it, that look would, 736 none saw it, 502 over, come back to it and, 867
sneezing at twelve, 314 way that boys, 481
with a little aversion, 277 with the usual jokes, 1087
Begins and closes, life's year, 335 at home, charity, 144
Begins her rosy progress, morn, 155 our life is closed our life, 537 to live that day, 585 to sicken and decay, love, 83 to think, 819
with me, my nobility, 1118
Beginneth, well his warke, 14
Beginning again, land of, 921 and end of political education, 635 and the end, the, 1249 bad, makes a bad ending, 1083 distance from the, 112

each venture is a new, 955 end and, are dreams, 597 end and middle of a cask, 1074 every day is a fresh, 682 first, 822
half done who has made a, 1100 hard, maketh good ending, 12 is the most important part, 1088 late, long choosing and, 154 mean and end to all things, 506 never ending still, 176
no great love in the, 34 of a beginning, 800 of a feast, 63
of a fray, 17
of a good, cometh a good end, 14 of a lifelong romance, 724 of our end, 43 of the end, 851, 1174
of years, before the, 633 of years, in the grey, 633 that's the old, 1123 war, responsibility of, 1192 Beginnings and endings are untidy, 804 are, where our, 1081

the thing I am, 101
the time look like the time, 84 your pilgrimage, 927
Beguiled, all their cares, 249 be, by one, 103
the leisure of the crew, 622
wariest eyes may be, 564
Beguiling, smiling of fortune, 240 Begun, between things ended and, 537 for, wonder what I was, 1057 in the hog and dog, 544 to fight, not yet, 1041
Behave in a quarrel, how they, 720 like a pig, 983
mannerly at table, 702 thee thus basely, 590 to our friends, how to, 1130
Behaviour, check to loose, 197 during good, 1054
of silk-sack clouds, 672 upon his good, 360
which appears superficially correct, 986
Beheld, great sea, and fled, 168 the Iliad and the Odyssey, 317
the wretch, I, 389
Behind all these men you have to do with, 550 him lay the gray Azores, 658

Black A, 1199 already with blood, 781 and midnight hags, 87 and scarlet inks, 860 and unknown bards, 830 art was, whose that, 1000 as coal, glossy cope is, 629
  as our loss, 950
  as the devil, 1174
  as the pit from pole to pole, 692
  bat night has flown, 469
Black beetle, intolerable to a, 361 brows become some women, 56 burned, with the strong sun, 979 chaos comes again, 102, 106 cherubs rise at seven, 1023 clouds look, 276 day made, 325
  enough to make them frown, 665 every white will have its, 255 eyes and lemonade, 334 flower of civilized society, 421 for heaven, too, 174 hung be the heavens with, 68
  I am, but O my soul is white, 281 in the blue of the sky, 568 is a pearl in a woman's eye, 28 is not so black, 293 it stood as night, 150 lees where lurks, 629
  let the devil wear, 94 men are pearls, 28
  men fought, 399 mountains, west among the, 1008 or white, played the, 401 oxen, great, 793

  world is like a book, 777
Blooming alone, left, 335 fresh and gay, 276
  time, reaches its, 507
  trees in their, 736
Bloomsbury, broods over, 1018
Blossom and June and rapture, 863 arms were full of, 882
  as the rose, 1237
  bright with autumn dew, 372 but to die, grasses that, 561 flowers spring to, 444 in the winter night, 827 in their dust, 141 into extreme license, 1165 love's perfect, 556 of health, from the, 362
  sassafras, 323 that hangs on the bough, 33 there, bade it, 316 time, put forth the, 655 with pleasure, making it, 487 Blossoms all around me sighing, 375 have the mightiest power, 516 if last year's, stay, 569 myriad lovely, 697
  of my sin, cut off in the, 91 that blew on the banks, 432 wet with weeping, her, 570
Blossom-bald, then, 681
Blossom-burdened bough, 777
Blossomed for a few short hours, 446
  the lovely stars, 435
Blossoming, a million buds but stay their, 668 apple-tree, under the, 699 Blot, art to, 214
  creation's, 246 discreetly, 146
  frequently, 1100
Blot in thy scutcheon, 1156 not one line he could wish to, 239 on his name, no, 327 out vain pomp, 1127 sin and, 657
  where is the, 493
Blotted a thousand, would he had, 120 all over with tears, 482
  ere writ, 664
  from his mind, 204
  it out forever, 242
  note, bid for each poor, 722 out a line, never, 120 Blow a garden with my breath, 907 a shepherd's reed, 406
  a word and a, 79, 179 and swallow at the same moment, 1093 as proudly, horn we should not, 961 buds forgot to, 642 bugle blow, 466 contempt for the wildest, 655 east wind may never, 139 for freedom which will live in history, 948 forbear the bitter, 959 full many a thoughtless, 718 give for blow, 809 hand that gave the, 179 hand that gives the, 190 himself till he bursts, 635 his wreathed horn, 300 hot and cold, 1077
  in the teeth of a wrong, 857 it east or blow it west, 555 it right, man came to, 868 kindness tempered every, 626 liberty's in every, 286 makes some floweret, 504 me eyes, O, 872 of all the bonny buds that, 612 on the head, a helmet for a, 1130 on whom I please, 49 out you bugles, 945
  perhaps may turn his, 293 place to, 868
  remember thy swashing, 77 roses and white lilies, 121 sit by my fire and, 374 softly down the valley, 795 some more, s'pose she, 712 stormy winds do, 328 strike the, 911
  the man down, 944
  the trumpet to arms, 271
  thou winter wind, 50 through life like a breeze, 1022 upon me so wild, wind, 557 when the stormy winds do, 115 wind come wrack, 88 winds and crack your cheeks, 98
  you out, I will, 559
Blows a man up like a bladder, 62 and buffets of the world, 86 and goes, 871
  and knocks, apostolic, 142
  as ever it has blown, 996 feather for each wind that, 56 from diverse points, 1136
  meanest flower that, 302 no man to good, ill wind, 17, 65 noise of falling, 622 of circumstance, 468 of sound, heal the, 451 skeptic, 622
  so red the rose, 1133
  soft the zephyr, 244

Blows the coals, works and, 1086
  when zephyr gently, 211
  where noble manners veil defect, 556
Bloweth where it listeth, the wind, 1244
Blowing a noise of tongues and deeds, 462 and snoring, 931
  furious winter, 958 loudly in dreams by night, 1082 martial sounds, 148 of winds, mist and the, 941 straight, wind down stream is, 674 the ringlet from the braid, 465 Blown about the globe, 773 flower that once has, 1134 his fill, when the gust hath, 161 over the heavens, 947 them all away, wind has, 759 through the Conchimarian horns, 432 with restless violence, 36 with wind of criticism, 238
Blude-reid wine, drinking the, 316
Bludgeonings of chance, under the, 692
Bludso's ghost went up alone, 605
Blue above and blue below, 350 all the time a-feelin', 730
  all's, 492
  Alsatian mountains, 582 amid the grass, a bit of, 756 and gold, clad in, 288 and purple hollows, 710 are my hands, 1195 bonnets, 588
  brief and frail and, 988
  Canaries, off the, 544 coat red breeches, 321 colour a source of delight, 532 comes to earth, 701 coming into the, 385 crowned with, 701 darkly beautifully, 322 depths of, 442 doubted truth in, 1034
  ethereal sky, 194 eyes blue, kept their, 959 eyes of unholy, 335
  eyes sought the west, 306 eyes the greenest of things, 632 faded coat of, 579
  for hopes, 664 fragmentary, 868
  gentle cousin, 385
  grappling in the central, 464 haze of the pine-woods, 751 heaven's height, in the, 701 heaven's own, 372 in eyes as awful as in stockings, 430 inns of molten, 584 is but a mist, 867 is the quaker-maid, 817
  Italian lake, my, 953
  Juniata, waters of the, 406 lake brims her cup, 760 lights burn, 639 little tent of, 722 meagre hag, 158
  my prospects all look, 622
  no distance looking, 391
  O, 1199 of all the ships upon the, 622 of day, beneath the, 743 of halcyon seas, 760 of the sky, black in the, 568 old Nankin, 650
  on the high bright, 876
Blue, other skies be just as, 625 Presbyterian true, 142 promontory with trees, 105 ran the flash across, 493 roses gather her, 784 sea swinging, 937 serge, beneath your old, 878 serge, sees my old, 964 sky bends over all, 315 sky did never melt, 296 sky over it, 869 something borrowed something, 1068 soul that's feelin', 684
  speedwell's darling, 469 stars in the firmament, 433 summer skies are darkly, 418 the fresh the ever free, the, 350 their hands are, 498
  tide's low susurrus, 570

  no canon of the social code, 736 of day, eyes the, 37 of day, heard a bird at, 933 of day, lark mounting at, 300 of the wave, 362
  off from that entanglement, 1087
  on hill and plain, 702 on the beach, never shall, 609 on the lips while meeting, 431 our promises to pay, 348 out and go mad, 882 out in little time, storm will, 183 out into a bitter cry, 694 out, let us, 692
  the glass, still shall you, 825 the hearts of kith and kin, 874 the legs of time, 451
  the sword, 952
  their eggs at the smaller end, 191 thy word, make thee, 1125 until the day, 1236 up housekeeping, when you, 640 up the night and make it beautiful, 566 up, when we, 881
  where billows never, 187
  you may shatter, you may, 336
Breaks a butterfly upon a wheel, 213 Breaks forth in strange eruptions, 62 his birth's invidious bar, 468 his magic chains at curfew time, 158 no bones, a jest, 237 through a gloom of clouds, 197 Breakers, dangerous, of the Euxine, 360 of ordered bounds, 757
  wantoned with thy, 355
Breakfast, contentment that comes with, 1012 on lion's lip, 67
  project a scheme for her, 203 with appetite you have, 73 Breakfast-table, national, 505 newspaper at your, 415
  well-provisioned, 422
Breakfast-tables of people indifferent to press, 804 Breaking flood, murmur of the, 679 of day in the lone east, 869 sleep that knows not, 308 waves dashed high, 370
Break-o'-day in a boozing ken, 710
Breast, arm the obdured, 150 at thy charitable, 951 baby at my, 105
  bind the motto to thy, 1173 blush upon thy, 586 cruel spike impaled his, 586 dare sail upon her patient, 1103 earth's half-shielded, 586 eternal in the human, 207 fair as thine ideal, 354 feeble woman's, 303 forward, marched, 494 friendly and comforting, 693 from my brain and from my, 846 hairy, 858 heart within your, 1008 hold me to your deep, 619 in her, the wave of life, 390 in some corner of the, 581 in some quiet, 687
  keep alive in your, 268 knock the, 157 marble of her snowy, 145 monuments upon my, 374 my fair love's ripening, 385
  no, shall know, 943 of doves, soft as the, 939 of her gown, 421
  of the waters is ploughed, 712 on her white, 212 on the quiet earth's, 523 on thy, to be borne, 355
  one master-passion in the, 208 panther caged within my, 943 peace within my, 840
  reddened all his, 681 render back from out thy, 359
  robin's, gleameth, 586 round his, the ripples break, 386 round its, the rolling clouds, 251 sleeping on her, 369 soothe the savage, 193 straying to find the, 548
  tamer of the human, 243 that gives the rose, into the, 575
  the stiller sea, must, 882 the swelling tide, first to, 603 thinking of it on her, 683 thy, encloseth my poor heart, 71 told to her mutual, 328 trembles in the, 306 truth hath a quiet, 59
  two hands upon the, 567
  upon thy Saviour's, 666
Breast, weariness may toss him to my, 136 where learning lies, 217 whose glory was their dream, 879 withstood with dauntless, 245 wonderful grass upon your, 553
Breasts are orbs of heavenly frame, 27 beat their manly, 761
  brown, 979
  must suckle slaves, 359 oppose gallant, 1100 that heave, 763 the blows of circumstance, 468
  the keen air, 249
  the ocean-furrows, he, 570 within our, this jewel lies, 226
Breast-high amid the corn, 390
Breast-knot gay, scarlet, 573
Breastplate of faith and love, 1247 what stronger, 69
Breath, a transitory, 504
  all incense, morn with, 353 and finer spirit, 295 away, able to take his, 490 bated, and whispering humbleness, 45 blew back, 585
  boldest held his, 328 brief as the taking, 961 brightness in our, 903
  by the gate of, 631
  call back the fleeting, 244 can make them, 250 content with their short, 729 divine, wafted by, 473 down and out of, 63 draught of a, 362 esteem and love preserve our, 1040 eulogy's blandest, 541 extend a mother's, 213 fail sun and, 533
  faith hath a fleeting, 761 for lack of, 157
  for the whole tune, 745 grown grey from thy, 631 has produced, 250 heaven's, smells wooingly, 85 her first-born's, 362 history held to your, 1027 hot and cold with the same, 1077 hour of, 857
  hurricane's sultry, 554
  I'll taunt ye with my latest, 447 in our mouth, 780
  in steel, thou set, 1013
  in the drawing of a, 764 is a ware that will not keep, 742 is never shaken, whose, 937 kept his, to cool his pottage, 1119 life of mortal, 436 lightly draws its, 295
  like caller air, 270 may destroy, a, 250
  merry London gave me, 746
  most breathes, where, 108 of decay, in the moist, 575 of eternal morning, 583 of flowers is sweeter in the air, 111 of God, his life a, 506
  of heaven, 264
  of ice, blooms o'er, 642 of kindness, with the, 567 of kings, princes the, 284 of life, 154 of men away, takes the, 429 of morn, sweet is the, 152 of power, fame is the, 728 of the multitude, musty, 750

Breath of the wind, 867 of twilight, when the, 809 one mighty, 337
  open at thy, 626 pauses of one's dying, 534 perfume of her, 421 places of my, 947
  regular as infant's, 317 rides on the posting winds, 105 say beneath my, 1031 seemed waste of, 794 shapen by my, 756
  sighed out its little, 746 sons of God yield up their, 560 spare your, 1119, 1141, 1154 summer's, 659
  summer's ripening, 78
  Swede with alcoholic, 1064 tempestuous, 629
  till time lose, 718 to the last moment of his, 252 to the latest, 209 true to your last, 875
  twilight hour of, 802 upon the flame, God's, 1186 utter sweet, 43
  we draw, unnoticed as the, 780 we waste our, 998 weary of, 392
  what chisel could cut, 57
  wit is the only, 996 with one, attunes the spheres, 514 with toil of, 319
  with uninforming, 905
  wither at the north-wind's, 370
Breaths, in thoughts not, 506
Breathe beneath the sun, while we, 469 free, yearning to, 694 his better doth not, 71 his flame, 372
  if such there, 307
  in England, slaves cannot, 264 not his name, 334
  our evening prayer, when we, 502
  our native air, to, 1010 prayer for all who lie beneath, 782 the years, you can, 938 thoughts that, 244 to God a prayer, I, 517 were life, as tho' to, 464
Breathes a prayer for him, 405 all Arabia, 212
  all's-well, he who, 651 must suffer, who, 190 out contagion to this world, 95 statue that, 609
  there the man, 307
  upon a bank of violets, 53 with human breath, no life that, 462
Breathed, a song into the air, 829 a word, most gifted poet that ever, 516 first true gentleman that ever, 115 its killing chills, 703 the long long night away, 473 upon dead bodies, 415
Breathers of this world, 108
Breathing, can refrain from, 247 cease, 922
  clay, life but, 223 closer is He than, 467 household laws, 298
  low, when the winds are, 368 of the common wind, 297
  soft and low, 390
Breathing through the night, 390 time of day, 97
Breathing-time, peace only a, 258
Breathless vigil, kept a, 985
  we flung us, 944
  with adoration, 297
Brebis tondue, à la, 138, 242
Bred at Edinborough, men, 228

  London, is falling down, 1019 of asses, 1092 of blue, 439
  of Sighs, on the, 353 of time, meet we on the, 543 our myth, that great, 1013
  that arched the flood, 409 to the moon, build a, 515 world is merely a, 1219
Bridges, buildings and, 1019
Bridge-head, I come up to the, 1003 Bridle, between the spur and the, 138 reins a shake, gae his, 287 taxed, 314
Bridled, millions ready saddled and, 409 saddled and, to be ridden, 169 Brief and frail and blue, you are, 988 as a dragon-fly's repose, 529 as flower falling, 961 as the lightning, 42 as the taking, 961 as time becomes more, 1214 as water falling, 961 delight eternal quiet, 759 even as bright, 368

  have little care that life is, 757

Brief in expression, 332 is life, ah, 607
  let me be, 91
  life is here our portion, 518 period of sleep, a nap is a, 721 since life is, 718
  words when actions wait, 644
Briefest moment yours or mine, 840
Brier and beech and lime, 914
  leafless by my door, 629
Briers, how full of, this working-day world, 48 array, ignorant faith and, 878 array, mine in, 852 as a berry, 844 as wine, 951

  as young diamonds, 178 birds that eternally flew, 673 blue squills, 856 bowl of brass is beautiful, 1020 boys mention, when, 966 brief even as, 368
  brokenly, like moonbeams, 573
  candle of the Lord, 393 company of heaven, 955 consummate flower, 153 countenance of truth, 162 dark with excessive, 151 day is done, 105
  day will fill, 643
  day will not cannot last, 516 enchanting stars shine pure, 517 eye, more harmony in her, 168 faces of children, see the, 643 gold ring on her wand, 334 hopes yet to find me, for the, 543 hour to waste, nor suffer one, 474
  I saw her eye was, 387
  if their faces suddenly became, 1165 in hue, quaint in form and, 569 in thy eyes, 579
  is the ring of words, 703 jewels of the mine, 370
  lily grow, have you seen a, 119 metropolis of flowers, 756 midsummer day, one, 605 need to make it, 718
  nimble of the marrow-nerve, 576 now and here, 1051
  or cloudy weather, in, 612 or good, creature not too, 299 particular star, 53
  reversion in the sky, 217 searchlights of science, 809

  sun of heaven, 74
  suns may scorch, 404
  sweet day so, 135
  the pure the beautiful the, 665
Bright the sunshine as to-day, 581 things come to confusion, 42 to-day, let me keep, 863 tragic thing, glory is that, 585 transient chaste as morning dew, 202 umbrellas in the rain, 995 waters meet, where the, 335 with calm delight, 610 young lady named, 844
Brighten as I draw near, 626 as they take flight, blessings, 202 Brightens, frost prairie, 565
  how the wit, 211
Brightening face, Aurora shows her, 225 to the last, prospects, 250 Brighter brain, with, 857
  clime, in some, 273
  in renown than thy past, 407 ray, emits a, 252 than its own, kindle a, 643 the glitter, 1102
  worlds around me breaking, 396 Brightest arts, fashions, 251 blade grows dim with rust, 453 eyes have brighter shone, 432 fair, loved the, 239 fell, though the, 88
  flashes in the world of thought, 542 heaven of invention, 66 into dawn, breaks, 1082 meanest of mankind, 208
Bright-eyed fancy, 244
  science watches, 244
Bright-flaming heat-full fire, 1147
Brightly smile and sweetly sing, 365 Brightness break, your sudden, 958 falls from the air, 816 in our breath, 903 lost all her original, 149 of the day, 516
  spring has less of, 459
  waned, 1025
Bright-plumaged rhythms, 855
Brignall banks are wild and fair, 309
Brilliance, no conceit of, 1008
Brilliant and bold, 1180
  chief, irregularly great, 425

Brine, oh give me the flashing, 502 test of, 859
Bring a horse to the river, 138 again, kisses, 37
  all sweet sounds together, 634 all to the woman, 1249 another cup, 441
  back her heart, 791 back the faded bays, 947 back those midnights, 857 bad news, never good to, 104 diadems and fagots, 410 down fruit unheard-of, 818 down my gray hairs, 1224 dramatist your pen, 658 forth enough, 394
Bring forth, what a day may, 1234 fresh showers, I, 366
  good news, seemed to, 986 hither the fatted calf, 1243 home knowledge, 237 home wealth of the Indies, 237 immortality to light, 549 in a new word, to, 1145 in sight that picture fair, 687 its task, each day will, 591 me flesh bring me wine, 1044 me forth for all Greeks, didst, 1083 me honey of Hymettus, 601 me my bow of burning gold, 282 me to-night a lotus, 639 me your tears, 335
  my pain to end, 987
  my tribute to his grave, 307 no more vain oblations, 1236 novelist your notebook, 658 our friend exceeding near, 587 our years to an end, 1231 sad thoughts to the mind, 295 slander where it cannot bless, 799 so much money as 'twill, 142 sunshine to the lives of others, 750 the dearest face that flies, 674 the light to lighten mortals, 860 the philosophic mind, 301 the summer in your eyes, 908 the sunset near, woods that, 672 their coins each day, 805 them who dare to fly, 1051 thoughts you, 474 to life fresh beauty, 476 to light some kindly word, 888 to their high imagining, 620 us back when a-going wrong, 496 us through, chance will, 547
  whate'er to-day may, 797 you all back, God will, 1252 you coloured toys, when I, 1200 you cowslips in a hat, 983
  you home shoulder-high, 743
  you love and devotion, 826 Brings cool dew in his little bill, 444 forth a mouse, mountain, 180 gladness to eyes which fail, 397 her knitting, 1181 him again to our religion, 110 in some boats, fortune, 106 me to an end, in a moment, 195 palpable access of knowledge, 299
